A TRUE FAST

Is this a Faste-to keep The larder leane And cleane. From fat of veales and sheep. Is it to quit the dish

Of flesh, yet still To fill The platter high with fish?

Is it to faste an houre. Or rag'd to go, Orshow

A downcast look and sowre? No: 'tis a Faste to dole Thy sheaf of wheat And Meat

Unto the hungry soule Is it to faste from strife. From old debate, And hate. To circumcise thy life

To show a heart grief-rent To starve thy sin, Not bin, And that's to keep thy Lent.

Dead Cities.

Railroads on Kansas Plains Killed Some of Them

An old settler of forty or more years ago, as he travels over the eastern part of Kansas, passes by many historic landmarks, says a Freedonia, Kau., dispatch to the New York Herald.

Cities and town that were staked off on the virgin soil and given some classic name, flaming with circulars, describing the embryo metropolis, were sent east to draw the people and the dollars, are now well cultivated fields, producing fair harvests. The site of Ohio City, once the county seat of Franklin county, is one of these landmarks. In April. 1850, it contained a few general stores, two fair hotels, a black-smith shop, a school house and a dozen or more dwelling houses. Business was good 'and everything lively, with a prospect of corners and painted in glowing colors the coming glories.

One of the great roads leading into the southern part of the territory ran through the principal street of this young city, and an almost endless procession of wagons was continually passing, some going back and in Columbia county, one in Lackawanna others bound for newer fields. The Indians county, one over the Susquehanna river were often seen trailing through the place on some visiting or trading expedition. Marias des Cygnes, in the winter of 1864-1865, and its destiny was forever eclipsed.

Many of its buildings and the county few that were left became the abodes of owls, hats and creeping vermin. The town plot, once so full of promise, is now enclosed in good farms, and the only respectable house left standing is on one of the old "Traveler's Home" has been copverted into a comfortable farm house. Central city, in the western part of Anderson county, was staked off in a beautiful plot of prairie along the Pottawatomie in

Two miles south, at the old emigrant crossing on Middle creek and near the present town of Princeton, stands another old landmark, Bolman's tavern. A great square, weather stained sign board swung from a pole in the front yard and informed the dust covered or mud bespattered pilgrim that this was the 'Traveler's Home." There was scarcely a night in those early days but the old house was well filled with persons in search of some new Eldorado, or going or coming with supplies of goods.

Since the days of railroads have come

1858, by Stephen Marsh and his son. Like many other western towns that sprang up on the frontier in an early day, it was de signed to become a flourishing city. Large results were looked for by those who invested their money in this new place, as good land surrounded the city that was thought would soon be settled by energetic people, while eastern capital would seek the enterprising centre.

A large hotel was erected. Two general stores, carrying a fair stock of goods, did a large business for a new settlement, while eral houses were built, among them a school house, and many farmers were settling on the new lands and opening good farms along the stream. But somehow things did not boom with the speed char-acteristic of the West. The city came to a standstill in the spring of 1860. Some moved away while others came and filled their places. A few were of that restless class of Americans who are never satisfied to remain long in one place. For several years the city had a name of being alive, but it was gradually dying, and the hand of destiny has almost stricken it from the map of Kansas.

Studying the Maple Trees.

Some Problems of Their Yield Being Investigated

Vermont, which is the principal source of maple sugar and syrup, has been study-ing with the aid of the State Experiment Station experts, the cause of the sap-flow, vields and other details of the industry. Maple sugar is a distinctly American product, and the annual crop of the country is said to average 45,000,000 pounds, though this figure shows a decrease from the output of fifty years ago, when the maple sugar communities depended almost entirely on it for their domestic sugar supply Now pure maple syrup, the commercial product being frequently adulterated.commands a fancy price. The Vermont studies have covered most thoroughly every condition of the tree development, including source and direction of sap pressure and flow, the relation of tree temperature to rate of flow, the practical problems of tree tapping and the circumstances influencing sap yield. It was found, as was to have en expected, that certain trees to all appearances identical in size, age and environment yielded widely varying amounts of sap, advantage of which can be taken in selecting stock for new orchards.

