Bested the Parson.

A Case Where the Wedding Ring Went on the Right Hand.

A clerical correspondent of the London Express tells of a wedding ceremony in which he officiated and in his zeal for rubrical observances laid himself open to a comical and crushing retort.

"It was then curate of a small country parish in Somersetshire, and one day a couple presented themselves after due preliminaries for marriage in the village church.

"All went well until the moment came when it is directed by the rubric that the man shall place the ring upon the fourth finger of the woman's left hand, but then trouble began. The yokel, apparently from nervousness or ignorance, laid hold of the right hand of his expectant bride and placed the ring there resolutely.

"No, I said, with quiet firmness, you must put the ring on her left hand. To this his only reply was a stolid stare. Thinking he had not understood me, I repeated my words, but with no better effect.

"With as much warmth and insistence as was justified by the occasion I now took firmer ground and said, 'If you do not put the ring on her left hand, I must stop the service.'

"And then the climax came. With a complacent smile, that seemed to show his satisfaction at having for the moment 'bested' the parson, the bridegroom settled the point for all time with the words, 'Please, sir, she ain't got none!'

How Billiards Were Invented.

The English are very fond of the game of billiards, and a letter in the British museum gives the origin of the sport. It was invented by a London pawnbroker, whose name was William Kew. Kew not only lent money, but he sold cloth, and for the latter purpose had a yard measure, with which he used to compute the amounts. One day to distract himself he took the three round balls which are the emblems of his trade—they may still be seen in front of certain shops in London—and, placing them on his counter, began to hit them about with his yard measure.

He found it made a pretty game. He got a kind of skill in making one ball glance off the other, and his friends who saw him thus employed called the game Bill's yard. It was soon shortened into billiards. But the yardstick was the instrument with which the balls were knocked about, and difficulty arose as to what to call it. They called it after the name of the pawnbroker—a Kew.—Paris Figaro.

Ten Men and a Safe.

In the subbasement of one of our big life insurance companies is a safe so large that a theatrical company might perform therein. There are three doors, the combinations of whose locks are controlled by ten men. Each man, a high official of the company, is an integral part of the integral whole. In instance, five men are required to open the outer door, each knowing a fifth part of the entire combination and no more. A having set the gatings in his combination, is followed in turn by B, C, D and E, when the bolt may be moved. In the same manner the second door is opened by three men in combination and the third by two, in the latter case each being in combination with one or more of the other eight on the outer and second doors. The safe is regarded as safe.—New York Press.

Breaking Glass.

The following is an easy method of breaking glass to any required form: Make a small notch by means of a file on the edge of a piece of glass; then make the end of a tobacco pipe or a rod of iron of about the same size red hot in the fire. Apply the hot iron to the notch and draw it slowly along the surface of the glass in any direction you please. A crack will be made in the glass and will follow the direction of the iron.

Embarrassing for the Professor.

Professor (to his class)—Gentlemen, I have to apologize for a short delay in beginning this lecture. I have unfortunately left my manuscript at home, but my boy, whom I have sent for it, will be here shortly.

Brown's Sympathy.

Jones—Charley fell from a street car last evening.
Brown—Oh, I'm awfully sorry!
Jones—But he wasn't hurt at all.
Brown—I wasn't thinking about Charley. I was thinking of the sufferings of those who would be told about that fall for months to come.—Boston Transcript.

A Puzzler.

"Faw," said little Tommy Figg on being scolded, "I heard Mr. Watts say that great men's sons never did any good. I ain't a great man's son, am I?"
Up to a late hour Mr. Figg's mind had not found a sufficiently diplomatic answer.

Second Decorator—Good! Then we'll have to do it all over again when she gets back.—Life.

Good Manners.

Good manners is the art of making those people easy with whom we converse. Whoever makes the fewest persons uneasy is the best bred in the company.

Religion on the Blanket.

How the Navajo Squaw Prays as She Spins and Weaves

It is a religion to make a Navajo blanket. Through the kinky, bristling twine of the warp are woven the hopes and aspirations of an immortal soul. In the warm colors are expressed the ardors of passionate hearts, the sandstorms they have faced, the cloudbursts under which their backs have bent, the smiling sunshine that has dried their wool; all the adverse and the good fortunes that have befallen are wrought into the intricate designs. The squaw prays as she pushes the wool card, and she prays as she twirls the distaff in her hand or rolls it on her thigh; she prays as she arranges the heads; she prays as she lustily pounds down the wool strands with her scrub oak batten.

A blanket is all a prayer, a human document, a biography bright with the joy tints of canary yellow, dark with the olive green of pain. One is drawn to it because one's heart is moved by its ineffable, intangible humanness. One is strangely moved to both laughter and tears by its exquisitely variant colors, each expressing an emotion by its warmth of blended fibers, each throbbing to a note of triumph or of woe.—Southern Workman.

His Compromise.

Mr. Potter was giving his son a few words of fatherly counsel as to his treatment of his young wife. "Now, when you have any little differences of opinion," said Mr. Potter in his most judicial manner, "if you can't persuade Margaret that you are in the right, you must compromise, my boy—compromise with a good grace."

