Last Saturday afternoon Lee, the twelve year old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Thompson, of near Philipsburg, attempted to have a Fourth of July celebration on his own book. He got his father's powder can, dug a hole in the ground and buried it after attaching a piece of fuse he intended lighting. He had accidentally spilled some of the powder on the ground and in lighting the fuse the spilled powder caught fire which caused an instant explosion of the powder in the can. The boys clothing caught fire and he attempted to extinguish the flames by jumping in a small stream which, however, was not deep enough so he ran to a nearby neighbor who tore the clothing from the lad, but not until he was badly burned. The explosion also blistered his head, face and hands.

On Tuesday evening Mr. Sigmund Joseph, Mrs. Herman Holz, Harry Holz and Mrs. Clark, of the Brockerhoff house, went for a drive. The animals began to kick and then started to run and to save themselves from the dangers of a runaway Harry Holz, who was driving, undertook to pull the horses up the bank at the side of the road. In doing so the tongue of the carriage, which had fallen down, caught in a rut and the vehicle was overturned, throwing all of the occupants out. They were all quite badly hurt, Mrs. Holz sustaining a fractured collar bone and bad bruises; Mrs. Clark had the ligaments of her left leg badly sprained as well as a wrenched back. With the knowledge of the picnics they have held in the past everybody is assured of a good time and full value for every cent of the money the trip will cost.
