Faces a Jury for Murder of His Sister Extraordinary Trial Going On In Massachusetts. Deep as the Borden Mystery. May Fosburg Found Shot Through the Heart on the Floor of Her Bedroom in Their Berkshire Hills Home.

One of the most mysterious murder trials that has developed in this country is now going on in the old court house in Pitts-field, Mass., in which Robert Stewart Fosis charged with the murder of his sis ter May.

Robert L. Fosburg and his son compose the contracting firm of Robert L. Fosburg They have built many factories and installed plants in and out of New England. They went to Pittsfield a year and a half ago to construct the Stanley Electric Company's new works. A handsome residence was taken in Burbank street. The family consisted of Robert L. Fosburg and his wife, their three daughters, May 22 years old; Esther, 16 years old, and Beatrice, 13 years old and two sons Robert, 27 years old and James, 19 years old. Young Robert's wife made her home with her husband's parents. Visiting there last August was Bertha Sheldon, whose father is a wealthy business man of Providence, R. I.

HAPPY FAMILY PARTY.

Mrs. Fosburg, the mother, had been vis iting relatives in St. Louis, and had arrived home on Saturday evening, August 19th, 1900. The next day there was a happy family party in Pittsfield, the only absent one being Esther, who was with friends in a nearby village. That Sunday evening, with Miss Sheldon at the piano, and May Fosburg to lead the singing, there was sacred concert. Neighbors sat upon their porches and listened to "The Holy City," 'The Palms,' and other selections of before midnight, and the members of the Fosburg family and their guest retired. Then, a little more than an hour later there was a terrible outcry. The neighbors heard frantic calls for assistance. A struggle was going on in the Fosburg house. Two pistol shots were heard, followed by the screams of women and the hoarse shouts of men. From an open second-story window Robert L. Fosburg appealed: "Will no one come to us? We are being murdered by burglars."

ASSISTANCE COMES TOO LATE. Assistance was at hand, but it was too late. Those who rushed in found May Fosburg, shot through the heart, lying dead on the floor of her bedroom. Her dead on the floor of her bedroom. father had been so beaten that weeks elapsed before he recovered from the blows One eye was nearly destroyed, a sandbag had almost torn his left ear from his head, three of his ribs were fractured and his body was one mass of bruises. May's May's mother, too, had been badly hurt, but not so seriously as Mr. Fosburg. Robert Stewart Fosburg, had received one blow at the base of the skull that had deprived him of

A tale was told of burglars, three in number, who, being discovered and attacked by Robert L. Fosburg, had beaten and tried to kill him. In the fight Mr. Fosburg knocked a revolver from the hands of one of his assailants, and the weapon was found under the bed near which the struggle occurred. May Fosburg, sleeping with little Bea-trice in an adjoining room, had rushed to her father's assistance. Her brother Robert, who, with his wife, had occupied a room back of that in which May and Beatrice had slept, also made a dash to help his father. There came a flash, and May, with a bul-let in her heart, fell forward into her brother's arms. He stopped just long enough to let her slip gently to the floor, and then again sprang forward to grapple with the murderers. A blow on the head reeled him backward and he fell insensible by the side of his sister. He roused himself in time to make one more attempt to defend his home. His assailants fired another shot at him and fled.

It was told that the burglars had entered the house through a back stairway that led to an attic, from which they had descended into an unoccupied room on the same floor as the sleeping rooms. Passing through this room in escaping, two made their way through a window to the porch, from which they sprang to the ground. The third escaped down a back stairway.

TOLD WITHIN FIVE MINUTES. This story was told by members of the Fosburg family, and it has never been departed from in any detail save once as will be told later. Miss Sheldon gave full corroboration, and it should be remembered that the story was first told in less than five minutes after the tragedy. Bells were rung. The alarm was spread in every possible manner. The police re-sponded, and in less than two hours 150 men in organized parties were searching for the burglars. About 300 yards from the house were found a pair of Robert Stewart Fosburg's trousers, a pair of socks beionging to him and a pillow slip so slitted as to permit its use as a mask. In the house was ound a patent leather shoe, supposed to have belonged to one of the burglars.

At first no one cast doubt upon the story told by the members of the Fosburg family. But the next day Chief of Police Nicholson rejected the theory that burglars killed May Fosburg. He shared his opin-ion with two detectives belonging to the force of Massachusetts State detectives, and with District Attorney Gardner. The Grand Jury took up the considera-tion of the case last January. The Grand Jury was dominated by Chief Nicholson. An indictment was found against Robert Stewart Fosburg.

