

-Pin up two facis to be considered when you are discouraged : There are fewer business failures among farmers than any other class; more men begin without capital and become owners of good business in farming than in any other vocation.

-When manure is spread on the ground at this season it should be on heavy soil, as the matter leached out will not be lost, but on very light sandy soil it is better to apply the manure in the spring. Where the rains have a tendency to wash the land a loss of soluble matter will result, and in applying manure the "lay of the land" ould always be considered.

-Fall management of bees consists simply in taking away all surplus combs and honey as soon as the honey season closes, and the best combs in the hives should be left for the bees. Those having the largest amount of sealed and the least unsealed honey are the best. All further management during fall and winter is the same as with double-story hives.

-Failure with climbing roses and honeysuckles on porches or verandas may be due to too much water dripping from the roof, or to lack of proper preparation of the ground. One of the plans that may be pursaed is to dig a trench, a foot or more deep, and nearly fill it with decomposed manure, then plant the vines and give an application of fertilizer every spring. Lack of plant food is likely to occur when the ants are well grown, as they cannot make heavy growth without taking the soil.

-In making a selection of an appropriate situation for a garden one should be chosen which will receive throughout the day, but close proximity to large trees should be avoided, as their ever-greedy roots would absorb the nutriment which the vegetables require, and their shade deprive them of light and heat. Vegetables can never be brought to maturity in a retired or shady A garden should be as near the dwelling as possible.

-Timothy and clover have been seeded on the same land, as a rule, almost since they became known, but, as they do not mature at the same time, it is a mistake to grow them together if some other grass can be substituted for the timothy to sow with the clover. Orchard grass blossoms at the same time as clover, and, as it is a grass that seldom fails, grows rapidly and is relished by stock, it should receive more consideration than is given it. It grows in tussocks, but that should be no objection, as it yields well and is adapted to nearly all soils.

-Less water is required when the ration consists largely of concentrated feeds than when large amounts of coarse fodder are consumed. Of course when green, succulent feeds are given the amount of water needed is comparatively small. Horses consume from 25 to 90 pounds of water a day, depending upon the amount of labor they perform. At the Oklahoma station a pair of mules during hot weath-er drank 250 pounds in one day. The feed at that time consisted of kafir corn, ordinary field corn, oats and bran...Orange Judd Farmer.

room on the top floor of the Hale home and heard two reports early that morning. He left the house shortly before 9 o'clock, and, on returning, saw no signs of Mr. and Mrs. Hale and opened the door of their sleeping room. There he saw Mrs. Hale lying, with a bullet wound in her right temple, and her husband on the other side of the bed. Both were dead. Mrs. Hale apparently was shot while asleep.

Hale and his wife were at a theatre that night, and, returning late, ate luncheon at their home. So far as any of their friends know, there had been no quarrels between them. On two or three occasions Miss Madge Hale had called at Hale's home. Hale came to Washington from Scran-ton, and had lived here about 15 years. His wife was a Miss Fannie Rearnon and her home was at Horsehead, near Elmira, N. Y. She first married a man named Francis, who died, and subsequently she became the wife of Hale. He was 52 years

-Good roads are absolutely essential to the development of good schools in the rural districts, and both together are necessary to the progress of civilization in this country. Good roads are scarce, partly because the need of them is not sufficiently recognized and partly because so few know how to make them even when they try. Good schools are scarce for precisely the same reasons. When a country school house looks like an abandoned outbuilding and has the worst piece of road in the neighborhood leading up to it, that dis-trict may always be considered an excellent district in which not to buy a farm. -Prairie Farm.
