The Pittsburg Tragedy.

The something like tragic end of the Pittsburg political muddle is enough to set even careless minds to deep thought. In other words the sudden death in Pittsburg, on Sunday afternoon, of Recorder BROWN

The life of this man therefore, may be charged to a vicious political contention which developed the "ripper" legislation two years ago and has sacrificed every consideration of honor and decency since. He is the third victim of that criminal legislation

QUAY is responsible to the public and to God for these calamities incident to his political ambitions. It is the intense hatreds which he creates in pursuance of his political schemes that break men's hearts and destroy men's health and leads to death by natural or other causes.

The death of Recorder J. O. BROWN in Pittsburg from causes undeniably traceable to the bitter strife they have had in that city for several years past should be an admonition to the clergy of Bellefonte before it gets too deep in the wear and tear of local politics.

Governor Takes Account in a Minute.

HARRISBURG, March 16.—Governor Pennypacker first heard officially of the death of Recorder Brown, of Pittsburg, through a telegram received from Coroner McGeeary, of Allegheny, this morning.

The Governor, at one minute after the noon hour, appointed William B. Hays recorder of Pittsburg. This was done after the governor had consulted Attorney General Carson, who came here this morning, as to his rights in the matter of appointment.

He told the governor this, and found they were in accord in the matter, and the governor appointed Mr. Hays recorder, waiting until one minute after 12 o'clock to make the appointment, as the late Recorder Brown's resignation took effect at noon.

Members of the Senate, seen to-night say that there is no question of the right of the governor to appoint without sending the nomination to the Senate, as Governor Stone had done before him, and that the governor pursued the right course in appointing as soon as possible, in order to give Pittsburg a recorder whom it had already chosen by popular election.

An Important Post for Senator Jones.

WASHINGTON, D. D., March 18.—The friends of the former Senator James K. Jones, of Arkansas, are confident that he will be selected by the President as one of the two non-professional civilians who will be placed on the Panama canal commission.

The Pennsylvania senators have no candidate for a place on the commission. Prof. E. M. Hanft, of Philadelphia, who was on the last Isthmian canal commission, has been spoken of in connection with the new commission, but he has not asked the Senators to present his name to the President.

Governor Pennypacker Vetoes Three More Bills.

The Bill Authorizing County Commissioners in Counties Containing More than 500,000 to Appoint Election Officers, in all Cases of Vacancy, Was Disapproved. Reasons For Vetoing it are Given.

HARRISBURG, March 16.—Governor Pennypacker to-day vetoed three more bills and sent his reason therefor to the senate to-night. The principal measure disapproved was the house bill authorizing the county commissioners in counties containing more than 500,000 inhabitants to appoint election officers, including election judges, inspectors and assessors in all cases of vacancy from any cause and regulating the procedure in such cases.

The governor's reasons for vetoing this bill are as follows: "The purpose of this bill is to transfer in counties containing more than 500,000 inhabitants the appointment of election officers in cases of vacancies from the judges of the courts of common pleas to the county commissioners. A careful examination of the bill leads me to the conclusion that as to some of its features at least it is contrary to the provisions of the constitution.

"The vacancies intended to be provided for in this bill are such as arise by reason of death, resignation, disqualification, removal from the division or other causes.

"Under these circumstances, the decision of the county commissioners as to the fact of the vacancy and the necessity and propriety of the appointment and all the matters touching the same shall be final and conclusive and not subject to any right of appeal or review in any court, the true intent and meaning thereof being that the county commissioners shall have exclusive and final jurisdiction in all such cases.

"The power of appointment is not a judicial function and could be given to the county commissioners, but the wisdom of such a course is at least doubtful. The present system has endured for many years and in the main has given satisfaction. There is a certain practical convenience in having the same body which determines the existence of the vacancy fill it by appointment.

BODY OF PRECEDENTS ESTABLISHED.

During the long period through which the judges of the common pleas have acted upon these vacancies a body of precedents has been established which makes easy the course to be pursued. The system is now uniform throughout the state and there are disadvantages in having one plan pursued in two cities and a different plan throughout the rest of the state.

The second bill vetoed was the senate bill requiring justice of the peace and aldermen to file with the prothonotary of the proper county transcripts of proceedings in suits brought before them against boroughs and townships and school districts, directing prothonotaries to keep a record of them, providing for the payment by such municipalities of the fees of said officials for the performance of said duties, making the neglect of such duty by justices and aldermen a misdemeanor and fixing the penalty therefor.

PURPOSE ENTIRELY PROPER.

