Elihu Root is Premier.

Oyster Bay, July 8.—Official announcement was made here yesterday that Elihu Root had been appointed Secretary of State.
The announcement was made yesterday on authority of President Roosevelt in a statement given out by Secretary Loeb.
"Elihu Root has accepted the tender by the President of the Secretaryship of State. He will take the oath of office in a couple of weeks, but it will necessarily be some time before he closes up his business affairs. He will not go to Washington permanently until some time in September."

THE PRESIDENTIAL BEE.

The general impression of politicians in Washington is that Mr. Root has decided to become a candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination in 1908. It is figured out that he can get the vote of New York, and with New York and the administration behind him it is assumed he will become a very formidable candidate.
Those familiar with the situation consider it is not reasonable to believe that Mr. Root, after once resigning his official position and resuming the practice of law would throw it all over in so short a time and return to Washington at the head of the State Department merely to oblige his friend Theodore Roosevelt and to fulfill his conception of the duty of an American citizen.

SIGNIFICANT OBSERVATIONS.

It is this that has given every Presidential aspirant whose name has been coupled even casually with the magic figures "1908" the worst sort of cold chills. They remember the remarkable eulogy paid to Elihu Root by President Roosevelt when his Secretary of War retired to private life less than two years ago; they observe the manner in which the President urged the portfolio of state upon Mr. Root, and they entertain no delusions as to what the chief executive's influence will be upon the delegates to the 1908 convention.
Mr. Root is more feared by aspirants to the Presidential nomination in 1908 than any other man. They feel that no public speaker of today can go after an audience and capture it as can Mr. Root.

PRESIDENT GRATIFIED.

President Roosevelt is much gratified at Mr. Root's acceptance and is deeply sensible of the personal sacrifices made by Mr. Root in again taking up the burdens and duties of a member of the Cabinet.
It is the intention of Mr. Root to assume the duties of Secretary of State practically at once although it will be perhaps two weeks before he formally will take the oath of office. His private interests are so large he will have to devote considerable time to a satisfactory arrangement of them before he goes to take permanent charge of the State Department.

Short Story of Long Life.

There is probably no better known or more beloved citizen in Central Pennsylvania than Thomas Waddle, of Jersey Shore. He will be eighty-six years old in August, but is still in the best of health. During all his long life he has never met with an accident and has at all times enjoyed fairly good health. In the years of '60 and '61 he was county treasurer and lived at Williamsport. Mr. Waddle has furnished The Watchman with the following "short story of a long life," as he happily expressed it.

"I was born in Centre county on the 13th of August, 1819, at a place known as the Rock Iron Works, owned and operated by my grandfather, Gen. Philip Benner. It consisted of a furnace, two forges, a rolling mill, nail factory and a mill and saw mill, all near each other and on the waters of Spring creek, about five miles from Bellefonte. My father was chief manager of the works. My grandfather was born in 1760 and I can remember his telling me of the time when he hauled supplies to Washington's army.

"My father died on Feb. 5, 1825, and my mother in April of 1854. There were nine children, six of whom are dead. Besides myself two sisters are living, the elder of whom is eighty-eight years of age and the younger over eighty.
"In our day we had but little chance to acquire an education. There were but three months schooling in a year. Each family paid for their own children. The system being very different from that in use today. Our school houses were generally built of logs. The seats were made of slabs, with the smooth sides turned up. The writing desks were wide boards nailed against the wall. Pens were goose quills, cut and mended by the schoolmaster, who also set the copies. The older scholars were required to chop the wood, and the younger children to carry it in and pile it in a corner of the room.
"On Oct. 23, 1845, I married Miss Webb of Jersey Shore. For three years we lived in Centre county and moved to Jersey Shore on June 9, 1849, where I have lived ever since, except the two years of '60 and '61, when I lived in Williamsport, serving as treasurer of the township. How much I would like to see the beads given so many years ago, to look upon the signatures of those three friends, who, of their own free will and accord, were my bondsmen!
"My wife died on Oct. 29, 1873, we having been married one day over twenty-eight years. We had five children, all of them boys. Three are dead, and the other two live in Jersey Shore. Since my wife's death I have made my home with my eldest son, and am trying to live a peaceful and contented life.
"My first vote was cast for the elder William H. Harrison in 1840 and I have been able to vote at every presidential election since, sixteen in all. I would not forget to render thanks to the Giver of all things for his care over me. I have realized, in a measure, the blessings set forth in the ninety first Psalm."

