THE FALLEN LEAF.

A leaf has fallen! Well, who cares? The branch on which it grew May feel the little loss it bears And mourn a day or two; But shall the busy world forget To hurry on its way Because a leaf lies on the sod? Another, by the grace of God, Will deck the branch some day.

A hearse is passing, and I hear Some mourner's bitter cry; But men forget ere yet the tear Upon her cheek is dry! The busy world goes rushing in The old, old fashioned way-No matter what his work or where Some other man has risen there

THE ROMANCE OF A TEXAS GIRL WHO BECAME AN HEIRESS.

Seven or eight months ago Maxine Doubleday, a pretty Texas girl, was engaged in teaching a country school in order to sup-port herself and her widowed mother. Now she could easily buy the whole county in which she lives and have a million or more to spare. The extraordinary change in the fortunes of this young girl was brought about by one of these peculiar little circumstances which are often of such a puzzling nature in their final import as to lead philosophical observers to conclude that they are not altogether the work of chance, says a Laurel Valley, (Tex.) correspondent. While visiting friends near Bryan, in Brazos county, Miss Maxine accidentally made the acquaintance of several students of the Agricultural and Mechanical college. One of these was a young man named Lee Payson, who lived at Cordova, in the republic of Mexico. The two young people were thrown together at a picnic, and while wandering about under the shade of the trees, Mr. Payson remarked :

'Yours is rather a peculiar name, but it is familiar to me from the fact that it is borne by one of the wealthiest Americans in my country."
"It would be funny," replied the Texas girl," if your rich countryman should turn out to be my long-lost uncle." "In that event," said the young man, "a because he has no heirs in Mexico to inherit his vast estate." "My uncle," said Maxine, "was a captain in the Southern army. His first name was Maximilian, and he was a Missourian. I was named after him." 'Did he go to Mexico with General Joe Shelby?" Payson asked.

"He certainly belonged to General Shel-by's command," replied Miss Maxine. but my father never beard from him after the war ended. It has been supposed that he was slain in battle."

"It is the same man as sure as fate,"
A Davien with much earnestness, "I said Payson with much earnestness. happen to know the old man well, and there may have been some cause for his conduct which was entirely unknown to his relatives and friends in Missouri. For instance, an affair of the heart. Did you ever hear of a pretty girl, with long, curly tresses and great dark eyes like your own, who gave your uncle her picture and a lock of her hair and a little testament when he

It was the young girl's turn to look "Hear of her!" she exclaimed. "Why she is my mother.' Quickly unclasping a little locket from her throat, Miss Maxine touched a spring and held it open before the young man's

"No further evidence is needed," said he," The rich man in Cordova is certainly your uncle. He has that same face on a large canvas in a costly frame and it hangs in his favorite room.'

Soon after this conversation occurred voung Payson was recalled to Mexico. Miss Maxine was now pretty well con-vinced that she had discovered the long-lost uncle whom the whole family had mourned for as one who had reposed with the dead for nearly forty years, but she is a plain country girl, and her imagination did not run riot building castles in the air. One evening not long afterward, while mother and daughter were seated under the vines in front of their cabin, a schoolboy ran into the yard and threw a letter into Miss Maxine's lap. The girl's prophetic soul set her nerves to quivering, and she was not surprised when she saw the Fortune, he declared, had doubtless favored him beyond his worth, and he felt that the disof her, he added that if she concluded to comply with his request she must expect to do him the favor of becoming his tion. When he had about concluded, he heiress and submit to the inheritance of his estates. Miss Maxine with a puzzled look, was about to say." Why, mamma, he does not mention you, but upon turning the letter over she saw another line. It simply read, "induce your mother to come with you." About the middle of last January, Miss Emma Goldman. Her words set me on Maxine and her mother went to Mexico. A fire," he replied, with not the slightest Maxine says: "When my mother and un-cle got together in Mexico a cloud that has cle got together in Mexico a cloud that has hung over our family since the great war was removed. Many mysteries were explained, and the two old people were like children in their great happiness. As a result my mother is now also my aunt."

"Two millions did you say?" exclaimed the Mexican consul at San Antonio, as he thered to a group of Tayana after assisting

The White House clerical force which had established an office in the main draw-ing room of the Milburn residence, was moved to the Glenny residence, which ad-joins the Milburn home and which has been tendered to Secretary Cortelyou for the purpose.

The entire cabinet which had arrived in Buffalo by Saturday evening are quartered at the Buffalo club which will be the meeting place of the heads of the government until there is a definite change in the President's condition one way or the administered, but she was up when the President was brought in on his bed, and

CONFESSION OF ASSASSIN.

