Special Train for Geese.
Traffic in the Birds Reaches Enormous Proportions in Europe.

The domestic geese held about the same honored place in the nutritive economy of Germany that the more delicately flavored and patrician turkey does in that of the United States. It is the standard luxury of the German people, and during nine months of the year forms the principal feature of the table at festive as well as every-day entertainments.

Although every village has its flock of geese, and notwithstanding the great numbers that are bred and fattened as farms along the banks of rivers, ponds and small lakes, the home-grown supply falls far short of the constant demand, leaving a large annual deficit to be filled by importations, which come mainly from Russia.

The season for this traffic is now at its highest, and the receipts of Russian geese at the Kummelsburg station, in the southeastern quarter of Berlin, average about 15,000 daily. A special goose train of from 15 cars on ordinary days to 35 or 40 on Monday brings the birds from the Russian frontier. The cars are specially built and rigged for this service and carry each about 1,500 geese.

Immediately after their arrival, the whole train load is inspected by a corps of sanitary officials. The fat ones are then distributed among the dealers, mainly market men, while the others—and these include the vast majority—are sent to be fattened at farms and feeding establishments in the outlying provinces.

The inspection is exceedingly rigid. If a single goose dies en route or is found sick with any disease that can be communicated to others, the carload is placed in quarantine for a period of eight days. Should another geese die during this period, the whole lot is kept in quarantine eight days longer at a cost of about 3,000 marks ($476), whereby the loss to the owner becomes so enormous that he is driven to the most extreme care and precaution in all future operations of the same kind.

This is the real object of the system—to make the penalty of introducing diseased birds so severe as to render such practice ruinous to the perpetrators.

In certain cases, where the evidence of neglect or infectious disease is not conclusive, the lot is taken to the city abattoir and killed under supervision of the sanitary police, after, which such as are found to be free from disease are released for sale at a special auction held in the central market hall, whence the trade name "antion geese," which applies to those which have been slaughtered in the abattoir, is used. Those which show no trace of disease but have been unavoidably injured in transit and are otherwise in good condition are called "bracken" and are sold to certain dealers who retail them for reduced prices at a special market beside the great market square, where the poorest, and most frugal, Berliner can find something adapted to his purse.

The aggregate wholesale traffic in geese at Berlin amounts annually to nearly $2,000,000. To the ordinary observer, all geese are very much alike; but the expert dealers here divide the Russian birds into 12 different breeds, the categories of which now command in the Berlin market, according to species, age, size and condition, wholesale prices varying from 43 to 60 cents each, though the prices advance with those of other poultry as the season lengthens from autumn into winter, the great climax of the trade is just before and during the Christmas holidays, when geese are in every form, from the plain "Gansebraten" of the laboring classes to the plate de foie gras of the epicure, dominates the tables of the festive season.

Some Statistics About Tea.
Li Hung Chang's Brands—The Manner of Treating the Leaves.

As to tea making, one fact seems to have been established by all connoisseurs: The teapot should be warmed before the leaves are put into it. Pouring hot water into it for a moment accomplishes that. The tea is generally conceded that the water should be used just on the instant, before it has suffered losses from evaporation. Without question the mixture should not be allowed to boil. There may be a question of whether or not coffee should be allowed to boil, but there is none with reference to tea. Five to ten minutes are allowed for steeping in some warmer corner of the stove, after which the tea is ready for the cups.

In general tea does not range in price much above $1 a pound. But, in spite of this, there are teas that to the connoisseur are fabulously rare and fine. Sir, diplomatic old Li Hung Chang, visiting the Occident years ago, left a trail of scented teas through the British islands such as gave to England's favored ones a new conception of the plant. Gladstone was one who attested to the virtues of these magic leaves.

Much of the finest tea grown in China is consumed in that country, even there commanding a high price. Little of the "pekoe tip" tea finds its way out of the kingdom, and then it comes as a souvenir and not as a commodity. This is the bud-did tip of the tender branches of the plant, and they are bound together in little bundles.

The commercial grades of tea may come from the same bush—the pekoe tip being first choice. Next in order are orange pekoe, pekoe, souching and congon, all representing the stage of growth of the leaves.

Green tea is the leaf plucked and dried quickly and treated to a coating of Prussian blue in the drying. Black teas may come from the same shrubs, but they are fermented before drying, losing much of the undesirable tannic acid in the process. The great bulk of the tea imported to America is classed as "low middlings," and much of it has been "doctored" to meet market demands.

