VOTERS FOR TRUSTS AGAIN ON TICKET

Killed Anti-Trust Bill, After Warnings From Fellow Republican Legislators That Such Voting Was Against Roosevelt.

Boss Penrose, while professing to support Roosevelt and the President's policy of regulating trusts, has renominated many of the State Representatives whose votes or dodging defeated the "anti-trust bill" in the last regular session of the legislature.

An act making it a misdemeanor for any two or more persons to enter into any agreement to control the price of any article or commodity to prevent or curtail the production, manufacture or sale of the same...

Section 1. Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in general assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same that if any two or more persons engaged or interested in the production, manufacture or sale of any article or commodity shall enter into any combination or agreement to control the price of such article or commodity...

That was the complete text of the bill, which was introduced by a Republican, Hoyt, of Bradford, whom the Penrose machine this year defeated for renomination.

Only 12 members, mostly Philadelphians, out of the 204 dared to vote against the bill, nearly all of the other machine slaves dodging by having themselves recorded as "absent or not voting."

machine majority were voting against or dodging. That Republican said, in the debate upon the bill:

"Mr. Speaker, the purpose and the only purpose of this bill is to prohibit and to prevent all kinds of monopolies. This bill embodies the very principle upon which the Republican party, headed by Theodore Roosevelt as president of the United States, has won its success. If there had not been an act of congress passed along these same lines there would have been no proceedings against the beef trust. The other states of the Union have enacted some legislation in favor of the common people, prohibiting the prices of commodities from being inflated. It has been suggested that this might interfere in the matter of partnerships, fixing the prices of commodities in which they deal. Not a bit. It will prevent any persons, firms or corporations existing under the name of partnerships from entering into any agreement or to prevent the production or manufacture and sale of any article, or to prevent free and open competition on the subject of the small manufacturers in the sale of that same article. I presented this bill in good faith. I believe it is in the interest of good Republican policy, and I trust this house will go on record as being in opposition to all sorts of trusts and monopolies, and pass at least one piece of legislation in the interests of the masses."

Mr. Hayes, of Butler, another Republican whom Penrose so vindictively pursued as to prevent his renomination, said on the bill:

"Mr. Speaker, I am one of the Republicans that supported the President in his course in the anti-trust business. I hope every Republican, Laborer and labor man in this house will support the President in the course he has taken."

Then one of Penrose's Philadelphia henchman, Lukens, spoke the "piece" written for him in the Boas Mansion, where Boss Penrose, Durham and McNichol wielded the lash over that legislature. Let the following speech by Lukens be compared with the text of the bill, and then let the voter decide whether there was any omission from or insertion in the bill to warrant the oily, groundless objections of the Gang to the measure:

"Mr. Speaker, I have listened with a great deal of interest to the remarks of our friend, Mr. Hoyt, and I will go so far as any man in this house to stop the monopoly evil, or to stop the monopoly of such things that enter into our everyday life, and if that was the gentleman's purpose, why didn't he say this should apply to coal and oil, to grain and breadstuffs of all kinds, and to beef, and I think every member of this house, Republican or Democrat, would have stood up with the gentleman, shoulder to shoulder, and have passed this measure with an overwhelming majority. But I now say that when the bill is so drafted as to mention the manufacture of certain articles that would prevent partners in the business from comparing prices with one another, and would put a fine of $1000 upon them and subject them to imprisonment, that is not right. This would also affect any patent right. The bill goes entirely too far. As I said before, if it would affect only such things that enter into our home consumption, I would be only too glad to stand up for it, but I feel I would not be doing my duty if I did not oppose this bill in its present shape."

Thus did Lukens and Penrose and the gang legislators set themselves up against their own president. The bill speaks for itself. It could have done no harm to any lawful interest or law-abiding individual, and it would have accomplished what the hypocritical makers of gang platforms professed to desire, but what cannot be realized if the people let Penrose continue to control the legislature and the executive chair.

Gave His Life to Save Aged Couple.

Spartansburg, B. C., Oct. 27.—Newton Tillotson, 56 years of age, and for 22 years in the employ of the Southern railway, was killed by plunging in front of a fast passenger train to save the lives of an aged man and woman who were crossing the track in a buggy and in which he was successful. Tillotson's act was cheered by a number of eye-witnesses, unaware for the moment that his heroism had cost him his life.

President Starts For Panama Nov. 8.

Washington, Oct. 30. — The yacht Mayflower will be used to convey the president and his party down the Potomac river and Chesapeake bay on their trip to Panama. At the mouth of the Rappahannock river the party will be transferred to the battleship Louisiana. The start will be made from Washington on the afternoon of November 3. Beside the president and Mrs. Roosevelt, the party will include Surgeon General Rixey and M. C. Latta, an assistant secretary to the president.

Restoration of Color of Hair After Treatment With Roentgen Rays.

Dr. Imbert, professor in the medical faculty at Montpellier, and Dr. Marques, his head laboratory assistant, have been busy themselves daily with medical applications of X-rays. They were tolerably surprised to find that the beard and hair (which were almost white) of one of them were progressively becoming colored, to the point even of shortly assuming a hue deeper than the original one. On the other hand, in the case of a man of fifty-five whom the two professors treated with X-rays for a lupus affecting the left cheek, the hair turned strongly gray. During the first months of treatment they had refrained from limiting by a screen the surface to be irradiated. The hair for several centimeters around the left ear, fell; of the hairs of the mustache, further withdrawn from the blister, no appreciable irradiation was noticed. The hair grew almost black again near the ear, its color plainly weakening in proportion to the distance from it. Likewise the left half of the mustache had assumed a hue less white than the right half. The hair has not been subjected to the X-rays for several months, and it is frequently out; but it remains black. Other observations authorize Messrs. Imbert and Marques to declare that under the influence of X-rays, light hair assumes a deeper shade of color. This last attribute will no doubt be little utilized by young women; but the new process which permits of no longer growing gray in growing old will be highly appreciated by both sexes, if new investigations establish definitely its usefulness. However, physicians alone will have the right to dye hair in this manner; for the recent decision of the Academie de Medecine has recluded the use of X-rays in the category of medical practices forbidden to the vulgar. Still, everyone will reserve the right of "coloring" himself; but extreme prudence is requisite in the matter.—L'Illustration.—Scientific American.

Training Dog Police.

From William G. Fitz-Gerald's "The Dog Police of European Cities" in the October Century.

The training of the young Newfoundland that M. Lepine periodically adds to his staff is one of the sights of Paris. It takes place in the headquarters of the agents of the police, a small building on the quay-side not far from the Cathedral of Notre Dame. Dogs and the men enter into the exercise with zest, and there is usually a crowd of onlookers. Only dummy figures are used, but the "rescue" is, nevertheless, a very realistic affair. The big dogs know perfectly well what the exercise means, and they wait with comic enthusiasm until the dummy is thrown into the water and an agent plunges rushes out on hearing the splash and the outcry of spectators. While the men are busy with lines and life-buoys, the dog plunges into the water, swims to the dummy, catches it with his jaws, and brings it to the shore. The more experienced dogs, however, will easily effect a rescue from first to last without human assistance; and it is an inspiring sight to watch them looking for a foothold on the slippery sides of the riverbank, and pulling the heavy dummy into a place of safety.

It takes about four months to train the dogs efficiently. They are also charged with the protection of their masters when attacked by the desperate ruffians who sleep under the arches of the bridge in summer. Thus in Paris also the police dogs are a proved success.
