It is with exceeding regret that we announce the illness of Mr. S. H. Williams, one of our best citizens. For the past ten days he had been suffering with what appeared to be rheumatism in his left arm but on Tuesday night it developed that it was the fore-runner of a slight stroke of paralysis which affected his entire side. While his condition was quite serious for a few days he had recovered sufficiently to be up for a little while yesterday.

State's Forty-Fourth Annual Commencement

It is scarcely within the memory of the oldest attendant that such weather as favored the forty-fourth annual commencement exercises at The Pennsylvania State College has been equalled. From the bacalaureate on Sunday until the last good-bye had been said by the class of 1904 on Wednesday hardly a cloud flecked the perfect blue of the heavens. The usual Sunday afternoon thunder shower even failed to materialize, leaving the week as near ideal as could be imagined.

Though State graduated the largest class ever sent out on Wednesday and another of the series of magnificent new buildings that is being erected was thrown open the attendance was not quite as large as that of last year. And the question arose in our mind as to whether the cause might not be traced to the business depression; especially as being accountable for the small number of old students who returned to their Alma Mater. By this we would not have you infer that there was any appreciable falling off in the attendance, but inasmuch as the last decade has been one of monstrous strides at State when the percentage of increase is not maintained there is a natural inquiry as to the cause.

BACCALAUREATE SUNDAY

Baccalaureate Sunday held far more of interest this year than ever before for student and visitor. For in addition to the usual sermon in the Schwab auditorium in the morning at 10:30, when the Rev. Dr. Lawrence M. Coffelt, of Philadelphia, preached to the class of 1904, there was a sacred concert in the evening and a song service on the campus.

ON MONDAY

Before the first exercises of Monday were begun many more visitors had joined the crowd of strangers who had arrived on Saturday and Sunday and by two o'clock, when the graduating class held their class day exercises on the front campus the grounds were alive with earnest, proud parents and happy sisters and sweethearts of the students. The class of 1904 carried out their interesting program and planted the vine that is hoped will be a living memorial of their last days at State.

Immediately after these exercises the dual field sports between the Carlisle Indians and the blue and white athletes took place on Beaver field. The grand stand, bleachers and side lines were crowded with interesting spectators to cheer the contestants in the thirteen events that were scheduled. The points were so evenly carried that it remained for the very last one to decide the meet and when Arnold of State captured second place in the 220 yds dash the great tension of suspense was released and a mighty cheer went up when it was announced that the home athletes had scored 54 points to 50 for the visitors. Especially in the running events were the finishes exciting. Several college records were broken, notably among them being Saupder's pole vault of 10ft 9 1/2 inches.

In the evening the Junior orators, six in number, held their contest in the auditorium: They spoke as follows: Richard De C. Barclay, of Philadelphia, on "The Work of the Scientist"; J. J. Morgan, of Scandia, on "The Investment of a Life"; Paul M. Rainey, of Laceyville, on "The Menace to American Citizenship"; William B. Hoke, of Cumberland, on "The New Social Ideal"; Reuben H. H. August, of Pine Grove, on "The Evils of Our Labor System"; George L. Christian, of Reading, on "The Industrial Statesman." All of the orations were well thought out and prepared, but there seemed to be an absence of the argumentative and conviction that is carried by forceful delivery. In truth Mr. Rainey was about the only one of the speakers who presented his theme in a manner oratorical, thus making the finding of the judges quite easy and their announcement that he had won met with popular favor. Mr. August was given honorable mention.

TUESDAY'S PROGRAM

The exercises on Tuesday opened with an address before the Phi Kappa Phi, the honor society, by Prof. John F. Crowell, Ph. D., expert on economics in the U. S. Department of Commerce. He spoke to a small, though appreciative audience in the chapel. His subject was "Maritime Expansion" and proved a very interesting as well as a highly instructive discourse on the opening of new fields of industry through the possible supremacy of American shipping interests.

