From the Chicago Tribune (Rep.) The pension policy of the United States is too liberal, and that of the German Empire too niggardly. Last year this country paid $130,000,000 to soldiers who served in the Civil war or to their widows and children. Germany paid a little over $2,500,000 to invalid soldiers who served in the war with France which made the German Empire. The Scoretary of the Interior in his last report estimated the number of survivors of the Union armies mick. at 900,000. Of these 700,000 draw pensions. There are still living 600,000 of the men who fought for Germany a third of a century ago. Of these only 88,641 are aided out of the Imperial Treasury.

There the average pension is $28.56 a ear. Here it is $133.49. These are indeed striking differences.