The statement of Leon Czolgosz, the a sassin of President McKinley, made to the police, transcribed on Saturday and signed by the prisoner, is as follows:

"I was born in Detroit, nearly 29 years ago. My parents were Russian Poles. They came here forty-two years ago. I got my education in the public schools of Detroit and then went to Cleveland, where I got work. In Cleveland I read books on socialism and met a good many Socialists. I was pretty well known as a Socialist in the West. After being in Cleveland for several years I went to Chicago, where I remained seven months, after which I went to Newberg, on the outskirts of Cleveland, and went to work in the Newburg Wire Mills.

"During the last five years I have had as friends Anarchists in Chicago, Cleve-land, Detroit and other Western cities, and I suppose I became more or less bit-Yes, I know I was bitter. I never had much luck at anything, and this preyed upon me. It made me morose and envious, but what started the craze to kill was a lecture I heard some little time ago by Emma Goldman. She was in Cleveland and I and other Anarchists went to see her. She set me on fire. EMMA GOLDMAN INSPIRED HIM. "Her doctrine that all rulers should be exterminated was what set me to thinking. so that my head nearly split with the pain. Miss Goldman's words went right through me, and when I left the lecture I had made up my mind that I would have to do some thing heroic for the cause 1 loveu.

"Eight days ago, while I was in Chicago, read in a Chicago newspaper of President McKinley's visit to the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo. That day I bought a ticket for Buffalo, and I got here with the determination to do something, but I do princess might envy your good fortune, for not know just when, I thought of shooting he was never married and he often grieves the President, for I had not formed a plan

I was not afraid of them or that I should get hurt, but afraid I might be seized and that my chance would be gone forever.

Well, he went away that time and I went home. On Thursday I went to the grounds and stood right near the President right under him near the stand from which he spoke.
"I thought half a dozen times of shooting while he was speaking, but I could not get close enough. I was afraid I might miss and then the great crowd was always jostling and I was afraid lest my aim fail. The President got into his car-riage again and a lot of men were about him and formed a cordon that I could not get through. I was tossed about by the crowd and my spirits were getting pretty low. I was almost hopeless that night as I went home. "Friday morning I went again to the Exposition grounds. Emma Goodman,s speech was still burning me up. I waited near the central entrance for the President, who was to board his special train from that gate, but the police allowed nobody but the President's party to pass where the train waited. So I stayed at the grounds all day waiting.

I would have fired more, but I induce her to pay him a visit. He enclosed a draft for $500, and after writing in a frightful blow that knocked me down plain, blunt way that he was very much and then everybody jumped on me. Mrs. M'Kinley's Condition

Received the News Calmly and Bore the Shock

The President was removed from the grounds on the hospital bed, on which he was first placed, and he is on that bed yet. Before he was brought to the Milburn house Dr. Rixey had performed his very dangerous mission of breaking the news to

Mrs. McKinley.

Mrs. McKinley, who is at all times a sadly nervous woman and whose pitiful men throughout the United States were invalidism has made known the constant discussing the President's chances of reand tender devotion of her husband for covery there was quite a difference of opinwhich everyone admires and honors him, has not been as well as usual since her illness in California. Those who are in constant attendance upon her thought best not to tell her the entire truth of the attempted assassination. She was informed that he had been seriously hurt out at the Exposition grounds and that absolute quiet and careful nursing were necessary for his recovery. She was not told of the shooting, the operation or the fears of the people for she is so nervous, ill and weak that it was feared she would not survive. Considering her physical and mental condition she received the news from Dr. Rixey with wonderful fortitude. Stimulants had to be with him. It was then found necessary to take her back to her own room in order that the doctors might continue their work. story that she rested comfortably through night is scarcely true. Such rest as she got she owed to the strong drugs adminis-tered to her. Nobody who, by any chance might let her know the true state of affairs is permitted to come near her. She sees nothing, whatever, in the shape of a newspaper. Under these conditions and with this constant watchfulness and nursing, she has borne up surprisingly well.

remained for a few minutes in the room

She was there only a few minutes, seated at his bedside, as he, in his devotion to her in her illness, has so often been at hers. Mrs. McKinley has been warned not to talk and the President and his wife exchanged only a few words. It was only when he asked her to be brave for both their sakes that she faltered and almost broke down. NODDED TEARFUL ASSENT.

With choking throat and brimming eyes she promised with a bow of her head. Almost immediately thereafter she was led from the room by Dr. Rixey. Mrs. McKinley throughout this trying ordeal has shown remarkable fortitude. She has been mistress of herself and her sorrow and has been almost as calm and self-possessed as the President himself. And no more than that could be said, for throughout it all the President has been cooler than those about him. On Sunday afternoon Dr. Rixey felt that a drive might be better for Mrs. McKinley than all the drugs that could be administered to her and in consequence she was out driving for an hour with her cousin, Mrs. Lafayette McWilliams, of Chicago. anxious public all around the Milburn home felt that her leaving the house at all was a hopeful sign that the distinguished sufferer was comfortable at least. And so it was for Dr. McBurney, the noted New York specialist, who had been summoned affirmed all that the attending physicians had said and announced that there were no unfavorable symptoms.