He Had Much Dignity of Bearing and Beauty of Face.

Soon after the Confederates began to enter the town (Elizabethtown) I met a friend of mine, the son of Dr. Doyle, who told me that his father had just been sent for to see Lee and that I might go, too, if I ran as fast as my small legs could carry me, and we found the doctor just starting. Dr. Doyle was a man who had been in communication with the enemy from the beginning of the war, but had so far managed to escape the fate of many innocent men. Two of his sons had been arrested a short time before and were lying in jail when their friends arrived and set them free.
The doctor was in his old rig and, being an immense man, left no room for any one else in it, so we two boys sat on the springs behind it. It was on the Williamsport pike, about half a mile from the town, that we met General Lee. He had dismounted and was standing by his horse, a small sorrel mare, which, I was told, it was his custom to ride on to the march. His staff was brilliant in gold lace, but he was very simply dressed. No one could have seen that man without being greatly impressed with the dignity of his bearing and the beauty of his face. His hair at this time was almost entirely white, and those who had seen him the year before said he had aged greatly in the short space of time which had elapsed since the battle of Antietam. I could not help thinking of Washington as I looked at that calm, sad face. It has been said since by those who were near him that he had no expectation of conquering the north and that at the most he only hoped to win a great battle on northern soil in order to affect public opinion in Europe and lead to the recognition of the Southern Confederacy. However that may be, there was nothing about his bearing which looked like a great hope.
—Rev. Dr. Leighton Park in Century.

There'll Be No Pie.

An energetic pastor who was making preparations to build a new church received all kinds of advice from parishioners, and the greatest amount came from those who had contributed the least toward the erection of the church. So at the regular services on the following Sunday he said:
"I have been receiving lots of advice during the last few weeks. I have been told by certain members of the congregation that it will not do to have too many fingers in the pie. I can assure you that I will attend to that part of it. There will be no pie."
—Harper's Weekly.

The Way of It.

"Who is that brightly girl over there?"
"That's Miss Jones, who took part in the amateur theatricals last night."
"And who are those nineteen tired looking women near her?"
"Those are her mother, sisters, aunts and cousins who helped her to get ready!"

Holman Hunt's Paintings.

Mr. Holman Hunt spent seven years on his great painting "The Triumph of the Innocents," and then was not at all satisfied with it, while "The Shadow of Death" took him three years.

The Indian's Bait Was Good, but the White Man Didn't "Bite."

With the Apaches a really brave man does not stand as high in public estimation as does a clever thief. His chief excellence, from an Apache standpoint, lies in his ability to outwit the white man, says Mr. Cremony, the author of "Life Among the Apaches."

I was sitting, says Mr. Cremony, in front of my tent, writing a letter, when a young Apache came up and asked what I was doing. I replied I was talking to my friend in Washington.
"How can you talk to your friend so far away?"
"When an Apache wishes to talk of speed to a distant friend," I answered, "he sends him a picture of a bird; if he talks of something sweet he sends a picture of a flower. Instead of pictures the white man has these little signs which all understand."

The Indian took up the letter and scrutinized it carefully.
"I do not believe you," he said. "You try to make a fool of me. These little signs are all alike."
"I will give you proof. I will write on this little piece of paper that the sutler is to give you some tobacco. Go take it to the store and see if I do not speak the truth."
The Indian snatched the paper and was off. A few minutes later I saw him slowly coming toward me, a piece of tobacco in his hand and a look of bewilderment on his face. Suddenly his expression changed to satisfaction, and he hurried forward.
"Did you get the tobacco?" I asked.
"Yes, but I do not believe you. You and he had an understanding before so that you might deceive me. Now if you will write some more of those little signs on paper telling the sutler to give me much more tobacco and if he does then I will believe you."
But the Indian's race failed. I did not "rise" to the occasion.

