The authorities of this place were very much wrought up, on Monday morning, over the discovery of a few bones wrapped up in paper and enclosed in a box that was fished out of the race near Crider's mill by the employees. Watson lives at Coleville, while Lindsay says his home is in Huntingdon.

NOT A SUCCESS.—Whatever else may be the outcome of the question as to how the citizens of our town are to secure the most liberal supply of water at the least expense, one plan upon which council has been acting, and from which it 'held out such great expectations, has met with a serious setback. Through somebody's miscalculations a wheel much too large for the capacity of the spring has been put in place and stands there unable, or indisposed, to pump as much water into the reservoir in a day as a thirsty cow would drink in half that time. In fact such is the amount of water required to keep the wheel in motion that when run for the space of 30 minutes there is only sufficient water left to keep the machine moving and none whatever to supply the town. So that the question for the council now to solve is whether it is best to give up the water or give up the wheel. As there would be no excuse for putting the people of the town to the expense of buying meters to measure water that is not furnished, we presume the determination of those who have charge of this matter will decide them to try some other method, or at least some other wheel.

The difficulty the council meets now is the fact that it has placed the town entirely at the mercy of wheel builders and pump makers and, in the end, will be compelled to pay just whatever price they may demand for the machinery that must be had. Common prudence would have dictated to thoughtful men the necessity of preserving intact the old wheel and the old pump—particularly the pump, so that in case of necessity, it could have been resorted to as a make-shift while another was being secured and placed. But this was not done. As soon as the old one was taken out it was sold as junk and parts of it have already been used for other purposes. Thus the town must for weeks, and possibly months, rely upon the more costly method of steam pumping for its entire water supply. In addition, to get back to where we were when this experimenting with the water works began, will cost anywhere from $500 to $1,000. And we are only at the beginning of the management that promises such great reforms in these matters. Verily a water rate that fixes the cost of the water used by Bellefonte tax payers at $35,000, the amount that it has heretofore cost, may be needed before all is over.

A WELL REMEMBERED BIRTHDAY.—It has been the pleasure and custom of the Burnside family for many years to distinguish the birthday of their mother, Mrs. Rebecca Thomas Burnside, with some festivity for her older friends and associates. This year her birthday, the seventy-ninth, came on Sunday the 13th, which precluded the usual celebration but afforded an auspicious opportunity for quite a number of her friends to visit her informally and wish her their congratulations and good wishes. Twenty-five or thirty of her most intimate friends enjoyed the family's hospitality during the evening and a very pleasing feature of the anniversary was the remembrance of Mrs. Burnside's love of music by several members of the Episcopal church. They were present after the evening's church service and sang several of her favorite hymns. Mrs. Burnside is deserving of all the happiness and comforts she is enjoying and the afternoon of her life is being passed amid surroundings unusually peaceful and pleasant.
