Farming in Oklahoma.

The uniform size of a farm in Oklahoma is 160 acres, and practically all have as much as 100 acres each under cultivation. In the wheat belt, which embraces at least one-half of her total area, 100 acres of wheat means an average of 2,500 bushels, worth on the market 60 cents per bushel. So the wheat crop alone is substantially $1,500. Any Oklahoma farmer of intelligence and industry will make the remaining sixty acres of his farm produce enough corn, oats, fruit, garden truck and live stock to sustain the family and pay incidental expenses, thereby netting him in profits the value of the wheat crop. Indeed, it is the rule rather than the exception that the profits are added to from the value of the diversified products, the aggregate of which runs into big money in many cases. In consequence of this productivity of soil, accessibility of market, cheapness of farmlands and prudence in management it is no uncommon thing for the Oklahoma farmer to clear enough in one season's farming to pay for his farm.

hood where the family lives, but on account of the timidity of those who were conversant with the facts, was never brought to the attention of the society until a few days ago. At that time all the agents were busy and it was not until recently that the investigation which ended in the information against the pair was begun. The entire neighborhood had stories galore to tell of the cruelty to which the boy had been subjected, but not until the house was entered by the agents were the exact facts in the case found out.

When Mr. Stanley entered the house the boy was found chained to a table in the dining room and not in the cellar, as was at first reported; but this was found to have been the practice before word was received by the family that they were likely to be paid a visit by the agent. Had they suspected the exact time of his coming it is doubtful if the lad would have been chained at all, as he was let loose, it was said, for one or two days after the information was handed to the society of the manner in which the child was being abused. Reports were being received that the cries of the child as he was being beaten by his parents could be heard for blocks away. The little fellow was covered with sores and bruises from head to foot. The child himself refused to talk, being in fear of his parents.

The family do not deny that they have used stringent measures, but gave as a reason for their action that the boy was incorrigible.

TRUSTS GOING OUT OF BUSINESS

That is a head-line you don't see in the new columns of this paper. The trusts are not breaking up into the smaller concerns that were merged into them. The trusts are the greatest labor-saving invention yet made, and they will stay till they can be replaced by something better.

There is only one trouble with the trusts. They enable men to produce more wealth with less waste of energy than was ever possible before but they take most of the wealth away from those who do the work and give it to those who do the owning of stocks and bonds.

Suppose that we who work for a living should decide to do the owning ourselves, and to run the trusts for the benefit of all.
