IN AUGUST.

All the long August afternoon, The little drowsy stream Whispers a melancholy tune, As if it dreamed of June And whispered in its dream

The thistles show beyond the brook Dust on their down and bloom, And out of many a weed-grown nook The aster-flowers look With eyes of trader gloom.

The silent orchard aisles are sweet With the smell of ripening fruit, Through the sere grass, in shy retreat Flutter at coming feet, The robins strange and mute

There is no wind to stir the leaves,

The harsh leaves overhead: Only the querulous cricket grieves, And thrilling locust weaves A song of summer dead.

-William Dean Howells.

THE BISHOP'S BRIDAL

During the dinner the bishop had been all things to all men, blending in his manner toward his guests the dignity of a priest with the elasticity of a man of the world.

The butler had approached him with a blazil, 'Addust 100 Timbaa, was the new German cruiser Niobe is going to Carribbean waters after the autumn manoeuvres, and The butler had approached him with a shade of anxiety on his face.

"A man below, sir, insists on seeing you.

James told him the circumstances, but he would not be put off. He acted peculiar. If you would send word."

"No; I will go down."

As he descended the stairs he saw a curious figure, standing with a certain natural ease and grace in the stately, brightly lighted hall—a man about 35 years old—dressed in a shabby evening suit.

The bishop conceived an instant dislike of this man, as of one, in some obscure way, once a rival. The stranger stepped "I beg your pardon, bishop, for inter-rupting the great function of a dinner, but the case is urgent. My wife is dying— partly of hunger, partly of life. She had wished a prayer said over her. I came for "I will go with you," said the bishop. He went back and took leave of his

The woman lay on the narrow bed as one without care and without desire. The bishop looked upon her face with an in stant recognition that, whatever had been the outward setting of his life, never for an hour had she been the wife of this man in anything but material form and sign. The impulse seized him to thrust this intruder in his vulgarity and poverty of spirit neck and crop into the street which claim-

The wife opened her eyes with a strange, alien look upon her husband.
"This is the bishop. Alice, the bishop of this town which has used you and me so badly. He'll say a prayer for you if you like. Perhaps he'll show his faith by his works. I have told him that we are bitten by cold and hunger and that we haven't a penny."

"Did you tell him all?"

"My sins, you mean, the cause of our little miseries? No, dear, I did not."

The woman turned her face to the bishop, and their eyes met. It was the birth of a moment that could have nothing to the with time and its accidents. To her it was trated booklet containing large indexed map, as if there stood before her in this wholly plainly indicated the region in which this valuself-possessed and dignified figure the em-bodiment of what she had desired and had the Chicago & Northwestern Railway. Copy will been denied in the troubled years of her past—mental and moral order, strength holding sweetness within it, refinement of character which should mold the simplest events of daily life into comely forms; yes, and something greater than these which might include them, together with every other imaginable grace and beauty, as light holds all color—a love which gives life.

To the bishop she seemed to embody those forces of which his dinner guests in jest or earnest felt bound to deny the reality—love and the power of love to give joy. Strange enough in this her setting of poverty and pain!

The husband laid a hand upon his arm.

"Sir, do not delay. She needs food more than she needs your prayers. Will you force me to tell you again that I have no money? A gentleman will surely not refuse a gentleman." The bishop drew him into the hall-way and put a note in his hand. The man went lightly down the stairs, with a sinister exultation in his manner. As the bishop re-entered the room the woman turned her eyes to his again.

The bishop spoke no word, but his eyes answered hers.

She drew his hand into her hands. "If I should ask your name," she said, "or the paths by which you come to me at last, what would it tell me? You are.

here."
"I came by many paths—to comfort

"I am comforted." "You have been unhappy."
"I forget. I am happy now."
She drew his haud to her breast. "And you—have you been happy?

"No. Only successful."
"And now?"

The bishop looked into her eyes. "I am She drew his hand closer to her breast. The silence deepened around them.

