Elements of Success.

The wisest man has told us that "He that hath a merry heart hath a continual feast;" and a little observation will show you that, besides the continual feast which the merry heart gives, it also makes friends for its owner, helps give him success where the sullen fellow gets failure if not a complete fizzle, and in a way makes life worth more to himself and to others.

Some one will be sure to say right here, "Well, it is all right to talk about cheerfulness to those who have something to be cheerful about; but I haven't"—for there always have been those who think that they are selected by Dame Fortune as a sort of scapegoat for all kinds of bad luck, and there always will be such people. It is for just these that I am writing this chapter.

Does your poverty prevent your being cheerful? Think of our own great men who have risen from the lowest ranks of poverty to be leaders of the nation. Lincoln was so poor in his boyhood that in order to get a suit of clothes made, by one of his neighbors, he had to agree to split a hundred rails for every yard of cloth she used in making them. Books were so far out of reach of his means that in order to become proficient in arithmetic he made his computations on his snow shore with a bit of charcoal which he picked from the fire; and his time was so limited for study that he had to do it at night, and by the frelight which came from the pine knots that he had to do it at night, and by the frelight which came from the pine knots where he lived! Yet he became so distinguished that Bishop Newman said of him: "He is embalmed in song; recorded in history; enshrined in panegyric; cast in bronze; sculptured in marble; painted on canvas; enshrined in the hearts of his countrymen; and lives in the memories of mankind."

Thurlof Weed was so poor in his boyhood that he had to wrap pieces of cloth about his feet in place of shoes and stockings; but he amassed great wealth and also became prominent in literature and politics.

So, in spite of poverty you can be cheerful, even if you have no higher motives for cheer than a desire to "get along."

Some one who is half sick will be likely to say now, "That's all right for those who are strong and well; but I can't do a thing; for, besides poverty, I'm sick half of the time."

"Well, your case is harder, but not without hope. Do you know that the "cheerful habit" would do much to redeem your health? And, while cheer may not cure a curved spine or diseased lungs, it may bring you friends who can help you to something whereby you can get away from both poverty and disease. I know of one young lady who has such an endless flow of good spirits, even under disaster, that her friends have named her "Sunshine," although she is pretty heavy for such a nickname, and I know that her cheer has stood her in good stead for some years, when it did seem as though about all that could happen to anyone came to her to test her ability to stand "hard luck." Still she did not waver, and I think, with her: "It is easy enough to be cheerful when everything is as smooth as glass; but there is no credit in that. I want to keep up my spirits mainly for my own sake; but also because I know that if I give out others will who have been watching me for years."

This little rhyme may help you, sometimes when you feel "blue": "For every evil under the sun There is a remedy, or there is none. If there be one, try and find it; If there be none, never mind it."

One of the greatest lessons that we have to learn is that of our own shortsightedness. We think a thing is surely so-and-so, or that it is not, when a few days, or weeks, or months, will show us our mistake, and that we have dreamed what proved helpful.

Goldsmith tells us that one of the happiest men he ever saw was a slave in the fortifications at Flanders, a man who was deformed, had but one leg, that one in chains, and he condemned to slavery for life, having to work from dawn until dark; yet he saw only the bright side of everything—made others happy by his overflowing good cheer.

You see many things that you want and cannot have, as yet; but you can have a cheerful spirit, if you will; and that will help you toward getting many other things.—The Classmate.

Newberry Weds an Entire Family.

Mother First and Then Three Daughters Successfully Take This Man's Name.

Information has been received at Nashville, Tenn., of the marriage of John Newberry and Miss Patsy Barrow. Newberry lives about 40 miles from Tallahassee.

About 35 years ago he married the widow, Sallie Barrow, who was then the mother of three daughters, Judy, Martha and Patsy. Four years after the marriage his wife died, leaving a son by Newberry. After waiting one year he married Judy, the oldest daughter of his dead wife. In two years Judy followed her mother to the grave, leaving a girl baby.