The tea production of the world has been estimated at 700,000,000 pounds annually, of which China produces 350,000,000 pounds. In 1900, Japan 110,000,000 and Java 25,000,000 pounds. Of this vast crop Great Britain alone consumes 250,000,000 pounds, or more than seven pounds to each man, woman and child in the kingdom.

From the beginning of tea drinking in the United Kingdom in 1665, when the pulpit, and King, took sides against it, the habit has grown amazingly. Someone has remarked the fact that "to be in tea" in that country does not close May-fair to the tradesman unless he should be so obtuse as to sell sugar alone. Yet Hahnemann, founder of the great school of medicine, once wrote of the tea merchant as "an immortal member of society, lying in wait for men's purses and lives."

Character in Teeth.
What Their Size and Color Indicate—The "New American Shade."

It has been said that one can tell the color and shape of a man's teeth, when his mouth is shut, by merely taking note of his complexion for the natural. The smoker.

There actually is some affinity between the color of one's teeth and the character of one's complexion, but such an analogy would probably only receive popular recognition when presented in individuals of marked type.

An experienced dentist can, however, often determine the shape and color of his patient's teeth without ever asking him to open his mouth.

In a person having red or auburn hair, blue eyes and a fair or florid complexion the teeth would be creamy, inclined to yellowness and brilliant and translucent.

On the other hand, teeth of pale, dull or muddy color, with no transparency, will be met with among people of pallid complexion, accompanied by sandy hair and light gray eyes.

The bilious temperament with its black, curly hair and dark, sunken, lumpy complexion, presents teeth of a strong yellow color, rather opaque and frequently marked with traverse lines.

Teeth of a pearly blue or gray, of marked transparency, and rather long and sharp, are nearly always associated with a delicate transparent complexion.

When obtaining artificial substitutes for their lost teeth, patients, and particularly lady patients, are prone to desire them of unnatural whiteness and regularity, to combat which weakness often places the dentist in a position of some delicacy.

On the other hand, there are others who are sticklers for the natural. The smoker has a marked predilection for teeth of a khaki hue, and a dentist tells of a patient who recently asked him for "the new American shade, with gold spots," of course innocently referring to the translucent practice of even filling artificial teeth with gold, before fixing them in the human mouth.

Murder and Arson.
Two Old Women Killed and Burned by Robbers.

Two old women, Violet J. Colley, aged 75, and her niece, Jane Cath, aged 71, lived alone in a house on Main thoroughfare, five miles from Charlotte, N. J., were Tuesday murdered, robbed and their bodies burned. The old women were generally reported to be wealthy. It is known that they had a good deal of money. They had lived a retired life for years, and seldom ventured away from home, not even to the city, except when business compelled a visit.

The house which they occupied stood within fifty feet of the roadside. Near it was a small building which they used as a kitchen, and in which they kept their stores. People passing along the road Wednesday morning noticed that the small house had been burned. There was no sign of life about the place, and an investigation showed that the dwelling had been ransacked from top to bottom, indicating that a most thorough search had been made for the money which the old women were supposed to have kept in the house. Bureaus, cabinets and desks had been opened and their contents strewn about. Every nook and corner of the dwelling bore evidence of having been searched. In the ashes of the building, which the burned bodies of Miss Colley and her niece were found.

The supposition is that the old women were attacked while they were at supper, after which their residence was sacked and the house in which their bodies lay was fired. For years past they had been accumulating money, and probably had $1,200 saved up. There is absolutely no clue to the perpetrators of the deed.

Spread of Typhoid Fever.
That typhoid fever is a practically preventable disease has been definitely settled. This conclusion was reached through frequent tracing cases to their source, and almost invariably it has been found that the spread of the disease is due to carelessness and not necessarily to conditions favorable to the general development of the typhoid fever germ into the full grown, dangerous bacilli. Nevertheless, recent investigations made by Mr. Labege, the Medical Health officer of Montreal, are of considerable interest, and afforded a striking illustration of how far reaching are evil consequences attending carelessness in the matter of food and water supplies.

On October 25th seven cases of typhoid fever were discovered in one institution in Montreal, and it was speedily proven that all were contracted from contaminated milk purchased from a particular farm. Within a few days twenty more cases were traced to the same source. A visit to the farm disclosed the fact that one of the employees had been milking the cows while suffering from a mild attack of typhoid, and while other members of his family were suffering from the same complaint. There is no food product more susceptible to contamination than milk and the result was numerous cases in the city where the milk from this particular farm was consumed. The history of this attack of typhoid in Montreal is the more interesting from the fact that this is not the time of the year when the disease is supposed to be prevalent.