There was no sound of returning footsteps on the stair. Perhaps the echo of them had died out forever. She never took her gaze from his face, but a great weariness was weighing down her eyelids. "You will not leave me if I fall asleep?"

"No; I will not leave you. Go to sleep. The silence deepened around them.
In the breathless hour between night's maturity and the dawn the bishop left the still form to the care of others. With death he had nothing to do.

He went to his lonely house with the aerial step of one possessed by an almost unbearable joy.

As he passed by the dark, deserted dining room the odor of wine and roses, lingering there, came to him with memories of a world he had left six hours, or a thousand years ago, and to which he must go back on the morrow with homesickness—the world of his dinner guests. "They will never know," said the bishop, "that this was my wedding night."

The South American Trouble.

The lowa to Be Ordered to Panama, Germany Inter-

A telegram has been prepared at the navy department to forward to the Iowa immediately upon her arrival at San Francisco, ordering her to prepare at once to go to sea. When she advises the department that she is ready an order will follow for her to proceed at once to Panama. The little cruiser Ranger, which is at San Diego, was ordered to sail on Friday. She is very slow, making not more than six knots, and as the distance to Panama is about 2,700 miles, it would require almost fifteen days for her to reach her destination. The department, therefore, decided to despatch the lowa as soon as the battleship arrives at San Francisco and can prepare for the trip.

A Washington dispatch says: Diplomatic relations between Colombia and Venezuela have not yet been broken. Secretary Hay was much gratified on Friday by the receipt of a dispatch from Mr. Russell, the United States charge d'affaires in Caracas, which indicated that the departure of the Colombian minister from the capital did not necessarily mean that the two countries were on the verge of war. If there should be trouble between Nicaragua and Colombia the point of danger to Colombia would be the isthmus of Panama. The reader can only find one remedy that first gives local proof of its merits and second demonstrates beyond doubt that when it cures the work is permanent. Read this:

Mr. George Gross, of Water street, says: "In the summer of 1896 I used Doan's Kidney Pills for backache, procuring them from the Bush block drug store. Accompanying the pains in my back was an annoyance from the kidney secretions, Doan's Kidney Pills cured me after I had been troubled for years. I thought I was going to have backache again, but two years afterwards I went fishing, got soaked through and this ended in affecting my back, I again resorted to my old cure, Doan's Kidney Pills and they did me good immediately, although in the meantime I had taken other remedies but without obtaining relief. I can as conscientiously recommend Doan's Kidney Pills now as I did formerly for backache or kidney trouble."

Pools of Solomon to be Tapped to Supply the City

The rainfall last winter was very scanty throughout Palestine, in many places less than half the annual avearge. This was especially the case in Jerusalem, which depends entirely on rain for its water supply. The inhabitants of the Holy City are therefore threatened by dearth and famine during the forthcoming autumn. The situation has become so serious that the municipality of Lorenter recently appealed to pality of Jerusalem recently appealed to the Sultan for a grant to enable the authorthe Sultan for a grant to enable the authorities to bring water through iron pipes into Jerusalem from the Pools of Solomon, about four miles distant, the old stone aqueduct built by King Solomon having fallen to ruins. Not Familiar With Cardinal's Rank

"Cardinal Gibbons was formerly a frequent visitor to Cape May," said a visitor who just returned from that resort, to a representative of a New York newspaper, "and usually took long walks morning and afternoon by the seashore. Dear Dr. the last time I wrote you for medicine I did not feel like saying much about my case. I now write you, to say I received medicine on time. Thank you for promptness. I now believe what you told me the second time I called at your office when you said that you would cure me of that Loathsome Disease, Catarrh. Considering the complications of other ailments; I had almost come to the conclusion that mine was one of the incurable ones, but am glad that I took your advice and continued the treatment. The dropping of the mucus in the throat at night has almost entirely ceased and my hearing is nearly restored, the buzzing noise in my head is becoming so fant that it is hardly noticeable. I can now freely and honestly recommend you and your treatment to every one suffering with that dreadful disease (Catarrh.) If you so desire, you have my permission to publish this letter.