A few months later Newberry took unto himself Martha to wife, who, after living several years, followed sister and mother to the grave.

So the marriage of Newberry and Patsy absorbed the whole family of original Barrows.

Child Culture.

Suggestions from the Annual Report of the Superintendent of Schools of Amesbury, Mass.

The pleasure derived from music makes life better worth living.

Forty children of different ability and temperament can no more keep pace with one another than so many different horses. A quick, energetic pupil, capable of pushing ahead, should be allowed to advance faster than his neighbors, while the slow, plodding child may need to repeat some studies. But the latter may have as successful a career as the former.

Mistakes might be made as instructive as perfect recitations.

With proper guidance the children gain the power to read the lesson carefully, to perceive the principal points and then to tell the class in clear, concise English the gist of the subject.

To obtain the highest success a teacher must not only possess the requisite intellectual qualities and education, but she must have a character so strong and clean that the children will look up to her and follow her example to higher planes of living.

Fault finding, which is always destructive, will tend to lower the efficiency of any system.

A poor teacher is dear at any salary, while a good teacher never receives what she is worth.

"The end of learning to read is to read great books." If the schools can give the pupils a love for good books they will confer one of the greatest blessings within their power.

I believe the chief object of an education is to give the child the power to think and act along right lines, thus forming good habits to build up a strong character suitable for American citizenship.

To create an interest in school work is much better than to drive pupils to their tasks.

By increasing the enthusiasm and interest in school work we shall soon accomplish more in eight years than has been done in nine.

Even if the study of art should not be of financial value to all children, yet if it awakens a love of the beautiful and provides an outlet for the mind—a way of escape from the tedious daily round into the realm of the ideal—it has added much to the sum of human happiness.

I believe it a great advantage to our boys and girls to come as early as possible under the influence of both men and women teachers who have the ripe culture and the broad outlook and knowledge which a college education gives.

Among the teachers the wrong attitude displayed itself in a nervous attempt to cover so much ground in each study without considering the effect on the children, and a feeling that they must label everything the child did in terms of per cent.

It still remains true that a good teacher is necessary to produce a good school.

Great Railroad.

Is the Proposed Pan-American Route Across South America.

About 50,000,000 people live in America south of the United States and 35,000,000 of them live in South America, says the New York Sun. If the estimates made by the Intercontinental Railroad Commission in 1899 are correct it will cost over $1.50 for every person in the United States and the Latin Republics to build and equip the proposed trunk line connecting our railroad system with roads already built or being built from the chief ports of Chile and Peru on the west and Buenos Ayres on the east. Mexico's railroads are not yet extended north and south beyond the city of Oaxaca, which is several hundred miles north of the Guatemalan boundary. The intercontinental railroad will utilize existing roads as far as possible between New York city and Buenos Ayres.

The total length of the all rail route from this city to the capital of Argentina will be 10,228 miles. Of this mileage the part yet to be constructed extends between Oaxaca, Mexico, and Jojoy, Argentina, a distance of 5,456 miles. This is merely the trunk line, as it does not include the branch lines which it is hoped some day to construct eastward to existing railroads running to Caracas, Rio de Janeiro and Santos and to Asuncion and Montevideo.

The Latin Republics have not thus far contributed very much to the preliminary expenses. The three survey parties, which performed the enormous work of tracing a route for the railroad through the mountain wilds of Central and South America, carried out their mission at a cost of $288,000, of which $245,000 was contributed by the United States.

The small remainder was supplied by the South American Republics interested, excepting Argentina, which declined to contribute to the expense of the preliminary survey, but promised to connect her railroad system with the proposed trunk line, at her northern frontier. This means that she will extend her railroad between Buenos Ayres and Jojoy to the border of Bolivia.