Walnuts and Butternuts.

The city boy on a visit to the country is often puzzled in trying to distinguish black walnuts and butternuts in the green state. The leaves are almost alike, being compound and having a variable number of leaflets arranged on the stems. The butternut stem has from nine to seventeen leaflets, and the black walnut from fifteen to twenty-three. The teeth on the latter are larger and sharper than those on the butternut and lack the fuzzy stem, but the real distinguishing feature is the odor. Having once smelled the crushed leaves of a butternut and a black walnut, a person can never fail to know them thereafter.—St. Nicholas.

His Own Self.

There is a time in every man's education when he arrives at the conviction that envy is ignorance; that imitation is suicide; that he must take himself for better, for worse, as his portion; that, though the wide universe is full of good, no kernel of nourishing corn can come to him but through his toil bestowed on that plot of ground which is given to him to till.—Emerson.

Absolutely Necessary.

The Best Way.

Barber—Shall I take a little of the ends of your hair off, sir? Customer—Yes, I think you had better take it off at the ends unless you can get it out of the middle.—New Yorker.

The very curse of an evil deed is that it must always continue to engender evil.—Schiller.

—We hope the Commissioners of Centre county are not going to take the Race bridge in this place off the contractor's hands until the brick are laid so that the gutters in it will at least carry the water off the structure. They have certainly paid enough to demand a good job.

—The country isn't so large after all. On Tuesday the run from Los Angeles, Cal., to Chicago was made in two days and as we are only one day from Chicago it will be seen that to us the Pacific is only a little matter of three days off.

—Upon the man whom PENNYPACKER confers the mantle of the late Senator FULLER hangs the determination of the question as to where that old Blunderbuss stands in the fight for reform in the Republican party.

IRVIN.—After an illness of only one week Washington Irvin died at his home on Reynolds avenue, at 1:05 o'clock Sunday afternoon, his death being the result of a bad attack of pneumonia and yellow jaundice.

Deceased was aged 54 years and was born at Centre Furnace. His parents were Joseph and Margaret Irvin. Early in life he learned the milling trade in the old Centre Furnace mill after which he worked at his trade in several mills on the southern side and later came to Bellefonte and went with Gerberich, Hale & Co. His last work at his trade was done at the Phoenix mill of George W. Jackson & Co. A couple years ago he embarked in the grocery business with his son Harry but sold out his interest about a year ago and since then had been working for the Yeager Swing Co.

Twenty-eight years ago he was united in marriage with Miss Anna Thomas, of Milesburg, who with the following children survive: Harry, of Bellefonte; Mrs. W. Hayward Boone, of Clinton, Ky.; and Helen, at home. He also leaves three sisters, Mrs. Mary Albert, of Philipsburg; Mrs. Annie Clark, of Brownsville, and Mrs. David Reed, of Culver, Kan.

Jr., of this place; Melvin, of Minneapolis, and Mrs. Mary E. Barden, of Pasadena, Cal.

Rev. Wood was an able divine and probably one of the best known ministers in the country. He had traveled extensively and preached in many countries. For many years past he devoted his time to evangelistic work, in which he was very successful. He was the author of many religious works which have attained wide circulation. The death of his father coming so soon after the death of his son is a great affliction to Rev. Wood Jr., who deserves the heartfelt sympathy of all who know him.

Surviving are her two children, Charles and Malin, and the following brothers and sisters: Wm. and Perry, of Unionville; Mrs. Ida Irwin, of Bradook, and Mrs. Stacie Burke, of Cleveland, Ohio.

C., and Mrs. Robert Thompson, of Bellefonte; also two brothers, John, of Altoona, and George, of Howard, and one sister, Mrs. Mary Price, of Altoona. The funeral was held last Saturday afternoon. He is survived by his wife and nine children, viz., Wm. H., of Paton; John and George, of Philipsburg; and Walter, of Ohio; Mrs. Mary Burke, of Columbus, O.; Mrs. Alice Matley, of Philipsburg; Mrs. Annie Hamaker, of Canton, O.; Mrs. Kate Barst, of Reynoldsville, and Miss Eleanor, at home.