The President's Chances.

As Viewed by Well Known Physicians. Those in Attendance at His Bedside are Recognized by the Profession as Among the Best,

In an interview on the subject of the President's chances of recovery. Dr. Shoemaker, of Philadelphia, said :

"As I understand the matter from reports made by the physicians and by Secretary Cortelyou, the President's chances of recovery are about fifty per cent. Hospital data show that about one-half of patients treated for gunshot wounds in the stomach recover. In President McKinley's case I should say, if anything, his chances for recovery are above fifty per cent., owing to his excellent physical condition. He has always taken excellent care of himself, and is famous for his robust constitution. Had he been a drinking man, the wound I might say, would have been mortal. And had he just eaten a full meal, the assassin would have accomplished his aim. In either of these cases the expanded condition of the stomach would have resulted in the wound at once closing and repelling all efforts at treatment.

"Both Dr. Mann and Dr. Parke, the surgeons in charge, are personal acquaint-ances of mine, and I regard them as being among the leading men in the profession. At medical conventions which I have attended with them their remarks have always been listened to with interest, and they are regarded as authorities.

APPROVES THEIR COURSE. "To my mind the steps taken by Drs. Mann and Parke were perfectly proper. Of the two wounds, that of the bullet which struck him on the upper part of the breast bone, glancing into the fleshy part of the chest, did no harm. The other wound, where the ball penetrated the ab-domen five inches below the left nipple and one and a half inches to the left of the median line, was the one which called for the greatest professional skill. From the reports I have read it was treated exactly right. At that point the stomach extends from the front to the back, clear through the body, and accordingly the only organ that could have been injured was the stomach. In scores of cases exactly like this ach. In scores or cases exactly like this persons have recovered nicely without the bullet being extracted. Accordingly, I am of the belief that the surgeons, when they could not locate the ball at once, did right in not putting the President at that time to the severe shock attendant to the difficult operation, that would have been recult operation that would have been required to find it, and were correct in cleansing the wound and closing it with silk

Dr. John B. Deaver, another well known Philadelphia physician said when inter-

"If during the next twenty four hours, the President's temperature continues to fall and his pulse quiets down, he will have every chance of recovery. The great danger is peritonitis, although it may be said that any man with two incisions in his stomach is in grave danger. That he is still alive is undoubtedly due to the fortunate hour which the assassin selected. The chances are that at 4 p. m., the President's stomach would be empty. Had the wound been received shortly after the President had partaken of a meal he could not have survived. "No one need worry about the missing bullet. The mere presence of a bit of lead in a man's body is of no consequence whatever. Cases such as Garfield's where the bullet lodged in the spinal chord, are ex-ceedingly rare. Had the President's spine been affected it would have become evident already.

"President McKinley is in the best of "President McKinley is in the best of hands. I know Dr. Parke well. He is, in my judgement, one of the finest surgeons in the world. He has great self-confidence and is cold blooded and absolutely without nerves. He is just the man for the President and will treat his patient without the slightest regard for the fact that he is the President. The other physiciaus in attendance are all splendid men and one of them, Dr. Mann, is an acknowledged expert in Dr. Mann, is an acknowledged expert in abdominal cases.

ion expressed, but the general belief was that those in charge of his case had done the very best that could be done and that the imbedded bullet was a secondary consideration and possibly would never cause him any trouble. From the bulletins on Sunday evening no signs of peritonitis were discernible and the President rested most of the day very comfortably.

All of the physicians in charge of the case are spoken of as being among the foremost practitioners in the country. Dr. M. B. Mann and Dr. R. E. Parke, surgeons in charge, have reputations extending throughout Pennsylvania and New York. Dr. Mann for many years has been considered one of the best hospital surgeons in the Dr. P. M. Rixey, Mrs. McKinley's physician, and Drs. H. E. Minter and Eugene Waubin also stand high in the profession The latter two enjoy large private practices, and for a long time have been prominent in different medical publications.

Mr. George Gross, of Water street, says: "In the summer of 1896 I used Doan's Kidney Pills for backache, procuring them from the Bush block drug store. Accompanying the pains in my back was an annoyance from the kidney secretions. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me after I had been troubled for years. I thought I was going to have backache again, but two years afterwards I went fishing, got soaked through and this ended in affecting my back, I again resorted to my old cure, Doan's Kidney Pills and they did me good immediately, although in the meantime I had taken other remedies but without obtaining relief, I can as conscientiously recommend Doan's Kidney Pills now as I did formerly for backache or kidney trouble."
