A WEATHER SIGN.

Don't worry 'bout the weather: if the breeze is blowin' cold. The world will yet have blossoms-jest all your arms can hold! An' you'll wonder at our grievin' when the blue sky is unrolled-Don't worry 'bout the weather, oh, my dearie !

Don't worry 'bout the weather : There must still be sun an' rain To freshen up the flowers when they want to bloom again! The lesson of the love o' God to all the world is lain-Don't worry 'bout the weather, oh, my dearie !

Ephrata.

Pennsylvania Town Founded by a Curious Religious Sect.

No town in Pennsylvania has a history which includes so much of what is legen-dary and mystical as Ephrata, situated in the beautiful Cocalico valley.

The original portion, most of which is still standing, though in a most dilapidated condition and fast going into decay through age and neglect, was known as the "Settlement of the Solitary" (Later der Einsamen,) and is often called to this day "Kloster" (cloister.)

Comparatively few people in Pennsylva-nia are familiar with the history of this in-teresting town and of the peculiar people that formed here a religious community so different from any other in the province. Their leader was Conrad Beisel, who was born in Eberbach, on the Neckar, Germany, in April of 1690. He was a poor, ignorant journeyman baker, who thought he had become suddenly chosen by the Deity to become a leader of men.

He came to America and joined the general body of Dunkers, a sect of German Baptists, who, under the leadership of Alexander Mack, emigrated from Holland and Germany in 1723 and settled in Penn-sylvania. Here Beisel, through his devout teachings and spiritual energy, became a conspicuous leader. But gradually a severance took place among the Dunkers and another sect sprang up within the old order.

These were the people who were known later as the Seventh Day Baptists. Their distinct principal, as the name imparts, was that the seventh day and not the first of the week was the true Sabbath, intended to be universally and devoutly observed.

In 1727 the Seventh Day order, under Beisel, wandered into the wilderness and settled here on the banks of the Cocalico. To this settlement they gave the name Ephrata, which is Hebrew for "fruitful" and Beisel became their acknowledged leader.

It was through his efforts that the community, after its removal to Ephrata, became a peculiar society or order whose chief aim was to obtain spiritual regenera-tion and perfection. This resulted in the adoption of a cloister system, together with the rule of the White Friars and the building of a monastery for the members of the sect.

Beisel, not satisfied with their simple form of worship, introduced certain mystical degrees, characteristic of medevial

Among the relics of those old days that still stand are the Saal or worship hall. This is still devoted to its original uses-religious services being held here on the Scriptural Sabbath by the receiver on the

Also the "Brother" and "Sister" ers. houses, two large frame buildings that might have been called the monasteries. Poor families are now allowed to reside here at a very small rental. There are also some smaller houses that were part of the original cloister, no doubt the former residence of Beisel or some other notables.

Directly opposite the creek is a mill which has a decidedly modern appearance, though a stone in the wall bears the legend :

AoMDCCLVI."

The original mill that was built in 1756 by the Baumann family was the first of the two paper mills in the province. It was a paper mill until 1731, when it was sold to private parties and turned into a grist mill. As the improved methods of milling and the growing business demanded increased facilities, steam power and new machinery were introduced, and to meet the further demands of a growing town it was rebuilt on several occasions, until it has now lost its original appearance as an old time Pennsylvania water mill.

In the old burying ground on Mt. Zion, in the tomb of Beisel, can still be seen, along with the graves of many Revolutionary soldiers who found their last resting place in the winter of 1777 and 1778, after the battles of Brandywine and Germantown when the houses of the brotherhood were utilized by the American forces as military hospitals.

Its General Celebration on June 14th is Urged.

The American flag association calls attention to the approach of the 14th of June, the first "Flag Day" in the twentieth century, and urges co-operation on securing a general and patriolic celebration. The 14th of June, says a circular of the association, has come to be considered "Flag Day," because on that day in 1777 Congress ted : "that the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white, that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation." The number of stripes having been increased by the admission of new States, the original thirteen stripes were restored on April 4th, 1818, when it was enacted by Congress. "That from and after the 4th day of July next the flag of the United States be thirteen horizontal stripes, alternate red and white ; that the union be twenty stars, white in a blue field, and that on the admission of a new State into the Union one star be added to the union of the flag; and that such addi-tion take effect on the 4th day of July next succeeding such admission." Since 1818 twenty-five stars of sovereign States have been added to the union, making forty-five in all.

The association earnestly exhorts "our citizens to join in making the celebration of Flag Day an event in the first year of the new century and to see to it that the Stars and Stripes, with all they mean, shall on June 14th, 1901, greet the rising and salute the setting of the sun from every church edifice, school and public building, and also from every private dwelling, however humble, throughout the entire land."

associated with seasickness.

All Ready to Use When Taken from the Earth and Cut Into Cakes.

Wyoming has a soap mine. A deposit of whiteish material, in composite form, containing just enough sulphates, potash and pumice to give gritty essential, has been discovered five miles west of Newcastle in the northeastern part of Wyoming.

The deposit lies in a fissure and dips into the ground like a vein of mineral. The vein, so-called, is fifteen to eighteen feet wide and runs the length of a quarter section, which for twenty years up to date was used as a stock pasture. Next week, probably a building of commodious dimensions, fitted with machinery that will cut the slabs, of mineral soap into sizes for commercial use, will cover a portion of the ground.

The cleanest town in the United States, it is posssible, will be located in this section. It will be free from soot and smoke. For the factory boilers will be heated by petroleum, found nearby, and the soap to keep the place clean is found in such large quantities in the ground and consequently so dirt cheap that men can be kept on the pay roll to do nothing else but look out for dirt spots and quickly remove them.

C. W. Betts, a Denver mining engineer, has occasion recently to visit northeastern Wyoming with E. P. Snow, of Cheyenne, to look up some oil prospects. They came by this deposit. What attracted Mr. Betts' attention was the appearance of a mass that looked like soapsuds. He investigated and to all appearance it was soapsuds. There had been a good rain the night before. This had beat on the deposit in such a manner as to produce the suds. A trial of a chunk of the stuff on suds. A trial of a chunk of the stuff on the hands resulted in determining that nature had there left as good an article of soap to be used for washing paint, polish-ing culinary articles, removing grime and grease from the hands as could be manufactured by the hands of man.

Mr. Betts has plans for developing this unique find and it may be expected that in a short time the markets of the world will field to investigate, and found the supposed scare-crow to be the body of a man. ### Death From a Peculiar Cause.

Walter, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Reib, of Wellsboro, died a few days ago of blood poisoning. While wading a creek he cut one of his feet, which began to swell, the inflammation spreading until the leg was swoolen to three times its normal size. moved. The other limb commenced to swell, and he became so weak that an operation was not deemed advisible. The poison gradually spread through the entire system until he died.
