The Power of the Press.

The proprietors of the 'Nashville Tennessean' are energetically pushing their claims toward the city of Nashville. This is natural, for any newspaper is a good deal like a woman; and since a woman is an excellent judge of her own or another's utility, it is not surprising that the 'Tennessean' is endeavoring to draw Nashville to itself. Nashville is a much better city than were the proprietors disposed to say; and it is not surprising that they should think of moving to it. Nashville is a much better city than were the proprietors disposed to say; and it is not surprising that they should think of moving to it.

Page 2

Victoria Sleeps Peacefully Away.

The Queen proposed settling the case of the widows and orphans of her subjects by the most peaceful means. In the course of the negotiations, her Majesty was asked if she would be willing to sign the proposed treaty. She replied that she had already signed the treaty and would be willing to sign it again. The Queen's statement was received with great satisfaction.

Page 3

The Times of the House of Commons.

The Speaker informed the House that the Committee of the Whole House had finished its business and that the House would now adjourn. The House adjourned.

Page 4

Obligatory Summer in Democracy.

The annual summer visit to Washington is an obligation upon every American citizen. It is the duty of every citizen to spend a portion of the summer in the capital of the country, and to take part in the business of the government. It is the duty of every citizen to spend a portion of the summer in the capital of the country, and to take part in the business of the government.