-Ed. J. Miller, of Canton, Ohio, has finished erecting a number 2 Miller pasteurizing machine in the Rock Spring cream erv. at Pennsylvania Furnace. This is the ery, at Pennsylvania Furnace. This is the first machine of this kind in this part of the State and is part of the new plant of The W. E. Hoffman company. The entire product goes to Tyrone either as cream for the ice cream factory or made into the famous "Rock Spring" butter.

Jamison's Girl Wife Says He Held Her Prisoner

Fugitive Outlaw's 16-Year-Old Spouse, Now in Jail With Her Two Babies, Tells of Her Life in the

The authorities have temporarily given up the chase after Sherman Jamison, the fugitive slayer of constable Deeghan.

Meanwhile Jamison's girl-wife and her two babies are prisoners in the county jail at Lock Haven. The members of one of the church societies of that city have taken charge of her case, and have given clothes for both herself and children. The woman is only 16 years old, yet the mother of two

Since her marriage seven years ago she has lived in the Sinnemahoning region, where Jamison, by doing odd jobs, gathering ginseng and trapping, earned a precarious livelihood.

Of her family and life she said : "My name before marriage was Amelia Spreach I lived with my parents at DuBois until I was 9 years old, when they gave me to Jamison. Since that he has almost held me prisoner in his cabin. My oldest boy, Willie, is 3 years old, and my other little boy is 18 months."

She can neither read nor write, but he use of the pistol is pronouncedly accurate. She denies that she fired any of the shots that killed Deegan in the duel that occurred in their shack along Sinnemahon-

She predicts that the officers will have a hard time to capture her husband, as he knows every road and path throughout the forests of Central Pennsylvania, and that he can travel by night as readily as by

Mrs. Jamison says, too, that those who attempt his capture can expect to be killed if he is given the opportunity to shoot first.

State Loss $1,000,000.

Must Replace Bridges Swept Away by Flood o Destroyed.

It is conservatively estimated that the cost to the state of re-building bridges destroyed by floods this winter will aggregate $1,000,000. Previous to the flood of last week applications to rebuild had been filed to the amount of $568,000. Contracts for these bridges are awarded by the Public Buildings and Grounds commission, composed of the Governor, Auditor Gena great boom. Men stood on the street eral and State Treasurer. The work is done under the Focht act of 1895, which requires the state to replace all bridges over navigable streams which have been destroyed by fire and flood.

The state officers have arranged to rebuild four bridges in Wayne county, five county, one over the Susquehanna river from the Ottawa reserve, a few miles north, between Columbia and Luzerne counties, one at Blakely Lackawanna county; one over the Shenango river at Sharpsville and The awaited glory of Ohio City passed to the beautiful Ottawa, on the banks of the of the bridges which will be rebuilt in Columbia county will take the place of a bridge recently built by the state at a cost of thousands of dollars. The state officers offices were removed to Ottawa and the have not vet received application to rebuild the Catawissa and other bridges carried away by the recent flood in the Susquehamna and other streams. The state has already expended more than $1,000,-000 in building bridges under this act, and the well tilled farms of P. P. Mr. Smith's Homecoming.

The man who is greeted on his return vitals of a man like President Smith, of the Mormon church, whose entrance to the bosom of his families after his recent trip to Washington is thus described by a correspondent at Salt Lake City:

His five wives and thirty-two of his forty-two children awaited his coming at the Bee Hive House. President Smith kissed Mrs. Juliana Smith warmly and his embrace with Mrs. Edna Sampson Smith, sister of Juliana, lasted four minutes. Then he greeted his other wives fondly and kissed a few of the younger children. After a three-hour session all together, the wives departed to their respective homes, where later their husband each a formal visit." This affecting scene should be brought to the attention of the Committee on Privileges and Elections of the United States Senate, which has under consideration the fate of Mr. Smoot. Buffalo Bill Asks Divorce.

