NAUGHTINESS

Why am I sometimes naughty And sometimes very good? What makes me act so different?

When in the morning I wake up I don't know which 'twill be, A day all full of naughtiness Or a good day for me.

I never understood.

But when I go to bed at night I know which I have been, A Mamma's Joy all day or else A creature full of sin.

"I thank thee, Lord, for my good heart," This is the prayer I make; Or else: "Forgive my naughtiness Dear God, for Jesus' sake."

ty for Crime. Murdered Their Uncle. With the Exception of Frederick They Met Their Fate With the Stolcism for Which They Were Noted. The Witnesses Few in Number.

Willis, Frederick and Burton Van Wormer were electrocuted in Clinton prison, N. Y., last Thursday morning for the murder of their uncle, Peter Hallenbeck, on Christ-At 11.482 the execution of Burton, the last of the three Van Wormer boys to sit in the chair of death, was completed. The triple execution lasted just fifteen minutes. At 11.29 the witnesses filed into the death chamber and took their places. At 11.29 the usual test of the chair with a bank of incandescent lamps was made and the first of the brothers, Willis; summoned. He entered the chamber at 11.342 and in one minute the current was turned on and at 11.37 he was dead. Frederick was placed in the chair at 11 .-42 and in one minute and a half was de-

Burton entered the death chamber at 11.-47 and in one minute and a half was pronounced dead.

Willis, Burton and Frederick Van Wormer spent practically a sleepless night, and it was not until about 3 o'clock that morning that they bade each other good night and dropped off into a sound slumber.

When their supper was taken in shortly before 10 o'clock, Burton, who occupied a cell across from Willis and Frederick remarked that he was not afraid to die and would meet death bravely.

"I have no more fear of that chair tomorrow," he said to Keeper Nash, "than I have of eating my supper. I can stand it to see the other two boys go and be the last to meet my fate."

The boys looked forward eagerly to the visit of Father Belauger and his assistant, Father Charboneau. Thepriests entered the prison shortly after 8 o'clock and went at once to the death house to administer the first and last communion.

State electrician Davis was at the prison at 7 o'clock to see that final preparations were complete. He examined the clothing last, as the infliction. were complete. He examined the clothing to see that the right legs of the trousers were properly slit to the line to allow the easy application of the electrode. The prison barber the afternoon before shaved a portion of the hair from their heads to allow the adjustment of the helmet. There were no changes in the prison routine on were no changes in the prison routine on fere with the execution. account of the executions, and the men marched in at the usual time.

Although, as is always the case, efforts have been made to keep the affair from becoming known among the convicts, yet, because of the unaccountable way in which news travels about the prison, there were few of the 1,100 prisoners who did not know that three young lives were to be blotted out that day. The boys were the thirteenth, four teenth, and fifteenth victims to meet death in Clinton's execution chamber. Seven were executedin the original chair, the last being the famous "Bat" Shea. A new and stronger chair was then built in the prison, and it is in this that the boys sat. While some of the witnesses arrived the day before, the majority arrived on the morning train.

When William T. Murphy, the death watch, left the death-house at 8 o'clock that morning, the boys all shook hands with him and bade him good-bye, thank-ing him for the kindness he had shown them. Home, friends, and their fate of the morrow were freely discussed by the boys before they retired that night.

"By to-morrow night at this time I sup-pose we will all be back in Kinderhook" remarked one them.

"I wish there were three chairs so we could all go together," said Fred.

Willis was first to announce his intention of retiring. It was 2.10 a. m. when he bade the others good-night and went to his cot. Half an hour later Fred and Burtou said good-night, after requesting that they be called at 7 o'clock. All three they be called at 7 o'clock. All three went to sleep almost immediately and slept until 7.15, when they were awakened by Mr. Murphy. They greeted him cheerfully and asked of each other how they felt. Each said he felt are they felt. they felt. Each said he felt equal to the ordeal which he was about to face. At 10.30 Warden Devo said it had been decided to take in Willis, the oldest, first; Frederick, the youngest, second, and Bur-

This arrangement was agreed upon by the boys themselves after a long discussion. They decided that Willis should be permitted to go first because of his ill health and consequent weakness. Willis, throughout his long confinement here, had been afflicted with lung trouble. Up to the very last hour, even that morning, Willis had taken a spoonful of cod liver oil after each meal. It was this condition of his health that determined the others as to his right to first consideration in the death march to the chair. The hoys spent the greater part of last night in reading their Bible and gave especial study to a book expounding and explaining the Catholic faith, which had been furnished them by Father Belanger. This they read and studied earnestly, and it was passed repeatedly from one cell to the other, each marking passages which seemed particularly to interest and to which they desired to direct the attention of the others.

