-Mrs. Mary Wertz, who weighed more than 450 pounds, was buried at Pottsville Monday. The undertaker's troubles began the moment the services were concluded at the dead woman's home. The coffin, which had been especially constructed, had been taken into the house, on edge through a window, but with the body, weighing nearly a quarter of a ton, encased in the casket, removal from the building was difficult. To accomplish this the frame of the door was removed and a part of the wall was cut away. Eight strong men were barely able to carry the great weight. . No hearse procurable would accommodate the coffin and the undertake pressed the dead wagon into service, and in it the coffin was transferred to the Reading station at Mahanoy City, where the mourners and friends took the train for Pottsville. The grave had been made large enough to take in the coffin and case, but the transfer to the cemetery was a difficult task for the pallbearers, of whom there were sixteen, eight taking turns at the handles. Mrs. Wertz is said to have been the heaviest woman in Pennsylvania.