Alleges that His Wife Tried to Poison Him.

petition for divoice filed in the district court of Big Horn county, Wyoming, January 9th last, by Colonel William F. Cody (Buffalo Bill), has just been made public

The complainant charges cruelty, and alleges that on December 26th, 1900, Mrs. Cody attempted to poison the plaintiff. Another ground on which plaintiff asks a decree is that the marital relation has been made intolerable to him at his former home at North Platte, Neb.

Mrs. Cody's answer is due April 2nd. It is claimed by Mrs. Cody's friends in North Platte, Neb.. where she is residing that "Buffalo Bill" has not visited her in the past two years. When their daughter, Mrs. Thorpe died a few weeks ago, some of the relatives hoped that this would bring them together for the remaining years of Pulse Bents.

The rate of the pulse in males at different ages is as follows: At hirth, 136 beats per minute; at 5 years, 83 beats per minute; between 10.15 years, 78 beats per minute; between 15-20 years, 60.5 beats per minute; between 20-25 years, 60.7 beats per minute; between 25-30 years, 71 beats per minute; between 30-50 years, 70 beats per minute.

In female the rate is from 1 to 4-5 beats faster per minute. Slow walking raises the pulse from 10 to 20 heats, while rapid running may raise it to 140. This rise may last from half an hour to an hour. Eating raises the pulse from 8 to 20 heats: without wine, 13.1; with wine, 17.5. In the morning the pulse is 10 beats higher than at night. When the barometer rises 5 inches the pulse increases 1.3 per min-ute. If the pulse be 66.6 while lying down, it will be 70 when sitting and 78.9

Cooking for the Sick

Too many home nurses are apt to "ring the changes" on beef tea and mutton broth and it is therefore little wonder that the average invalid gets tired of "sloppy" foods, and the appetite becomes jaded. One of secrets of successful diet treatment of the invalid is to give as much variety as possible. I therefore give a few good recipes which are of a nourishing and digestible nature, and will also please the palate when foods of a more substantial nature would excite distaste.

Veal broth, for instance, is a pleasant change from the ordinary broth made from mutton. An excellent method of prepar ing this is to place two pounds of knuckle of veal, cracked into pieces, into two quarts of water. Let it simmer slowly over the fire in a covered vessel until it is reduced to one quart. Strain, and season with a little salt. Meanwhile soak three tablespoonfuls of sago in a cup of cold water, heat by setting the dish in a pan of boiling water for half an hour, and stir occasionally. Put the strained broth into a double boiler, and add the warm sago to it. Cook for about half an hour, then stir it into a teacup of cream, heated to the boiling point and the well-beaten yokes of two fresh eggs. Let all come to a boil, then remove from the fire at once, and serve as soon as possible.

Beef and sago make a very nourishing broth. Have two pounds of gravy beef cut into small pieces, and put into a saucepan with two quarts of water. Cover, and cook slowly, until the goodness is all extracted from the meat. Ssrain, and add a little salt. Meanwhile soak a teacupful of sago in water, enough to cover it; add it to the strained broth, return the broth to the fire, and let it simmer one hour. Add the yokes of two eggs, heaten very lightly. Let it remain a moment and take from the fire. Serve at once with small squares of toast.

Cream soups are a pleasing change after plain broths or teas. Sage, tapioca, barley or rice may be used. Take any white stock that is rich and well seasoned, put into a saucepan a half-pint of the stock and the same quantity of cream. When it comes to a boil, add one tablespoonful of flour, thoroughly moistened with cold milk, and let it hoil up once. Have the tapioca or whatever you wish to use in the soup cooked, and add it to the sonp and serve. Barley requires two bours to cook, rice one hour Sago and tapioca must be soaked in cold water half an hour, and cooked the same length of time.