At noon the Alumni luncheon was served in the armory. Over five hundred covers were laid and after the various courses were served by caterer Harrison, Gen. Beaver, who is the permanent toastmaster, called the diners to listen to very happy little talks by Prof. Benjamin Gill, Mr. A. A. Patterson '89, of Pittsburg; Rev. Edgar Heckman, of State College; Wade H. Barnes, 1904, of Brooklyn; and Dr. George W. Atherton, the president of the college. The meeting of the Alumni Association, which was held immediately after the luncheon, resulted in the choice of Mr. Ellis L. Orvis as the Alumni trustee to succeed himself. The meeting was also productive of a very much desired movement toward the promotion of a closer relationship between the graduates of State and their Alma Mater.

While the delegates and Alumni were meeting to elect trustees the exhibition drill of the cadet battalion was being executed on Beaver field. It was decidedly spectacular, more so than ever before. For in addition to the usual evolutions and manual there was a sham battle in which the Japs made an attack on Port Arthur, carrying that seemingly impregnable fortress with a rush and judging from the manner in which they made Russians desert their artillery they must be rushing yet. The Red Cross ambulance, that was dragged about by a jolly old mule that evidenced more strenuously than Roosevelt ever dared show on San Juan hill, was kept busy picking up the wounded soldiers.

The day's interesting program was brought to a close by the reproduction of "The House of Trouble," the play in which the Thespians scored such a success during their spring tour.

COMMENCEMENT DAY

There were just seventy-five members in the class of 1904 who having completed their course were graduated and decorated with the degree of B. S. on Wednesday morning. The exercises were held in the spacious new auditorium which seems to grow in beauty and impressiveness every day.

The orators of the class were Thomas J. Bryson, of West Leisenring, who spoke on "Some Tendencies in Technical Education"; Mahlon Jacob Rentschler, of Centertown, on "The Triumph of Law"; C. S. Bomberger, of Swatara Station, "Decision of Character"; Peter J. Morrissey, of Franklin, on "Liberty and Corporations"; and John D. Elder, of Elder's Ridge, "What Shall be Done with the Turk" concluding with the valedictory which was a masterpiece of effectiveness and beauty.

The commencement address was delivered by the Rev. William Elliott Griffis, of Ithaca, N. Y., and was on the spirit and characteristics of the Japanese.

At its conclusion Mr. Robert Wallace Wray, for the class of 1904, formally presented the fine tower clock to the College. It was received on behalf of the Board of Trustees by Gen. Beaver. The clock is something that the College has always stood in need of. The idea of presenting it was conceived by some of the members of 1904 in their Sophomore year and ever since that time they had been saving their "damage" fund until it finally reached the $800 required to pay for the gift. The clock is of the best workmanship and is so constructed as to have four dials in the tower of old Main as well as bells that ring simultaneously the hour and half-hour in all of the class rooms and halls. The dials are lighted by night and are 5ft. 6in. in diameter; on each one of them being emblazoned the memorial to the class of 1904. The gift is one that will prove a more constant reminder of the class that was graduated on Wednesday than almost anything else that could be done at State College.

The last exercise of the morning was the announcement of honors and prizes as follows: First Honors: Thomas Junk Bryson, Paul Olin Noble, John Franklin Trittle. Second Honors: Christian Smith Bomberger, William Jenkins Dorworth, Maurice Leland Gray, John Paul Kottcamp, Harry Scott Lightcap, Robert Harley Lyons, Norman Greenawald Miller, Earle Bertram Norris, Alvin Kuhns Rieger, Leroy Eben Shaner, Charles Henry Swanger. The John W. White fellowship was awarded to John P. Kottcamp; the medal to John F. Trittle; the Senior scholarship to Wm. B. Hoke, the Agriculture prize to A. K. Rieger and the McAllister prize to R. B. Gerhardt.

The surprise of the day was the conferring of the degree of Doctor of Science on Prof. Wm. A. Buckhout and to no one was it more of a surprise than to the worthy recipient himself. Assistant professor Tuttle was raised to a full professorship.