No doubt seems to be felt in financial and commercial circles that this great enterprise would be a large factor in developing for their mutual benefit the vast potentialities of the Americas. The project has the approval of all the governments concerned and it was endorsed by the two Pan-American Congresses, the second of which appointed a permanent committee, with headquarters in Washington to look after the interests of the enterprise there. Chas. M. Pepper, who is going to confer with the government of the South African Republics in regard to carrying out the plans for the railroad, will therefore start on his mission under favorable conditions.

He has Started a Bank Account.

David Wolf, the well-known blacksmith at Clintondale, and in Look Haven Friday bright and early awaiting the hour when the banks would be open and ready for business. Heretofore Mr. Wolf kept most of his savings in a desk in his blacksmith shop, and only came to the conclusion to change the place of deposit to the more secure banks after an expensive experience. Mr. Wolf had about $50 laid away in the desk, but it is not there now. Some thief, who undoubtedly was aware of its presence, broke into the shop the other night and took the entire amount.

Seven Collieries Idle.

WILKESBARE, April 1.—The seven collieries in the Wyoming valley are idle today, the employees celebrating the award of the strike commission and granting of an eight-hour day in the soft coal regions. Aside from this everything appeared to be quiet, there being no particular demonstration in honor of the event.

Didn't Eat in Fifteen Years.

Colonel Michael C. Murphy Dies at a Ripe Old Age—A Noted Tammany Leader.

Colonel Michael C. Murphy, long a prominent Tammany politician, former police commissioner, former president of the Board of Health, and Civil War veteran, died of heart disease on Wednesday at his home, 582 Broome street, New York.

For a time longer than many men prominent in New York politics can remember, Colonel Murphy had been a leader and had served his party in many important positions of trust. His life was one of unusual activity, even in late years, when he was a semi-invalid receiving all nourishment by means of a tube. Fifteen years ago it was found that he was suffering from stricture of the esophagus, which made it impossible for him to swallow food. An incision was made in the wall of the stomach, a silver tube was inserted, and ever afterward Colonel Murphy had his food pumped into himself through this. It caused him little inconvenience until about two years ago, when his general health began to fail.

Before illness attacked him Colonel Murphy was a magnificent specimen of physical manhood. He lacked only a trifle of being six feet in height, was strong and athletic, and had a sunny disposition that made friends even among his political enemies.

His Sight is Gone Forever.

Family of Evangelist Sankey Have Abandoned Hope of His Recovery.

Ira D. Sankey, the evangelist, probably will never regain his sight. Allen Sankey, the son of the evangelist, said Wednesday, his father was slightly improved, but that he did not think there would be any permanent cure.

He said he wished the public to know his father was not in needy circumstances, and the family had been embarrassed by the receipt of many checks, and numerous offers of assistance have been thankfully rejected by the younger Mr. Sankey.

Paid $4,000 for a Calf.

Henry Stevens, of Laocoma, N. Y., an extensive breeder of fancy stock, paid $4,000 for a nine-weeks old bull calf. McAdams and Vonheyne, proprietors of the Brothertown stock farm near Utica, sold the animal. The mother of the calf is Sadie Vale Concordia, holder of the world's seven and thirty day records for milk and butter production. The sire is Beryl Wayne, a prize-winning bull. The calf was born on Jan. 22nd, and the price paid for him is believed to be the largest amount ever paid for a nine-weeks old animal.

Earthquake at Jerusalem.

Entire Population of the Holy City Panic Stricken by Violent Shock.

JERUSALEM, March 30.—An earthquake shock of unprecedented violence was experienced here to-day. The entire population was panic-stricken, but the damage done was slight.

PEOPLE FOOL THEMSELVES.—A great many people fool themselves in the course of their lives. They think they can go on working incessantly with hand and brain and not come to the need of medicine.

They find they can't. And then many of them fool themselves again by accepting a substitute for Hood's Sarsaparilla, which is by far the best medicine we know of for restoring health and strength and building up the whole system.
