Games That are Useful.

How to Make the Little Ones Healthy and Happy. Exercising Tiny Muscles.—Pastimes for Children that are Especially Beneficial for those Who Live

The natural form of activity for the child is play. In order to make exercise as beneficial as possible, it should be in such a form as to seem like play to the child. A child will get restless under a clock work drill, and do the exercise with only half the force and attention, but if he is playing some games he will play with all his might, unconsciously working one or more groups of muscles.

A baby manages to kick and creep and get considerable gymnastics, into his small life, and as he grows older, if he is a country child, he will find plenty of exercise running in the fields after butterflies playing ball, skating and coasting. A city child, however, has little or no exercise for he cannot be allowed to roam the streets, the school yards are often not large enough, or he has so much studying do at home after leaving the school Now in the case of the city child, rames should be taught him which 'v with his friends, in his own certain sowing, reaping, carrying meal to the L. raking hay and all sorts of amusements in wolved in farming. Children will think of these plays themselves, if you once suggest it to them.

A child needs balance movements. Country children do a lot of these. They are always balancing on fences, walking on the rails of the railroad track. Of course he cannot do this in cities, so suggest that he take hopping exercises, let gest that he take hopping exercises, let him play he is a toad or a frog and see the pounding of the flood we pounding of the flood we pounding of the flood we pound the flood we have a set to be a the neck strong, hus giving the child a military ge when he is standing. Of course, e little games I have suggested are for hall children. As a child grows older he finds plenty of games for himself, but it is systematic and regular exercise, that he needs. Spinning top, playing marbles or jack-knife is doing him no special good in the way of muscular action. These games of which I write apply especially to girls, for as I have said, as boys grow older they get more exercise than > Girls are often allowed to play with boys, and how they do enjoy it! Why should they not climb trees, run and jump, etc.? These games should be taught boys and girls alike. Ruskin, in his "Sesame and Lilies," believes in bringing boys and girls up together in both education and play, and I think all the doctors recommend it. There are a few games for the home gymnasium. Games of ball are of the first importance. They set in motion the mental and physical forces together. A child in playing thus has to observe quickly, to calculate and judge correctly. They exact uninterrupted attention, and thus these games teach a child to consencrate his mind at the same time he is exercising his whole body.

WANDERBALL.

This is a German ball game. It is play-'ed with two balls. A common tennis ball is the best to use, or bean bags may be used in place of balls. The players form a large circle, not standing too close to each other. The balls or bags are then divided between two players, who are separated from each other at regular intervals. At a given signal one throws a ball in one direction of the circle and the other throws a ball in the opposite direction. The balls being in motion, each player has to take care that the his neighbor, but after he has thrown it he must turn around at once in order to be ready to catch the ball coming from the opreposite direction and to throw that on. The object of the game is to avoid two balls coming into one hand. If it does the one who has the two must step out of the circle, which is also the penalty of any one must game is continued with increasing swiftness in throwing un-til there are only two players left.

KING'S BALL. The children choose a king; a big circle is driven on the floor with a piece of chalk.
The thing goes to the centre, the ball on the the circle. The king stoops, quickly picking up the ball and saying, "The king takes the ball." Then they all run and the king throws the ball, trying to hit one of the children. The one hit becomes the king, and they all go back to the circle saying. again. If the king does not hit any one he must go back again to the centre. The throwing of the ball, the running and dodging exercises every muscle in the child's body, and is better than giving him tiresome exercise for the different parts of the body. Tiresome, not because of the muscular exertion, but because the child does not enjoy them. CURTAIN BALL. Another good game is "Curtain Ball."

A line is stretched a little higher than the children's heads. A curtain or a sheet is hung on this. An even number of chilthrown over the curtain, from side to side.

It must be caught each time. Every time the ball touches the floor it scores one for dren are on each side; then the ball is the other side. This game requires quick

There are many games which may be played in rooms, and which do not require much running, at the same time making a child exercise his muscles sufficiently.