At 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon Mr. Samuel Craig Huston, of Philadelphia, on behalf of Mr. Joseph M. Huston, presented to the College the splendid replica of George Gray Barnard's "Hewer" which attracted so much attention in the foyer of the auditorium. It is a copy of one of Barnard's masterpieces and is a most fitting ornament for the most magnificent building on the grounds.

During the afternoon those of the commencement guests who remained for the farewell reception for the Seniors in the armory in the evening were entertained by a base ball game between the State team and the Williamsport State Leaguers in which the latter won by the score of 5 to 3. While the Carnegie library is completed and the first wing of the new Agricultural building ready for occupancy neither building was dedicated during the week because of the fact that Mr. Andrew Carnegie and other distinguished gentlemen whose attendance is desired, could not find it convenient to be at the College just at this time. These events will likely be the occasion of a notable gathering at the institution in the early fall at which time both buildings will be properly described.

Mrs. Emanuel Karstetter, of near Coburn, suffered a second stroke of paralysis on Saturday.

Frank E. Bieckford, of Lock Haven, has applied for a patent on a composition for making hollow concrete building brick.

Sedgwick Kistler, of Lock Haven, has just received a new Pope-Toledo automobile from Boston that cost him $4,500.

Sunday was one of nature's most ideal productions and it is needless to say that Bellefonters liverymen had more business than they could handle.

John Long Jr., of Madisonburg, has succeeded John F. Miller as driver of the Madisonburg-Millheim stage line. The latter resigned to take a position with the Osborne binder company.

James Gardner was killed in the Clarion paper mill, at Johnsonburg, on the 6th inst. He was a native of Eggleville, this county, and his body was taken to his old home there for interment.

A LITTLE GIRL DROWNED.—On Friday afternoon another of those distressing accidents that bring a pall of sorrow over an entire community, and cause unspeakable grief to those most directly affected, occurred in this place.

Louise Toner, golden curled, chubby, blue-eyed dear little 4 year old daughter of liveryman James Toner fell into the swiftly flowing race that runs along Phoenix street, near the Pennsylvania Match Co's No 1 factory. Her parents live on Willowbank street, near there, and she was playing along the water. No one saw the accident but one of George Waite's little boys who ran to give the alarm. By the time any one responded to his call, however, the little body had been carried clear out of sight by the relentless waters and no one could tell whether it had drifted. Finally it was discovered in the main stream just above the falls near this office and Ed Gehret plunged to the rescue. She was carried out to shore and Dr. M. A. Kirk summoned as speedily as possible.

Immediately upon his arrival systematic work of resuscitation was begun and later Dr. John Sebring arrived to assist. For an hour they worked, but all to no purpose for the last spark of life had been drowned out and could not be brought back.

Then the little body was taken to the parental home on Willowbank street where to the distress of a mother sick almost to death with pneumonia and two children just recovering from typhoid fever was added this most poignant sorrow.

Her parents, two brothers and two sisters survive her. Interment was made in St. John's Catholic cemetery Sunday afternoon.

A BAD DAGG.—Dominio Constance, the Hungarian who served a term in jail for making drunken advances to a daughter of David Rothrock, of Buffalo Run, was put behind the bars again on Monday, charged with arson. He was released from jail on April 24th. The following night Mr. Rothrock's large farm barn was burned to the ground, with all of its contents. Suspicion pointed to Constance as the incendiary but nothing definite could be fastened on him.

On Sunday night John Grove was driving by Rothrock's home on his way to call a doctor and saw a bright flame suddenly illuminate the interior of an out kitchen, which adjoins the residence. At the same time he heard the noise of a man running from the building, who climbed a fence and disappeared in the darkness. Grove quickly aroused the Rothrock family, who were fast asleep, and by hard work the fire was extinguished and the building saved. An examination showed that the contents of an oil can were emptied on a couch and the match was applied to it as Grove was approaching on the road.