In her new grief his mother said: "My son is either guilty or innocent. If guilty his crime is murder not manslaughter." Circumstances known to Chief Nicholson first led him to think twice of the story that burglars killed May Fosburg. In his mind was just a shadow of doubt until the next afternoon, when a conversation that occurred between the Fosburgs, father and son, and Esther, was repeated to him.

A telegram had summoned Esther home, but the child had not been told of the tragedy. At the railroad station she was met by her father and brother, both of whom would have been better in a hospital. Esther sprang into the outstretched arms of her father, crying:

"Papa, papa, what has happened?""
At the station was the usual number of loafers. A crowd began to gather, and Robert, fearing lest his sister should have the terrible truth revealed to her by a stranger, took the child from his father's tones that were almost a whisper:

"It's nothing, Esther. Don't worry. Father and I had a quarrel last night and before we thought we hurt each other." This remark was overheard, and was repeated to Chief Nicholson. Then that official wo: ked on different lines.

THEORY OF THE CHIEF The pillow slip that had been found in slits that had been made for the eyes would ill serve for that purpose, at the best. If slightly disarranged, the pillow slip would completely blind the wearer and might be used to choke him. That was the second step after the conversation at the railroad longing to Robert Fosburg carried so far from the house? And burglars seldom wear patent leather shoes. two of the burglars vaulted over the porch railing to the ground. Chief Nicholson vas able to find only one distinct pair of footprints where these men were said to have struck the ground. They were at the foot of a porch pillar.

These footprints pointed in the direction of the house, instead of away from it, as would have been the case had they been made by a fleeing burglar.

In the unoccupied room through which the burglars are said to have twice passed a gold watch and some other jewelry, not of great value, had been left untouched. The only article missing was a revolver belonging to Robert Stewart Fosburg.

Measurements and angles were taken. and by these Chief Nicholson convinced himself that the two shots were not fired as the members of the Fosburg family had described. Dr. Schofield and Medical Examiner Paddock asserts that the bullet which caused the death of May Fosburg had been fired from a revolver held almost against her breast. This was in contradiction of the story told by Robert Fosburg, his father, mother and sister Beatrice. Chief Nicholson found witnesses, who told him that they had been aroused by the sound of a quarrel in the Fosburg home. They told him that voices were raised in angry protest. They also told him that it we have tried to meet the strikers half have been impossible for burglars to way. similar nature. The house was darkened have left the house without being seen by the witnesses. BURGLARS THEORY DISPUTED.

In this manner, to his own complete satsfaction, John Nicholson, Chief of Police of Pittsfield, disposed of the burglar theory. He has without doubt established a line of evidence that will tend to discredit the story that has been told by the members of the Fosburg family and by Bertha Sheldon.

May Fosburg was killed by a bullet from revolver of 32 calibre. That was the calibre of Robert Fosburg's revolver, and the revolver was missing.

Perhaps the strongest evidence for the defence is the record of the family. They have lived in various cities, and have ever commanded respect. The children have been reared in the love of God. Their home has been admired by all. Disputing the story of discharged employes that the father and son quarreled, others will swear that the two never clashed and that the young man always treated his father with the utmost respect and veneration. If he drank it was in a temperate manner. He and his wife have been models in their comportment and in their love for each

Robert Fosburg freely admits that he spoke to his sister Esther as has been reported to Chief Nicholson. His words, he says, were the product of the moment when he was trying to save to save the child from too great a shock.

The World's Longest Gold Chain.

The 1,184 feet of eight-karat gold chain which Isaac Gutman tried to bring into the country free of duty last May, by making a human spool of himself, was sold at public auction by United States Marshal Henkel, at New York on Tuesday. The chain was in seven sections, six suring 50 metres each, and the seven to 91 metres or a fraction of an inch over 200 feet. This 200 feet is probably the longest chain in the world. The seven sections, with a ladies' gold watch chain thrown in for good measure, were sold at $925. Gutman had paid $985 for the jew-elry on the other side and had it wrapped around his body under his clothes.

Sultan Pays Up at Last.

ceives $65.000 From the Sublime Porte in Payment of the Claims. The State Depart ment Satisfied and Orders the Incident Closed.

