A party of glass blowers were here last week, and did considerable business. Their exhibitions were well attended, the admittance fee being very liberal and every visitor receiving a glass prize. Of course the children flocked there in large numbers.

What does the pike company mean by allowing the bridge over Penns creek, almost in the centre of the village, to remain in its present dangerous condition. Nearly one half of the bridge on one side is entirely exposed, the railing having been broken down and nothing remains but an open space, and in this scandalous condition it has been for several days. Is the company waiting for an accident?

Col. T. B. Jamison, one of our esteemed and returned on Monday evening last. He reports vast quantities of snow west of the Alleghenies. Wagons and buggies are seen only in stables or the museums. All conveyances are on runners and have been for and the trip evidently did him good.

The Greenland blasts down this valley for a day or two last week, were forcible reminders of the trite adage "as the day's lengthen the cold strengthens", for here it strengthened with a vengeance. The rearing of coon-cats is a coming industry. Coon-cats are worth today from five dollars to one nundred dollars apiece, and the supply does not begin to meet the demand. Exceptional speci mens have been known to fetch two hundred or even three hundred dollars. At the present time all of them come from Maine, simply for the reason that the breed is peculiar as yet to that State. Their popularity is such that the business of breeding them has been rapidly growing during the last few years in that part of the country, and one shipper, not very far from Bar Harbor, exported in 1899 no fewer than three thousand of the Strange to say, there are comparatively few people south or west of New England who know what a coon-cat is. If you ask that question "down in Maine," however, the citizens will seem surprised at your ignorance, and will ex-plain to you, in a condescending way, that the creature in question is half raccoon—the descendant of "a cross between a coon and a common cat." Coon-cats have been recognized as a dis tinct breed in Maine for so long that the memory of the oldest inhabitant runs not back to their beginning. You will find several of them in almost any village in that part of the world .- From the Saturday Evening Post.