"This purpose is entirely proper and save that, perhaps, a week is too short a time ordinarily, the main object of the bill is one which ought to meet with approval. It contains, however, in section 4, a provision that any justice of the peace or alderman who shall refuse or neglect to comply with the provisions of the act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding $100, or an imprisonment not exceeding three months, or both, at the discretion of the court. This provision seems to be entirely unreasonable and not to be commended. A justice of the peace is a judicial officer, representing the majesty of the law, selected by the people to see that the law is enforced, and ought not to be treated as a criminal and it ought not to be suggested in anything so serious as an act of assembly that he may be a criminal. If he fails in the performance of his duty, there are remedies already provided by law. To threaten with imprisonment a judicial officer is at the outset to invite disrespect, both for him and the office. Moreover, no provision has been made to arrange for the trial of the case during the time the magistrate is in prison."

THIRD BILL VETOED.

The third one vetoed was Senate bill empowering any taxpayer of any township, borough, school or poor district, upon providing for the costs, to appeal in behalf of such municipality to the courts of common pleas of the proper county from the judgment of any justice of the peace or alderman against such municipality and to become a party to such suit.

"It appears from section 2," the Governor says, "that the bill assumes that such judgment can only be rendered by the magistrate when the municipality is the defendant in the suit, but this is a mistaken view. The judgment may just as well be given against it when the municipality is the plaintiff as when it is the defendant. In the cases where the municipality is the plaintiff there is no provision for making the taxpayer, who may appeal, an intervening party.

the amount is due. There may be good reason for believing that upon an appeal the judgment would be for a larger amount. In that event they and not he would have to provide for its payment. Other taxpayers are interested in the determination of the suit and they are represented by the officials they have chosen for the purpose. Without their consent and without consultation with them, he is permitted to interfere in a way which may require them to pay an increased sum. It is wrong too, because it assumes a failure of duty on the part of the officials and exceptional public zeal on the part of some unascertained individual. The presumptions are all just the reverse. If, in fact, the officials are inefficient and slothful, there are remedies by mandamus and by suit on their official bonds. It would be a mistake to transfer their duties to some stranger against whom no such remedies exist.

"After the lapse of ten days they might conclude to appeal and then there would be a probable conflict as to who should conduct the case and, perhaps, the municipality be made to suffer."

Steel Trust At Home and Well.

Mr. Charles M. Schwab is home again and at his desk at No. 71 Broadway. He arrived on the North German Lloyd steamship Kronprinz Wilhelm, on Monday with his parents, wife, sister and mother-in-law.

Mr. John A. Schwab, his father, is sixty years old, and strongly resembles the late Emperor Napoleon III., except that he is considerably taller. Mr. Schwab was the picture of health and a type of good humor. His cheeks were ruddy, though sunburned. He wore a tall silk hat and yellow kid gloves. The rest of his attire was black.

"Tell me, honestly, do I look like a sick man?" They've had me ill; they've said I was crazy; they've described me as racing about Europe in a gigantic automobile—climbing mountain sides and dashing over precipices; friends have sent me clippings narrating marvelous adventures on Lake Geneva; I have been a pirate on the Mediterranean, according to reports; I have broken the bank at Monte Carlo, an equally trustworthy authority; but, after all, here I am. And I never felt so well in my life, or was so glad to get back to work."

"What has become of your big automobile?" "The one in which I was said to be making a tour of Europe? Oh, I sold that. It was too fierce for me. I am pretty strong as you see, but that machine was a terror to every chauffeur I had. How do you like my French? You know I have lived so long abroad," Mr. Schwab added, laughingly.

"Can it be possible you didn't bring any machines over with you?" "Quite; but I bought three and they'll be here pretty soon."

"What about that phantom yacht of yours that was making such remarkable speed in the Swiss lakes?" "That was a neat little steam launch that I hired for a few days. Its remarkable speed was only part of the phantasmagoria that has surrounded my journey and given the trip its bizarre character."

"Your cruise in Mr. Drexel's yacht Margarita was real, was it not?" "It was—the most delightful reality of my life. We all enjoyed the Mediterranean, but a great many absurd things were said about that cruise. We did not go up the Nile, and out itinerary does not call for special notice. In my party were my father and mother, Mrs. Kinsey, of Loretta, Pennsylvania, my wife, Mrs. Schwab, Miss Gertrude Schwab, my sister, who lives in Pittsburg. They all enjoyed their enjoyment of the trip, and I hope they did."

"Now, Mr. Schwab, tell me something about your observations in Europe." "Oh, they were not confined to business. I made this trip to study nature. I must say, however, that there is great commercial activity in some parts of Europe. Germany, for example, as well as France. This is not the only manufacturing nation in the world, and the sooner we realize that the better."

Stand Against 8 Hours.

ALTOONA, Pa., March 16.—After the failure of the bituminous coal operators and miners to agree upon a scale, last Saturday, the majority of the operators went to Philadelphia, where they held a meeting this morning in the office of one of the large coal companies. Colonel J. L. Spangler presided. It was argued that because of the thinness of the coal veins in the majority of the mines in district No. 2, a miner must be raised in the district to make a good workman, consequently there is always a shortage of miners adapted to local conditions. As the present shortage of miners enables the operators to run their mine only two or three days a week, it would be a very great inconvenience to limit the working time to eight hours a day. Therefore, while agreeing to grant an increase of wages, the operators agreed to resist an eight-hour day, even if their refusal to grant it resulted in a strike.