Although the boys retained their nerve

they did display some weakness on the final parting with the death watch, who had been their most intimate associate during their confinement. When it came to the final parting. Fred broke down completely and wept. His distress was clearly in the parting rather than in the thought of his death.

Warden Deyo that morning announced the list of witnesses as follows: Dr. J. B. Ransom, prison physician; Dr. Edward Spitazka, of New York; Dr. Carlos McDonald, New York; Dr. T. W. Van Langen, of Syracuse; Dr. L. B. Honeyford, of Cairo; Philip H. Campbell, [of] Saratoga; Dr. A. W. Cutler, of Oneonta; Dr. W. E. Clough, of West Chasey; Warden Silas W. Berry, of the eastern reformatory at Napan-oob; George E. Graham. John F. Tremain, Richard G. Conover, of Albany; W. A. Willis, of New York, and James Kavanaugh and Howard D. Hadley, of Platts-

THE CRIME.

The three youthful brothers Thursday paid the death penalty for the murder of their uncle, Peter H. Hallenbeck, at his farm house at Greenport, Columbia county, on the evening of December 24th, 1901.

The scene of the murder, and the occurrences surrounding it had all the essentials of a melodrama. It was Christmas eve and a heavy fall of snow had covered eve and a heavy fall of snow had covered the ground with a glistening covering of white. Across the snow gleamed the light from a neighboring church, where a Christ-mas festival was in progress and from which came songs of peace and good will, welling up from thankful hearts. In the Hallenbeck home the farmer, his wife, and her mother sat by the fire forming a typher mother, sat by the fire, forming a typical home-like scene. While they sat there, for it was still in the early evening, a knock was heard at the door of the kitchen. The old man rose and went to the door. Opening it, he saw four masked figures standing there and in the first impulse of self protection did his best in his feeble way, to repulse those whom he doubtless thought intended to in-vade his home. A fierce melee followed, in which some eighteen shots were fired, and when the smoke cleared away the old man was lying on his own doorstep with the life blood ebbing from several gaping wounds. A few minutes later he died.

The murderers, having completed their foul work, fled and no traces of them could be found. For several days the mystery showed no sign of being cleared, when susshowed no sign of being cleared, when suspicion, for some reason, turned to the three Van Wormer brothers, Frederick, 18 years old; Burton, 22, and Willis, 24. In the mesh of suspicion fell Harvey Bruce, a companion of theirs, who was known to have been with them on the night the murder was committed. They were arrested, and on Bruce's turning state's evidence, the whole mystery was cleared the whole mystery was cleared.

Bruce in the course of his story, told how the four had ridden thirty six miles from the Van Wormer home at Kinderhook and gave the details of the crime.

The Van Wormers, seeing that outright denial would be unavailing, entered a plea of unintentional guilt. They said they had not intended to murder their uncle, only wished to scare him. His death they said resulted from the souffle that occurred at the kitchen door. During the trial, however, the point was brought out that Hall-enbeck had shortly before the time of the murder foreclosed a mortgage on the Van Wormer homestead at Kinderbook, and that ill feeling had thus been engendered against him. This fact militated strongly against the brothers, and they were finally found guilty of murder in the first degree. Bruce, for turning state's evidence, was let off with eighteen years' imprisonment.

After the verdict had been given, Judge J. Rider Cady, who had conducted the de-fense, carried the case to the court of appeals, but that tribunal affirmed the judg-ment of the lower court, and set July 6th last, as the date for the death penalty's

When an incident like the following occurs right here at home, it is bound to carry weight with our readers. So many strange occurrences go the rounds of the press; are published as facts, that people become skeptical. On one subject skepticism is rapidly disappearing. The public statement of a reputable citizen living right here at home, one whom you can see every day, leaves no ground for the skeptic to stand on.
