The Labor Situation.

Present signs indicate the early collapse of the steel worker's strike. The lower element is divided, the resources of the Amalgamated association are meagre and unless there is a radical change in favor of the strikers within a few days work will be resumed at all the mills, the striking workmen will be out of employment and organized labor in this country will be a thing of the past.

From the beginning of the present strike, the result was inevitable. It may be said that from the moment that J. PIERPONT MORGAN became concerned in the industrial life of the country labor organizations were doomed.

But the country will not be benefited by this change in the industrial structure. That is to say the people will derive no benefit from the extinction of the only element that could resist the force of MORGAN'S combination of capital.

Stone and Flinn.

After all there is a good deal of fun in politics, if proper effort is made to extract it. For example, there are whole volumes of wit and humor in a report published in one of our Philadelphia contemporaries of the incidents attending the conference between the Governor and his friends and Senator FLINN and his friends at Atlantic City on Monday last.

"The Attorney General," writes the historian of the event, "reported that Senator QUAY was as indignant as the Governor or Senator FLINN could be over the turn in affairs." Now everybody knows that FLINN can be very indignant or at least appear to be, and nobody doubts that he was indignant at the time.

It has not been determined whether the Knecht mill at Parvin will be rebuilt or not. The loss is about $15,000, with an insurance of only $7,500.

Who are they?—The Buffalo Express publishes the following Pan-American romance, in which a former Bellefonte was one of the principals.

"After an estrangement that continued for fourteen years, and which was the result of a lovers' quarrel, G. P. Norris, of Bellefonte, and Miss Della Moughtimer were married yesterday afternoon in mayor Diehl's private office, by his honor, Miss Moughtimer's home was in Hollidaysburg. She had not seen her lover since they quarreled, many years ago, until last Sunday evening, when she was visiting the Pan-American and met him by accident on the plaza in front of the electric tower.

ed? It was a heart rending and soul stirring episode and it's small wonder they were touched.

But to those of us who are outside of the influence of STONE'S magnetism there is something excruciatingly funny in the whole affair. The Governor was redeeming one gold-brick by giving another of thinner gilding and FLINN, who pretends to be a man of the world, took the dope with the avidity that a sucker takes a fat worm.

Mrs. W. L. Malin, of Howard street, had a very exciting experience and a miraculous escape from serious injuries in a runaway accident on Saturday evening. With her little son Ogden she had driven down to the 4:44 train to meet Mr. Malin, who was expected to arrive on it.

Reaching the station a few minutes before train time she drove out Thomas street and returned just as the train had backed into the station. As is well known all the B. E. V. passenger trains stop so that the engine stands about half-way over the High street crossing.

Mrs. Malin undertook to drive past the end of the engine and her horse shied, causing the left front wheel of the runaway to strike the post that holds up the crossing warning. The wheel went down and Mrs. Malin was tilted out; her skirts becoming fastened in the spokes of the rear wheel. She was dragged behind the then thoroughly frightened horse, at a furious pace, over to the pile of lumber in front of Keichline's store, where Davy Justice grabbed the runaway and threw him on the crossing at the express office.

Mrs. Malin suffered a contusion on the head and nose and was greatly shocked, but escaped any more serious injury. Ogden was in the runaway all the time and had the horse not been caught would probably have been very badly hurt.