On Monday Mr. Rothrock came to town and had a warrant issued for Constance, and detective Rightmour secured the shoes Constance wore Sunday night. They fit exactly in the tracks leading from the quarry where the Hun lives to Rothrock's across a newly plowed field. Leading back they show that the man was running. Both tracks are alike in print, ten inches in length, and fit the shoes. This, with other evidence, satisfies the authorities that they have the right man.

Constance is considered a vicious man and ever since his release from jail the Rothrock family has been in constant dread of him, as he frequently expressed an intent for vengeance.

THE SHAFFER-HAZEL REUNION.—The second annual reunion of the Shaffer and Hazel families, which was held at Hecla park, on Wednesday, demonstrates that the organization formed at Penns Cave last year will likely grow to be one of the large and important annual gatherings of the county. There were at least five hundred people on the grounds and the day was very pleasant spent in renewing old family ties and discovering new ones.

At the business session of the reunion association Miss Allison, as chairman, made the report for the historical committee, after former sheriff B. F. Shaffer, of Nitany, had called the assemblage to order. The Hon. Frederick Kirtz delivered the historical address at the afternoon session. He was followed by Dr. H. C. Holloway and Rev. Crow, both of whom spoke in congratulation of the large and honorable citizenship that traces its ancestry back to the early Shaffers and Hazels.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, B. F. Shaffer; secretary, Ammon Hazel; treasurer, Uriah Hazel. Executive committee: J. B. Hazel, Bigler Shaffer, M. F. Hazel, S. H. Shaffer and Ellis Shaffer, chairman. The members of the historical committee are the same as chosen last year.

SQUIRE J. H. REIFSNYDER STRICKEN WITH APOPLEXY.—Squire John H. Reifsnyder, the well-known Millheim financier and citizen, was stricken with apoplexy in the Columbus hotel, in Lock Haven, on Monday night. He was in Bellefonte during the day and appeared in his usual health. He went on to Lock Haven to transact some business there and upon his arrival at the hotel complained of feeling unwell. Not regarding his condition as serious he retired without consulting a physician and in the morning was unable to get up.

Dr. Armstrong, who was called to his bedside, discovered that he was on the verge of apoplexy. The patient requested that he be taken to the hospital, where he later lapsed into a state of unconsciousness. His condition yesterday was reported as being slightly improved.

CONGRATULATIONS, SUPT. THOMAS.—Supt. F. H. Thomas, of the Bellefonte Central R. R. may well be proud of the following article which appears in a recent issue of the New York News Bureau and reflects considerable credit on his economic and judicious management of the rail-road under his supervision.

The thirteenth annual report of the Bellefonte Central Railroad is about as complete a publication of its kind as it has ever been the pleasure of the Bureau to read. Details of the operations of the road are so thoroughly covered in the report that the stockholder is enabled, at a glance, to know not only the exact status of the property in which he is interested, but also the manner in which practically every dollar of expense was diverted. In truth he is made as fully acquainted with the current improvements and progress of the road and the condition of its rolling stock and motive power as if he had covered the ground by a personal inspection.

While it would be impossible for a larger corporation to go so largely into intricate details, the little Bellefonte report should serve as an object lesson to other corporations who exist by the subscriptions of their shareholders but deny the latter all but the most meager information, apparently regarding them as a detriment rather than as the foundation for the up-building of the company, and to whom they are compelled to turn in days of trouble or embarrassment.

The Bellefonte Central operates between Bellefonte and Pine Grove Mills, Pa. The capitalization is $500,000, par $50. No dividends have ever been paid but it is estimated that a disbursement may be made this year.

The directors are well known Philadelphians.

At the residence of Mr. Thomas Eckenroth, near Unionville, Pa., at 11:30 a. m., June 8th, 1904, Mr. S. Lundy Lucas and Miss Caroline M. After the dinner the bride and groom started on a western tour which will include the St. Louis exposition.

Dr. Coffelt, of Philadelphia, gave us another treat in his sermon on "Have no thought of the morrow."
