FARM NOTES.

-When making a garden have a place for herbs, such as sage, thyme, balm, dill, weet marjoran, etc. They will always be ound useful and may be grown from seed.

-While the matted row system for strawberries is preferred by the majority of growers, yet it will be an advantage to train the first runners to grow in rows (and not have the rows very wide) by cutting off the late runners that appear.

-The root crops are among the most im portant grown. So far as actual food value is concerned they do not rank high, but they are always relished by stock in winter because they afford a change of food, thus promoting the appetite and keeping the animals in condition.

-The heat in a hive of bees when the weather is very warm is increased by the animal heat given off from the bodies of the insects. This should remind those who have bees that the hive must be in the shade or the colony will become re-duced by disease. The most honey is only secured when the colonies are large and healthy.

-Guessing at the product of a cow is very common. Farmers can very easily arrive at a knowledge of the amount of milk produced, but it is not so easy to know how much food has been consumed unless it is weighed. The cost of the food is also another item to chserve, and by fully understanding the receipts and expenses of each cow the most unprofitable in the herd can be disposed of.

-When the patrons of the creamery formerly took their milk to the creameries, and were paid by the can, irrespective of quality, there was no inducement for them to improve the quality of milk. Since the advent of the milk tester each patron's milk can be judged as to the proportion of butter fat it contains. The method of testing for butter before it is churned is sure to give correct results, and will do much in forcing farmers to improve their stock and thereby get rid of the scrubs.

-No man onght to be employed to drive or care for a team that is not naturally fond of horses. If he does not like them he will not study their wants or habits, and will be likely to neglect and spoil a good team. Such a man ought to drive mules or oxen, or to work out his living with a spade or pick. It does not take a careless or heedless man long to spoil more horse flesh than his wages amount to in a season. A bad-tempered man will spoil the temper of the best horse.

-Clean out the feet of horses when they come in from the field after the day's work is done, and brush out the fetlocks, the neck and breast, and if there is any sign of tenderness bathe with salt water, or vinegar and water. If the work horses do not go out into the pasture to get grass occa-sionally give each a pound of carrots or mangels two or three times a week. No work horse should be fed dusty bay. The cattle can eat it, but it clogs the lungs of the horses and brings on coughs that may become troubleson

-It is not looking for too much in a herd of cows to have every animal yield 2500 quarts in a year, but the value of the milk will depend upon the amount of but-When the herd is deficient in ter derived. the production of milk or butter there is but one remedy for the evil, and that is to breed for better cows. The trough is very important, but the main point that should be kept in view is the advantage of breeding for the characteristics sought. When the capacity of the cows is increased the farmer can convert a larger proportion of bulky foods into beef, milk and butter. --Corp ensilage weighs from 40 to 50 pounds per cubic foot, depending mainly on the height of the ensilage above it and the compression to which it is subjected. Probably 40 to 45 cubic feet will be the usual bulk of a ton of ensilage. It is worth fully one third the value of hay, ton for ton, though it is rather cheaper for most farmers to put up three tons of ensilage, including cutting it, than one ton of hav, as all the way from 15 tons or more tons of succulent corn fodder can be grown on land where it would be difficult to cut two tons of meadow hay. -There has always been some doubt in regard to the propriety of sowing clover hay very early in the spring. At the Michigan station seed was sown on plots every growing month in the year by way of experiment. That seeded in March did fairly well, but the plots seeded in April, May, June and July did better, the August plants not growing very large. The amount of rain and other conditions were not stated. The results do not accord with those obtained by farmers in this section, as the March seed seems to thrive best. -It is a mistake to plant field beets in uarrow rows, so that all the work has to be done by hand. There is a little hand labor needed while the plants are small, but af-ter that all the work of cultivation cau be hest done with the cultivator. If the horse is careful and steady, a width of two feet between the rows is sufficient for all the kinds of beets. But their tops will grow so large as to completely shade the soil between. The mangel wurtzel grows still larger, and should be planted in rows two feet six inches or two feet ten inches apart, and thinned to ten inches apart in the rows. Even at this distance the mangel tops will completely shade the ground, and the roots will grow so that they will nearly or quite touch each other. By thus using horse labor for cultivation the beet crop may be very easily and cheaply grown. -The breed fowls are said to be divided The breed lowis are said to be divided into sitters and non-sitters. It is true that certain breeds, such as the Leghous, never sit, while other breeds, of which the Light Brahma may be selected, hatch one or more broods in a year. Can this sitting propensity be controlled? It is possible to a certain extent. Try the following ex-periment, which has been tested by many who were successful: Have a pen of Light Brahmas and one of Brown Leghorns (sep-arate), using pure breeds. Feed the Brah-mas wholly on nitrogenous food, and keep them in exercise by compelling them to scratch for all they get. They will proh-ably lav from early in the year until monlt-ing. Feed the Leghorns mostly on grain and give them very little exercise; allow them to get fat, and the result will be that the Brahmas will sit. The reason that some certain breeds do not sit is that they into sitters and non-sitters. It is true that certain breeds, such as the Leghous, never sit, while other breeds, of which the Light the Brahmas will sit. The reason that some certain breeds do not sit is that they easily become fat, and are less active. The maternal, or sitting, instinct exists in all hens, but fat on the body is nature's pro-vision for their support and warmth while on the nest, and until the hen is so pro-vided she seldom sits. The provision is a wibse one, for the sitting hen remains close-ly to her nest, seldom coming off for food. ROBBED THE GRAVE.—A startling inci-dent, is narrated by John Oliver, of Phila-delphia, as follows: "I was in an awful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongne coated, pain continu-ally in back and sides, no appetite, growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Then I was advised to use Electric Bitters; to my great joy, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they robbed am now a well man. I know they robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cents, guaranteed at Green's drug store.
