Virchow and His Wife.

Herr Professor Was Blunt, but He Once Met

The late Professor Virchow was, in his own country at least, almost as famous for his excessive bluntness co speech as for his very remarkable me: tal attainments, says the Philadelphi Press. Often he spoke so unfeeling! to the students who sat under him in the lecture rooms that they have been known to leave his classes and not return. According to Berlin traditions. one of the professor's favorite replies to a wrong answer to one of his ques tions was:

"Certainly not. Any cook would know better than that."

On the other hand, he seemed to appreciate the spirit in some of his students which prompted them to answer him back in very much his own tone. Once when he was presiding in a very old and faded suit of clothes he turned suddenly upon a seemingly bashful man sitting near him and asked:

"Do your eyes tell you the truth? What color is this coat of mine?" Without an instant's hesitation the young man rose and said: "I presume except white."

That student was passed.

The Man Who Stayed.

For one woman who dominates her husband in China there are doubtless nine of the approved oriental stripe of humility. Nevertheless Chinese humorbert Allen Giles of the University of Cambridge told one of these stories:

form a society to resist the imposition of their wives. The ten wives heard of guide who knew of its existence a long the plan and while the meeting for or- time to find it." This is striking and which will warrant action by the United States authorities. It is charged that a syndicate having for its purpose traffic in ganization was in progress entered the shows up well above the levels of comroom in a body. A General Invitation.

The old story of the man who saw on the rail of the organ gallery in a little western church a placard bearing the words: "Don't shoot the organist. He's doing the best he can," has lately been matched by another somewhat like it.

A man recently returned from a mining region where one Sunday he attended a service in the only church for miles around. As he entered the strains of an organ, apparently in great distress, reached his ears, and when he was seated he looked up to discover who the player was.

On the back of the parlor organ, which stood on the platform, was a neatly lettered square of pasteboard which read. "Come up and try it yourself!"

Applicable.

A Sunday school superintendent in talking to his pupils about cruelty to animals said: "Only a coward would abuse a creature that has no way of protecting itself. Why, children, I once knew a little boy who cut off a calf's tail! Think of it-took a knife and cut the tail right off! Can any one tell me a verse in the Bible that he should not have cut off the calf's tail?" After a moment's silence a small boy held up his hand and when asked put asunder."

Three Great Canyons

Yosemite, Yellowstone and Grand Canyon of the Colorado Compared.

The justly famous Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone is, like the Colorado, gorgeously colored and abruptly countersunk in a plateau, and both are mainly the work of water. But the Colprado's canyon is more than 1,000 times larger, and as a score or two new buildings of ordinary size would not appreciably change the general view of a great city so hundreds of Yellowstones might be eroded in the sides of the Colorado canyon without noticeably augmenting its size or the richness of its sculpture. But it is not true that the great Yosemite rocks would be thus lost or hidden. Nothing of their kind in the world, so far as I know, rivals El Capitan and Tissiack, much less dwarfs or in any way belittles them. None of the sandstone or limestone precipices of the canyon that I have seen or heard of approaches in smooth, flawless strength and grandeur the granite face of El Capitan or the Tenaya side of Cloud's Rest. These colossal cliffs, types of permanence, are about 3,000 and 6,000 feet high; those it was once black. Now it is any color of the canyon that are sheer are about half as high and are types of fleeting change, while glorious domed Tissiack, noblest of mountain buildings, far from being overshadowed or lost in this rosy, spiry canyon company, would draw every eye and in serene majesty "aboon them a'" she would take her place-castle, temple, palace or tower. ous literature abounds in references to Nevertheless a noted writer, comparing henpecked husbands. Sympathetic Inks. Rabelais compiled a curious list of inks of a sympathetic nature, which were largely in vogue in his days. In his book entitled "Pantagruel" he Panurgue's exploits in trying to decipher the invisible characters of a letter which a Parisian female had if it was written with spirits of ammonia mixed with water. Then he placed it in water to discover if the writing had not been done with sirup of tithymal. When this would not work, he held it over a candle, which would have brought out the characters had they been written with the juice of white onions. By rubbing a part of it with nut oil he tried to find whether been used in the place of ink the milk Donovan jabbed a solitaire to left from the breast of a woman suckling pasture, stabling Dooley, but met his her firstborn daughter would have be-

"That is all. The case is worth no more than twopence," was the reply. "That is good news!" ejaculated the old lady, with a sigh of relief. "It's the case for mine which I have lost."

Origin of the Red Cap of Liberty. The red cap of liberty had a very prosaic origin. Instead of being the "Phrygian bonnet" it is just the galley slave's headgear. The Swiss of the Chateauroux regiment sent to the galleys for their share in the Nancy riots were released and came into Paris with the red caps still on their heads. "They are the victims of despotism," said the people, forgetting the circumstances of the riot, and so the red cap became the favorite with the extreme party.

—Representative Lamb, of Virginia, tells a story about a little girl and her prayers. She lives in Petersburg and is just 41 years old. Like all other good little girls, she kneels every night at her mother's knee and, after reciting the Lord's prayer, silently adds a little prayer of her own. One night her mother, rather curious, asked her daughter what she told the Loid. "Mamma," said the youngster, "I asked the Lord to please remove that mole on your face, but," added the little one, "! also told the Lord that I thought the mole had come to stay."