Chicken jelly may be used in a variety of ways. To make the jelly, take a fowl weighing about three pounds, clean and remove the skin and fat. Cut it into pieces. and put them into a saucepan with two full quarts of water, a bay-leaf and some pieces of celery. Cover and heat slowly up to the boiling-point. Let it simmer for four hours. Then season with salt, strain into glasses, and set away to cool. When cold, remove the fat. This jelly may be used cold or heated, and served like soup. Pieces of the white meat of the fowl may be cut fine and put into a jelly-jar, and the liquid jelly poured over them. When cold, it is appetizing sliced and put between thin pieces o bread and butter.

Boiled rice with egg is generally liked. Wash thoroughly a breakfastcupful of rice, and put it into a double boiler with enough water to cover it. When the rice is nearly THE TESTIMONY OF BELLEFONTE PEChome from afar by only one wife and half a done, if any water remains, pour it off, and a dozen babies or less can have only a faint add one breakfastcupful of milk and a little idea of the joy which percolates among the salt. Let the rice cook very slowly until done. Beat a new-laid egg thoroughly and the last thing, before taking the rice from the fire, stir in the egg as lightly as possi-Serve bot, with sugar or cream.

> Tapioca jelly is excellent. To prepare it, soak one breakfastcupful of tapioca in three cups of cold water overnight. In the morning put it in a double boiler with a cup of hot water, and let it simmer until perfectly clear, stirring often. Sweeten to taste, and flavor with the juice of half a lemon and two tablespoonfuls of wine Pour into cups and set away until perfect ly cold. Whipped cream and sugar may be served with this jelly.

> Wine whey is excellent for an invalid. For it you will need : milk, two-thirds of a pint; water, one-third of a pint; wine, one gill; sugar, a dessertspoonful. Place milk and water in a deep pan, and when it be gins to boil pour in the wine and sugar stirring assiduously when it boils for twelve or fifteen minutes. Lastly, strain through a sieve. It may be drunk either hot or cold a glassful at a time.

> For condensed beef tea take one pound of fresh beef, free from fat, cut it into small pieces; put it in a jar covered tightly, or a hottle, and set it into a sancepan or pot of cold water. Let the water hoil steadily for three or four hours, or until the meat is white, the juice having been all drawn out. Season with salt to the taste. When cold skim, and then serve to the patient hot or cold as is preferred. Sometimes a tea or tablespoonful of this can be taken by the patient when nothing else can. As much boiling water as is used in quantity of the extract can be added to make it more like a drink.

In the many articles which have come to my notice in reference to the care of the intheir life; but the couple is reported to have traveled with the body of their daughter from Seattle to Rochester and then back to Wyoming without exchanging a word. might in a great measure be avoided by the doing of little things which give comfort and rest enough to invite sleep. Let me take you into the average sick-room under home care. The sufferer has been in a bed perhaps, all day, the sheets are warm and wrinkled, and the bed anything but comfortable, the air is close, and even the room has a tired look. The bed should he remade, and whenever possible, the upper sheet should be exchanged for a cool aired one. This does not mean more washing, but simply using two upper sheets, one for the day the other for the night. Whenever the patient is strong enough for the change have day and night garments, always placing the night garments in the sun to air when taken off in the morning.

Nothing is more restful to a tired invalid than to have the hands and face bathed with warm water with a few drops of cau de cologne or lavender-water in it, and to have the hair gently brushed and braided. Never forget, too, to have a thorough change of air the last thing at night. When it is necessary to open the windows in the sick-room, remember to protect the invalid by placing a soft, light woolen shawl round the head and an extra wrap over the body.

Perhaps, owing to the poor circulation, he patient has cold feet; then must come the hot water indiarubber bag, which should be protected by a soft flannel cover. A cool smooth hed and freshly-bathed face and hands are excellent incentives to sleep, but you can court it still further by nourishment. A cupful of hot milk or gruel or bouillon will be nutritious, and have a tendency to produce sleep. One thing which spoils many an otherwise good night is bad or disturbing news. Keep anything of that nature until the beginning of another day if it must be told at all. Let the last hour of each day be the pleasantest of the twen-ty-four. Then "Nature's sweet restorer, balmly sleep," shall come to the tired, aching body, bringing strength for the new day that nothing else can give.
