In the first heat of the running race one of the most exciting incidents ever seen on the fair grounds occurred. There was a field of four. George Furey had his mare "Trix" entered and when they got off she showed some running qualities that no one expected her capable of. She was four lengths ahead of the field before they turned into the back stretch, but the young mare evidently thought she was running off instead of racing, for when she reached the gate she suddenly dashed from the track. As it was closed and there was only a distance of a few feet between the track and the gate everyone expected to see both horse and rider badly hurt in flying against it. Young Furey who was up, managed to stop her wild flight in the few feet of space and wheeling about went after the bunch again, finishing a close second. That one heat took all the life out of Trix however, and Sugar had no difficulty in beating her in the others.

The events were raced as follows:
