Her mind might have been shattered by the contemplation of her hopeless, plight but for her concern about her boy, a bright little chap, who, having lost his father, was the pride and the care of a devoted mother. When she was sent to the asylum, according to Mrs. Whitney's story, the little fellow was sent away to an orphanage or some institution, without her knowledge, and which she has thus far been unable to locate. Nobody would tell her anything definite about her child and her sorrow was pitiable. But it was this that saved her and determined her to escape. She concluded that she must take French leave of the institution that was practically a prison. The buildings and grounds were guarded and the windows of her room barred by heavy gratings. Escape was no easy matte

In this she failed.

DARING LEAP FROM WINDOW.

First of all Mrs. Whitney calculated that she must conduct herself as a model prisoner. She obeyed every rule, made no trouble to inmates or guards and kept her troubles and her plaus to herself. In a short time she knew the routine of the institution perfectly and was ready to attempt an escape. The heavy, shutters of her first floor windows were fastened by screws, and these she could reach from the inside. Waiting till a night when she knew there would be no moon, she took from the dining room table a silver spoon. Secret-ing it until she reached her room, she succeeded in removing the screws that fastened the heavy shutter.

She knew that every night, at a certain moment, the electric current which main . tained the incandescent lights throughout the institution was turned off for a brief space. The current had to be switched at that hour from a dynamo to a storage battery. In that brief moment of absolute darkuess the prisoner planned to escape. The grounds of the institution were pa-trolled by guards. The halls inside were closely watched. But with great care she managed to loosen all the shutter screws, though leaving the frame in its place. Then she sat and waited for the moment when the lights would go out.

The moment of darkness came nearer. The prisoner stood by her window. Her hauds were on the shutters, ready to suatch them away and open a road to freedom.

The light went out. Instantly the little woman tore away the loosened grating, dropping it to the ground, leaped through the window to the ground and ran for life and freedom.

She had so few seconds. In them she must get just as far as possible, but she must not he seen running when the lights on the grounds were , turned on again That would be fatal.

AN EXCITING ESCAPE.

Yet every step she could place between herself and the building was a mile on the road to safety. She ran as long as she dared; she concentrated every onnce of physical power in those precious moments, and when she dared run no longer she slackened in an instant to a calm dignified walk.

That same instant the lights were turn ed on again.

Right ahead of her the fleeing woman saw one of the hospital attendants. Walk-ing with business like tread she passed him and went out of the circle of lights about the grounds.

Lo, the Rich Indian.

Every member of the Osage tribe has a balance of $4,644 deposited in the safest place on earth, in the vaults of Uncle Sam's big bank at Washington, drawing 5 per cent. interest. In addition to this they have each 857 acres of land, says the World to-day, about one-fifth of which is in a good state of cultivation and is worth $10 to $30 an acre.

Of the total remainder, 866,000 acres are eased for pasturage, mostly to Texas cattlemen, at an average rental that gives the land a value of $5 an acre to the Indian. But averaging up the whole at the low valuation of $8 an acre, and this does not take iuto consideration the oil, natural gas and coal to be found throughout that region, nor the leap in values that must follow the several lines of railway now being con structed through the reservation, the land holdings of each Osage are easily worth $6.856

That is to say, a very conservative state ment of the wealth of these people must place it at not less than $11,500 for every man, woman and child of the tribe.

The list of verse writers and artists, some of the very best in the land, who have promised their work to St Nicholas in the next twelve months is a long one. Some of the interesting articles, all of which will be splendidly illustrated, will tell of Japanese athletics for American boys, some queer mail carriers, interesting signs of old London, children in the White House, the Emperor Hadrian's wall, day with Hudson Maxim, how some animals sleep, secret alphabets, diving for pearls, historic dwarfs, and many other fascinating

THE CENTURY FOR 1904.

CAN YOU AFFORD NOT TO HAVE THE CEN TURY THE COMING TWELVE MONTHS.

The Century for 1904 promises a wealth of reading and pictures that surpasses even the high standard achieved during 1903. Perhaps most notable of all the strong features of the volume will be Dr. S. Weir Mitchell's "The Youth of Washington," told in the form of an autobiography. It will be a daring and unique piece of historical work, written as if it were done by General Washington himself, sitting down in Mt. Vernon in his old age and recording, solely for his own eye, the story, of his youthful life.

TINN

Then there will be a series of articles on 'Italian Villas and Their Gardens," written by Edith Wharton and illustrated, largely in color, by Maxfield Parrish. Ernest Thompson Seton has prepared "Fable and Woodmyth," brief papers in a new vein, the illustrations in the author's most fantastic and amusing style. Early numbers will bring John Burroughs's "Current Misconceptions in Natural History." Already have commenced the important Thackeray letters, telling the story of the great novelist's friendship with the Baxter family of New York, with facsimiles of manuscripts and drawings by the author. Ray Stannard Baker, whose articles on the Great Northwest and the Great Southwest have been leading and widely acceptable teatures of recent volumes, will continue his notes on these regions; and there will be valuable contributions by Jacob A. Riis, Dr. James M. Buckley, and scores of other notable writers.

Fiction of the volume will include Jack London's strong new novel "The Sea-Wolf," Maud Wilder Goodwin's clever "Four Roads to Paradise," and a wealth of short stories from Anne Douglas Sedgwick, J. J. Bell, Maurice F. Egan, Roy Rolfe Gilson, E. L. Sabin, S. Weir Mitchell, David Gray, Gouverneur Morris, Albert Bigelow Paine,-the list might be indefinitely lengthened. The artists whose work will appear in the Century for 1904 include the best of the day.

It is not a question for any cultivated thinking man or woman to-day. Can I afford to take the Century this year? The question is rather, Can I aftord NOT to take the Century ?