The controversy between the United States and Turkey over the claims for in-demity made by this Government on account of the destruction of American property in Armenia, which has several times threatened to cause trouble between the two countries has been settled at last. Secretary Hay has received a cable-gram from John G. A. Leischman, the United States Minister at Constantinople, saying that the Sublime Porte had paid him $65,000 in payment of the Armenian claim and that he deposited the money in the Ottoman Bank subject to the disposition of the State Department. This amount does not quite represent the aggregate of the claims presented, but the State Department is satisfied and will declare the incident closed. The money is in payment of damage inflicted on the American College at Harpoot, Armenia and injuries suffered by persons of Armen ian birth who had been naturalized in the United States.

Five diplomatic representatives of the United States in Turkey have tried for nearly eight years to collect these claims. The first was Minister Terrell, of Texas, under President Cleveland. He was succeeded by Mr. Angell, of Michigan, who went to Constantinople. After a year's esidence in Turkey he came home out the money and was succeeded by Mr. Straus, of New York.

It was Mr. Straus who made the entering wedge in the negotiations that have at last succeeded. He obtained from the Sultan personally on three occasions the promise that the indemnity would be paid without delay. The money was not forthcoming, however, and Mr. Straus came home and declined to return to Turkey unless the Sultan made good his promise. During Mr. Straus' absence, Lloyd C. Griscom, the United States Charge d' Affaires, who sailed to-day from New York on his way to assume the duties of United States Minister to Persia, made a point to call every Saturday at the Sublime Porte to press for the payment of the claims. A little girl from an East End slum was invited with others to a charity dinner given at a great house in the West End of London. In the course of the meal the the road belonged to the Fosburgs. The little maiden startled her hostess by propounding the query:

"Does your husband drink?"

"Why no," replied the astonished lady of the house.

After a moment's pause the miniature querist proceeded with the equally bevildering questions. "How much coal do you burn? What is your husband's salary? Has he any bad

No More Overtures to Reading Strikers. Trouble Is Feared When the Management Attempts to Fill Their Places.

PHILADELPHIA, July 15.—At the office of acting president J. Lowber Weish, of the Reading Railway Company today, it was announced that with the issuance of yesterday's proposition to the striking emoloyes of the company, the latest overture has been made. The strikers having failed to take advantage of the offer made by president Baer and the supplementary promise issued by Mr. Welsh, they will not now be regarded as employes, and efforts will be made to fill their places. An official of the company said:

"It is evident the men do not care to live up to the term of president Baer's proposition. All we can now do is await developments. We do not fear an extension of the strike, because we believe the bulk of our employes are fully aware that READING, Pa., July 15 .- Not a single Philadelphia & Reading striking employe in this city returned to work to-day. situation at the Reading shops in this city continues the same. Sixty-five engines are now standing there awaiting the necessary repairs by boilermakers and blacksmiths. Today the company has not a single boilermaker at work, and there are but three blacksmith fires running. One of these is manned with the foreman.

The freight handlers are still out, but the places of many of the men have been filled. The clerks at the freight depot asked for an advance, but received no reply to the request. The salaries range from $20 to $45 per month, the latter being for the chiefs. The men work from ten to fifteen hours a day, without extra for overtime.

The shop hands executive committee met here to-day, when the strike situation was considered. Chairman Boschor said that the men have decided to stand out for their original list of grievances as presented to the company, as though the agreement with Mr. Baer had never been made and that the latter will no longer figure in the contest. It will be asserted by a man of some acquaintance with acting president Welsh that the company having exhausted its efforts at conciliation, would now try to run the shops with new hands. This, it is believed, will lead to trouble, and it is predicted that if the company introduces nev men at the shops tomorrow serious disturbances will ensue.

Need Have no Fear.

HARRISBURG, July 15.—Chairman Bliss, of the house of appropration com-mittee, who was in Harrisburg to-day in conference with Governor Stone relative to the appropriation bills passed by the last Legislature, thinks the private charities of the State need have no fear of a sweeping reduction in their appropriations. Mr. Bliss says it will be easy for the Governor to reduce the appropriations to bring the total down to the estimated state revenues of $26,250,000 without injury to any of the charitable institutions of the Commonwealth. Governor Stone and the state fiscal officers claim, however, that it will be necessary to cut over $2,000,000 off the appropriation to keep within the estimated 264955