Blowing a feather over a sheet, or around a room makes him expand his chest, inflate his lungs and developed his neck and waist muscles. Blind Man's Bluff is another good game, though an old

In games that are considered "gymnastic games" the whole body should be exercised. The legs are to sustain the body, and the arms are exercised in handling and throwing an object. In the bending and twisting of the trunk and limbs the vital organs receive such exercise as will make them healthy and strong. The game should cultivate the different energies, agility, physical judgment and manly courage. The game should be easy to learn, and it should not be rough.

Phoenix Reservoir is a World Beater. Enormous Dam Will be Constructed to Supply Arizona's Arid District.

The biggest reservoir in the world is to be constructed near Phoenix. The govern-ment, which is to build it, will be confronted with one of the most formidable pieces of engineering, owing to the peculiar topographical features of the country. H. G. Heisler, a hydrographer of the United States Geological Survey, has arrived from Washington Washington and commenced preliminary surveys and soundings for bed rock at the Buttes and at San Carlos on the Gila river, near Phœnix. It is a Federal enterprise, rflies or birds, or and the reservoir, when completed, is cal-exercise that will culated to furnish water for thousands of acres of land now barren deserts, relieving a tribe of 8000 Indians, who are now suffering famine and destitution, and to create thousands of new homes for white settlers.

Six King Edwards, so Far.

Queen's Eldest Son Will Be the Seventh to Reign.

There have been six King Edwards of England, and the Prince of Wales will be King Edward VII. Edward I, son of Henry III, was born at Westminister June, 17, 1239; was crowned August 19, 1274 and died July 7, 1308. He reigned thirty-three years.

Edward II, his son, was born April 25, 1284, and was crowned February 23, 1308. He was deposed by Parliament January 7, 1327, and was murdered at Berkeley Castle on September 21 following. He had reigned nineteen years, lacking two weeks. Edward III, son of the above, was born at Windsor November 13, 1312, was proclaimed King January 25, 1327, and crowned February 1, 1328. He died June 21, 1377, having reigned forty nine years. Edward IV, son of Richard, the Duke of York, succeeded the deposed Henry VI, and the War of the Roses in the former reign was continued. He was born at Rouen April 29, 1441, proclaimed on March 4, 1461, and crowned on June 28 of that year. He died at Westminster April 9, 1483. He reigned twenty two years.

Edward V, his son, was born in the sanctuary at Westminster November 4. 1470. He was murdered June 22, 1483, soon after his accession, with his only brother, the Duke of York, in the Tower, by order of his uncle, the Protector Gloucester, who became Richard III.

Edward VI was the son of Henry VIII.

He was born October 12, 1537; crowned February 25, 1547, and died July 6, 1553, at the age of sixteen years. For 348 years there has been no other Edward.

As Eager as Before.

She was at a party. He had not yet arrived, but she was momentarily expecting him. The hum of conversation through the room had no significance for her; all her faculties were bent on the front door. Every time it opened, at every step in the hall, she would start, while her face would flush and her eyes light up with feverish expectation. Then the color would go b ck to her cheeks, her eyes would dull and her heart sink when another than he came into the room. Finally he arrived and took a seat be side her, and she leaned over his shoulder and joyously murmured:

"My darling! My darling!" She was too happy to say aught more. Ten years later and she again waits. It is in their own home now. His step is on the stoop; he opens the door. She springs quickly to the hall. 'Wipe your boots !" she screams.

In Washington one day Henry Watterson of Kentucky sat in a retired corner in Chamberlin's, drinking high balls, so they say, when Senator Thurston walked over to his table, "What is the matter, Watterson?" he inquired. "You look

"I was thinking," said the great editor, "of the decay of oratory in this country, Years ago we had many notable orators-Clay, Calhoun, Webster and others - but today you can count them on the fingers of one hand. Why, Thurston, I know of but three men in all the United States who are entitled to be called orators."

She Refused Him.

A young man of more book learning than force of character lost the young wife who had toiled to support him, returned to his native town for consolation, and found it. Some months later, she, too passed away, and the sad youth soon appealed to a well known clergyman for assistance in finding a helpmate.

The minister introduced him to a Western girl of health and energy, who the next day received a plaintive note from the widower. He declared that the Lord had made great inroads upon his maritial affections, and now it seemed to be his will that she should repair the breaches of his