The operators arrive here on the third express at 6 o'clock this evening, and the wage scale committee resumed its sessions at 8 o'clock. The scale committee of the operators and miners, after a two-hours' session this evening adjourned to meet tomorrow morning. The only prospect for a settlement of the disputed questions was the appointment of a sub-committee of five from the operators and five of the miners, which committee is expected to report back to the scale committee at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. If any agreement is reached by the scale committee, it will be submitted to the miners' convention, which is ready to meet when the scale committee calls it together. National President Mitchell has left the city, but National Secretary Wilson is still here.

New Words More Appropriate.

From the Westmoreland (Pa.) Democrat. A gold medal is offered by the Rhode Island chapter of the Society of Cincinnati for a new tune for "My Country, 'Tis of Thee." Should the trusts and combines be permitted to continue their policy of looting the people and controlling the law-making power, it will not be a new tune that will be needed for the national song so much as new words or sentiment.

He leaves for Conference on Monday morning and whether he will be returned to this place or assigned to another appointment is unknown. He has filled the pulpit in this place for three years and filled it in a way that nineteenth of the attendants of the Methodist church are hoping for his return, while the people of Bellefonte, irrespective of denominational connections, will regret any change that will necessitate his removal. Under his ministrations the church here has been greatly strengthened both in a temporal and spiritual sense, and it would be but good judgment in arranging the appointments for the coming year to send him back to the people he has served so well, and where his influence and work is so acceptable and effective.

THE BOSTONIA SEKTETTE CONCERT.

Reserved seats for the last of the Star course entertainments are now for sale at Sheffer's store. As every one of the entertainments of the course was first class and consequently high priced the W. C. T. U. will not get out on the expenses unless all of the regular ticket holders are generous enough to secure reserved seats for the concert on Tuesday night, which promises to be the best of the season. The additional sum, 15 cents, is so small you will not miss it but if every one of the ticket holders will pay the extra trifle the managers will come out ahead. Every cent that is made beyond the expenses will be used for the debt on Petriken hall.

REMARKABLE TREES.—The following letter concerning some of the remarkable trees of the world was written by our friend Joseph L. Neff, the veteran auctioneer of Roland, and is so interesting that we are going to take the liberty of publishing it without his permission.

ROLAND, March 16th, 1903.

EDITORS OF THE WATCHMAN: Gentlemen.—A few weeks ago I noticed an item in your paper stating that a traveler in the western part of Mexico had discovered the largest tree in circumference in the world measuring one hundred and sixty feet. The gentleman making this discovery has not found the largest tree in existence. For a long time it was thought that the California red wood trees were the tallest and the largest trees in circumference in the world but such is not the case.

Ballou, who spent two years in traveling round the globe tells us in his "Foot Prints of Travel" that the largest tree in the world in circumference is a chestnut tree at the foot of Mt. Etna in the island of Sicily when he measured it about ten years ago it was one hundred and ninety feet in girth. The tree has been measured thousands of times since. The last account I have it was 198 feet in girth. The tallest trees in the world are the Eucalyptus, growing in Australia, Tasmania and New Zealand. Ballou measured a Eucalyptus tree in Australia that had blown down that measured 475 in length, he also found many trees of this species over 400 feet tall. Musler has found those trees in Australia 400 feet tall. There are about one hundred and fifty species of this timber growing in Australia. This species was introduced into Southern California 30 years ago where some of the trees will measure five feet in diameter. Trees planted twenty years ago are three feet in diameter. The tree has large leaves and is green all the year.

The Hon. Edward Cooper, of Santa Barbara, California, has two hundred acres planted in this timber, he cut twenty acres of sapling timber which averaged eighty cords to the acre. When the timber is cut down the stumps start out sprouts that in three or four years are large enough for fence posts. I wrote to Mr. Cooper in regard to introducing the species of timber in Centre county. His reply was that the climate is too cold there that the Eucalyptus will not grow when the frost kills the leaves. The timber is first introduced in Southern Arizona, Mexico South America, France and Italy.

Yours respectfully, JOSEPH L. NEFF.

THE HOUSE OF CLAY.

M. V. THOMAS.

We were looking through the window— Yes, it was a gruesome sight— To see them carry that house out In the early morning light.

It seems, while we were sleeping, The ferry-man came in the night From over the mystic river Where they say that all is light.

I do not know where he took him; But as soon as it was day They took his few possessions out With his empty house of clay.

I know not whom he belonged to, I know not whence he came; But a heart somewhere is aching At the mention of his name.

For him the struggle's over, The tragedy's ended now, He'll rest in the mysterious shades, 'Til the last trump will blow.