"I'll try to," said the son respectfully. "I will remember a little experience I had with your mother the summer after we were married," continued Mr. Potter. "I wanted to spend six weeks at Saratoga, and your mother preferred to spend the time in taking a trip through Canada. It's thirty odd years ago, but I will remember the arguments we had before I compromised."

"How did you do it?" asked the son.
"We spent five weeks and a half in Canada," said Mr. Potter, "and from Friday night till Monday morning in Saratoga."

No Need to Adjourn.

The legislature of a certain state was tardy in adjourning one session, although there seemed to be no important business under consideration.

Judge Jones, one of the legislators, was met by a friend in the street one hot morning, and the two stopped to talk under the shade of an awning.

"Go!" to clear out pretty soon, Judge?"

"I suppose so," answered the statesman, mopping his brow.
"Anything much goin' on down at the capitol?"

"No."
"Why don't they wind up, then?"

"Well, that's just the trouble. There's nothing but a lot of petty business to bother us, and we don't mind that. I wish something important would come up, and then the motion to adjourn would be in order."

English in England.

"You must learn the shop language before you can go shopping in England," says a girl who has just returned from there and has many stories to tell of the difficulties met in the shops. "Shoes are not shoes unless they are slippers, all boots are high, and you can't save your life get a spool of thread because there is no such thing—only a reel of cotton. If you wish cotton, sheeting for instance, you ask for calico, and the tape needle to run the ribbons in your gowns is a bodkin. There is not such a thing as a shirt waist to be had in all England, for they have nothing but blouses, and one would go continually with wet feet if she did not learn to ask for gailoches."

Chemical Effects of Lightning.

Lightning works chemically. It has the power of developing a peculiar odor which has been variously compared to that of phosphorus, nitrous gas and most frequently burning sulphur. Wafren mentions a storm on the isthmus of Darien which diffused such a sulphurous stench through the atmosphere that he and his marauding companions could scarcely breathe, particularly when they plunged into the wood.—Chambers' Journal.

His Mistake.

"Is this a commission house?" asked the tall man.
"Yes, sir," said the commission merchant. "What can we do for you?"
"Well, if you sell commissions I'd like to buy one, if they're not too dear, for my son. I want a lieutenant's commission in the army, for my son wants to be a soldier, and he's too lazy to go to West Point."—Baltimore Herald.

The Branch of Peace.

"How did you come to select Olive as a name for your baby?"
"Well, you see, my wife's father objected to our marriage, and when the little one came he forgave us, so we thought it was no more than right to let her have proper credit."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Not Niggardly.

"You asked her father for her hand?"
"Yes."
"And he refused you?"
"No, he didn't. He said I could have both of 'em."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

It is easy to discourage a man who realizes that he gets all the trouble in sight.—Chicago News.

Witchcraft Among Indians.

Two Starved to Death to Drive Out Devils. Tribe Under Arrest.

United States Commissioner Folsom, Marshal Hepburn and Prosecuting Attorney Lyons have returned to Juncos from Hoonah, Alaska, where they held an inquest over the remains of two starved Indians.

They were starved to death because they were thought to be witches. One of them was tied to a tree in the woods and compelled to stand eight days and nights without food, with heavy rains falling on him. The object of this treatment was to drive out devils. He died soon after being released at the end of eight days. The other victim was handled less severely.

Federal officers placed the entire tribe under arrest while investigating. Four members, found directly responsible, were taken to Juncos, charged with murder.

Patato Peelers form Union.

Organized labor has entered the kitchens of the hotels and restaurants of Chicago, and enrolled among its members 200 of the men and women who spend from five to six hours a day peeling potatoes. They want shorter hours and better pay.

Several informal and two open meetings have been held, and now hardly a restaurant downtown is without union potato peelers. They are now getting from $4.50 a week and want from $7 to $8. They work for an hour or an hour and a-half before each meal, and they want the work divided into regular shifts without a break, the aggregate day to remain the same.

Child Strangled in Sewing Machine.

Neck Caught by Running Band and Mother Found It Dead.

Harry Baldwin, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. William Baldwin, who reside near Elkton, Md., was strangled to death by getting his neck in the band on the sewing machine in the dining room at its home. The child's mother found it dead. Two small children were playing in the room when their mother left them, and it is thought that one started the sewing machine while the other had its neck in the band.

Pumpkin Seeds Dangerous.

Farmers who feed pumpkins to hogs should see that the seed has been extracted. At several points over the State hogs have been dying off on account of indigestion caused by pumpkin seeds, says an exchange. Cholera was supposed to have been the cause of the deaths, but a post mortem examination of several porkers disclosed the fact that the stomach was packed with undigested seeds.

Conductor John W. Woodring and engineer Alfred F. Austin, who were badly injured in the work train wreck on the Bald Eagle valley railroad near Beech Creek some weeks ago, are able to move around at their homes in Tyrone, but it will be some time before they can take up their duties again.

DYSPEPSIA

What's the use of a good cook if there's a bad stomach—a stomach too weak to properly digest what is taken into it? The owner of such a stomach experiences distress after eating, nausea between meals, and is troubled with belching and fits of nervous headache—he's dyspeptic and miserable.

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia and have suffered almost everything, but could get no relief until I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. After the use of this medicine I could eat without distress, and today I am as well as ever, but I always keep Hood's Sarsaparilla on hand." J. A. Knowlton, Canton, N. Y.