WHAT WOULD YOU GIVE?—To be cured of catarrh? If you or your friends have this disease, you know how disagreeable it is. Its symptoms are inflamed eyes, throbbing temples, ringing noises in the ears, headache, capricious appetite, and constant discharges of mucus. Fortunately its cure is not a question of what you will give, but what you will take. If you will take Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great constitutional remedy, which thoroughly purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood, you may expect to be completely and permanently cured. The good blood which Hood's Sarsaparilla makes, reaching the delicate passages of the mucous membrane, soothes and rebuilds the tissues and ultimately cures all symptoms of catarrh.

POOR PA'S SHARE.
Clara (arranging the Christmas presents): "We'll put mamma's pearl necklace here."
Dora: "And Mabel's diamond earrings here."
Clara: "And George's gold watch here."
Dora—And Edith's diamond bracelets. What shall we do with them?
Clara: "Lay them on the piano alongside of our Christmas card for Pa."

THAT THROBBING HEADACHE.—Would quickly leave you, if you used Dr. King's New Life Pills. Thousands of sufferers have proved their matchless merit of Sick and Nervous Headaches. They make pure blood and build up your health. Only 25 cents. Money back if not cured. Sold by F. P. Green druggist.

A Pin in the Appendix.

Mrs. Frank A. Garrison, of Williamsport, was operated on in this city Saturday for appendicitis. When the appendix was cut open a badly corroded pin was found therein. It is supposed that Mrs. Garrison swallowed the pin a long time ago. It had entered the appendix at the opening and had started to work its way out at the other end, when the point of the pin caused the irritation that made the operation necessary.

The human heart is like a graphophone cylinder, and the sweetest records are often cut by the stylus of pain.

SPREADS LIKE WILDFIRE.—When things are "the best" they become "the best selling." Abraham Hare, a leading druggist, of Belleville, O., writes: "Electric Bitters are the best selling bitters I have handled in 20 years." You know why? Most diseases begin in disorders of stomach, liver, kidneys, bowels, and blood and nerves. Electric Bitters tonify the stomach, regulate the liver, kidneys and bowels, purifies the blood, hence cures multitudes of maladies. It builds up the entire system. Puts new life and vigor into any weak, sickly, rundown man or woman. Price 50 cents. Sold by F. P. Green druggist.

Dear City, Nov., April 1, 1900.
Gentlemen:—I must say in regard to GRAIN-O-GRAMS—It is not better or healthier. We have used it for years in making a great coffee drinker. He was taken sick and the doctor said coffee was the cause of it, and told us to use GRAIN-O-GRAMS. My dear friend, I do not like it at all, but would not be without it. My brother has been well ever since we started to use it. Yours truly, Lewis Saxon. 45-27

The Boxers of China.

Are attempting to solve a gigantic problem, but they are going about it in the wrong way and will never succeed. Some people, in this country, seem to think that they can give a puzzle in their hands in selecting a location for a home. They will certainly go about it in the wrong way unless they inspect the beautiful farming country on the line of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway in Marinette county, Wisconsin, where the crops are of the best, work plenty, fine markets, excellent climate, pure, soft water, land good cheap and on long time. Why rent a farm when you can buy one for less than you pay for rent? Address C. E. Rollins, Land Agent, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

THE TESTIMONY OF BELLEVILLE PEOPLE STANDS THE TEST.

The test of time is what tells the tale. "A new broom sweeps clean" but will it wear well in what interests most. The public soon find out when misrepresentations are made, and mere adjectives will stand the test of time. Belleville people appreciate merit, and many months ago local citizens publicly endorsed Don's Kidney Pills. They do so still. Would a citizen make a statement which follows unless convinced that the article was just as represented? A cure that is his is the kind that everyone who suffers from kidney ailments is looking for.

Mr. James Rine of 2 Thomas street, employed in the banking business, says: "I can speak as highly now of Don's Kidney Pills, as I did years ago and my case is pretty good evidence that I was cured, as they are not temporary. I have not had any of the severe pains in my back since I used Don's Kidney Pills while before I suffered intensely. I used to be so bad that I could not sit on my shoes and could hardly drag myself around. Though I have had slight touches of backache it never amounted to much. I have recommended Don's Kidney Pills to hundreds of people and I know of those who have had the greatest relief from suffering by using them." I can say they are a reliable and permanent in their effects."
