THE BOY WHO SUCCEEDS.

There is always a way to rise, my boy. Always a way to advance; Yet the road that leads to Mount Success Does not pass by the way of Chance, But goes through the stations of Work and Strife, Through the valley of persevere, And the man that succeeds, while others fail, Must be willing to pay most dear.

For there's always a way to fail, my boy, Always a way to slide,

And the men that you find at the foot of the hill All sought for an easy ride, So on and up, though the road be rough And the storms come thick and fast,

There is room at the top for the man who tries, And victory comes at last. -The Christian Commonwealth, London.

Milk A Substitute.

High Price of Meats Cause Families to Change Diet. A Weapon Against Beef Trust. Experts Assert that There is an Abundance of Nutriment as Well as Health Improving Properties

One solution of the problem presented to many families by the greatly increased prices of meats is a resort to milk as food. It is asserted that the man who secures three quarts of milk and a half a loaf of bread can do a full day's labor of whatever sort he is accustomed to, and laugh at the beef trust. Dr. J. Cheston Morris who has given this subject special attention dur-ing the greater part of his professional life, goes farther than merely holding that milk will make a competent substitute for flesh meats, and according to the "Public Ledger," asserts that, in a majority of cases, the physical and mental health of the users would be improved by the change.

Dr. Morris resorts occasionally to a milk diet himself, and says that he invariably notices that it produces a certain tranquilizing effect and mental alertness that are unmistakable. Being thoroughly convinced of the beneficial result of a large use of milk in an ordinary diet, he believes an extensive resort to that fluid would relieve thousands of poor families now vainly struggling to procure their accustomed meat supply, and accomplish happy results to the health as well as to the pockets of many of them. Dr. Morris referred to a paper he had read many years ago before the county medical society "On cow's milk as food in health and for invalids." In this he had cited many carefully prepared tables showing the average composition of good milk and the nature of its constituents in comparison with tables showing the composition and nutritive value of rations used in various armies, hospitals, etc.

From these the inference was drawn that two quarts of milk and twelve ounces of bread would afford a sufficient supply of nutritive material for the full performance of all the functions of a man in health, but this he regarded as a minimum, and assigned three quarts of milk and twelve ounces of bread as the portion that would prove ample in health; "but, when wasting disease makes a wasting demand on the system," the paper continued, "or excessive secretions are drawing away the blood of the patient or exhausting discharges are rapidly diminishing its forces, the quantity demanded, and, I may add, readily absorbed and assimilated, is far beyond this. Thus, in diabetes from six to eight quarts will be taken with apparent ease in many cases, while four to five quarts may frequently be perscribed with advantage in cases of anæmia, following acute diseases or exhaustion from profuse discharges, hemorrhage, suppurative processes, etc., and many cases of obscure nature, which baffle our powers of diagnosis-which can scarcely be ranked under the head of dyspepsia, hydraheaded as that destroyer of and rigidly carried out. "Especially is a milk diet of benefit in the treatment of fevers, in all stages of which it will be more easily tolerated than any other form of nourishment, and may be given freely, either entire, skimmed or diluted, and sweetened, as may be most agreeable to the patient. We should, however, be careful here not to administer too large quantities at one time, as some gastric oppression might be formed which the enfeetled digestive powers might not peace of mind and comfort of individ-milk, strenuously insisted on and faithfully be able to dispose of." Dr. Morris recalled many interesting incidents in this connection, all tending to show that even for those who could "never bear milk," with whom "it never agreed," etc., they could bear it, and it did agree with them to their own great improvement in health. He remarked that there was what he smilingly called an endless variety of ways of serving it, as it could be given sometimes cold, sometimes hot, with or without a little salt, or flavored with vanilla, and so forth, while in combination with rice, potatoes, toast and so on, there is still further variety to be enjoyed.

It may be well to add the advice often given by Dr. Morris to persons who complained that milk would not agree with them—"chew your milk," which may be interpreted to mean that the milk should not be gulped, but sipped, so that it may be affected by the saliva before passing in-to the stomach. At the time of his inquiry, for the purpose of the paper referred to, Dr. Morris found that the consumption of milk in Philadelphia would average about 5 6 10 ounces daily for each man, woman and child, and while the average in England was something less than this it was twelve ounces in Wales, eighteen in Scotland and nineteen in Ireland.

May Have Been Religion.

A young preacher went down in the Ozark Mountain country of Missouri to take charge of two churches, one of which was out in the country. The first Sunday morning he arrived he drove out and on the way to the church he stopped in the press of the whole edition is perfect, pictorially road opposite a log cabin, in the door of and descriptively mirroring California's wonwhich a scrawny mountain woman was derful scenery. tone. "Well, stranger, I'm not sure about that. They's a new family moved in last fall acrost the crik thar and they's been down sick all winter with some complaint. Weuns 'round here kain't make out what ails 'em. May be it's religion they's got.'

Blessing Came Disguised.

James M. Barnes, of Baltimore, has been a great sufferer from stomach troubles, and several weeks ago, while using the stomach pump he had a coughing attack and the rubber tube fell into his stomach. Medical treatment failed to dislodge it and an operation was advised.

The surgeons at the Johns Hopkins hospital removed the rubber tube, and at the same time investigated the conditions which had caused the trouble with his digestive organs. Their investigation seems to have been successful. Before Mr. Barnes left the hospital he was able to eat solid food, and even a chicken did not interfere with his digestive organs. This was the first solid food he had eaten for six or eight

Mr. Barnes left the hospital Tuesday fully convinced that the mishap with the stomach pump was not such a misfortune as it appeared at the time.

How Birds Migrate.

Many of the smaller and weaker birds, like the fly-catchers, vireos, wrens, kinglets and bluebirds, in order to avoid their enemies, the hawks, make their long flights by night, stopping for rest and food in the day time. The larger and bolder ones, like the hawks and crows, and those of extremely rapid flight, like the swallows and humming birds, migrate fearlessly by day, and there are some, like the Canada geese, which travel just when they choose, by day or night. Migrating birds usually fly at a height of from one to three miles, and this enables them to see the rivers, the mountain ranges and the coast line. By these they direct their course, the old birds remembering the way they came before, and the young ones following.
