

A WISE HOUSEKEEPER.

She Mixes Brains With Humanity In Dealing With Her Servant.

Brains and humanity—these are two qualities every man and woman needs to possess before it is given to either of them to have supervision over others.

The wise housekeeper starts out with a servant in perfect understanding. She lets the girl know what is expected of her, and she keeps faith with that girl in any promises she may make.

She does not begin by saying, "It's just nothing at all to do the work here," and then bring four women in to luncheon on ironing day.

She realizes that the kitchen is the most important room in her house and that when she has everything there running smoothly the rest of housekeeping is a sweet and simple dream.

She realizes that the person who feeds a family acceptably and keeps it comfortable 365 days in the year is entitled to some consideration.

Therefore she sees that there is a comfortable room, with plenty of air, a good bed, a cheery, pleasant, home-like place, ready for the girl when her work is done.

She arranges her work systematically.

It is a woman like this that keeps the same help in her home for years and makes them say of her, "She's a real lady, she is."

The girls say that lack of consideration on the part of the women who employ them is the reason for the revolt against unspecialized housework.

They say that the general housework girl is supposed to combine the duties of cook, waitress, chambermaid, parlor maid, landress, lady's maid, nursemaid, bellboy and errand girl.

She is never supposed to be too tired to respond to the buzz of a bell, and she is expected to put up with whatever accommodations are left after the rest of the family is comfortably provided for.

And I believe there is a fairly good foundation for her complaints. A whole lot of incompetent, selfish, inconsiderate women are so placed in the scale of fortune that they can keep house and "have a girl." Women of this type have the idea that the placing of a girl in the kitchen and paying her so much a week end their responsibility as far as housekeeping goes.—Exchange.

Health and Beauty.

With the exception of those who directly inherit some physical disorder, every woman is allowed to start life with all the machinery of her system in perfect working order. She begins the life journey well equipped with all she needs of health and strength—beautiful skin and hair, bright eyes, white teeth. But, as evening comes, how often does she find those good things fading. Shadows are creeping into her face. Why must the brightness and charm go so soon?

It is not that they must. They go because she has wasted her life dower. She has carelessly allowed it to go. With her glorious inheritance from nature she could have lived through all these years without disturbing one charm, only adding to the innocent thoughtlessness of youth the grace and dignity of matured womanhood—advanced womanhood.

The practical side of health and beauty is the care one takes of natural gifts, the free, inimitable beauty that nature planned and for which there is no substitute. It is far easier to keep one's beauty than to restore it. The rule to keep it is but one—proper living. In this age, as in every other where beauty was taken into account, there is plenty of opportunity to abuse and waste one's gifts, and women usually seize it. Besetting every path are temptations of idleness and carelessness—that is, to be idle and careless in looking to one's physical needs. Very often, by the way, these are crowded out by the stress of other matters—business, household, pleasure.

What, then, is proper living? Here is the formula, the simplest thing in the world and the hardest to follow: Regularity of living, early to bed and early to rise; regular meals and good, wholesome ones, neither too much nor too little; regular daily exercise, enough to set the blood leaping through the veins; a daily bath, fresh air, sunshine, faithful care of the hair, skin and teeth, no matter how tired one may be, and, last, a patient, cheerful heart in spite of the clouds that sometimes obscure the way. This is the formula and is to be used all day long and every day in the year.—Philadelphia Record.

Straw Matting.

Opinions differ concerning straw matting on floors. Some housekeepers contend that it gives a house a cool, clean look, and so it may in summer and when it is new, but the musty odor that clings to it always is extremely disagreeable to some people. Added to this, the dirt, which does not show on straw matting and gives it a superficially clean look, all sifts through. The experienced housekeeper knows that it is there, for she is wise in detecting the smell of dust. In fact, after a straw matting has been laid some time it is not hygienic as a floor covering. One housekeeper who moved into a house when the retiring family had generously left two apparently new mattings had them taken up because she preferred the good hardwood floors underneath to be uncovered. At least half a palletful of dirt was taken from each room, which to the casual eye had appeared in neat condition.

The economy of straw mattings is questionable. If you have an old and poor floor that cannot be repaired sufficiently to be stained and varnished or painted and you cannot afford to lay a new floor, then straw matting

Rev. William McKendree Reiley.

At the Methodist Episcopal paragonage at Newberry, Williamport, at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon of last week, one of the best known ministers in the Central Pennsylvania conference died after a serious illness of only one week.

He was born at Charleston, West Virginia, April 28, 1848, and was aged 58 years, 8 months and 20 days. He was a son of Rev. James McKendree Reiley, a prominent member of the Baltimore conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, and widely known throughout Central Pennsylvania conference. He was converted in early life and in his 19th year began active work as a minister of the Methodist Episcopal church.

In 1868 he was admitted to membership in the Kentucky conference and in that field labored until 1872, when he was transferred to the Central Pennsylvania conference. His appointments were as follows: 1872, Mableton; 1873, Ralston; 1874, Shirleyburg; 1876, Hopewell; 1879, Green Village; 1881, Hanover; 1883, Mifflinburg; 1885, Watsonburg; 1888, Centralia; 1892, Waynesboro; 1896, Fifth avenue, Altoona; 1900, Bellwood; 1902, Ashland; 1905, Newberry.

He was married April 16, 1874, to Miss Fannie Baker of Liberty, Maryland. To this union were born seven children, the youngest of whom, Wilson H., was drowned at Trenton last August. The others survive to comfort their mother. They are as follows: Harry B. Reiley, managing editor of the True American, Trenton, N. J.; Rev. J. McK. Reiley, of Clearfield; Mrs. J. W. Lowther, of Bellwood; Dr. Edgar Reiley, of Baltimore; Misses Ray and Alice, at home.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD BULLETIN.

THE $20 OPEN MILEAGE TICKET.

On September 1, 1906, The Pennsylvania Railroad Company placed on sale at $20 each one-thousand-mile tickets, good for one year, and good for the passage of the holder, and any number of other persons within mileage limit of ticket, on any of the lines of the Company east of Pittsburg and Buffalo. This ticket has proved so popular that it has been almost impossible to print them fast enough to meet the demand, about 200,000 having been distributed at this time.

For business houses which keep a force on the road or which find it necessary to send men out frequently, the ticket is especially attractive, as it is good in the hands of any one at any time and for as many as it may be desirable to use it.

Merchants, manufacturers, business men, and others who make frequent trips to New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Pittsburg, Buffalo, and other cities have also found it a very convenient ticket. It is available at any moment, not only for the business man himself, but for any one whom he may desire to send, and for the members of his family.

In fact, it is a convenient and desirable form of transportation for every one, for by its use a two-cent-a-mile rate is obtained for one-way trips, and in many cases a considerable reduction is gained in the excursion rates.

Mileage Tickets are on sale at all Ticket Offices. 52-4-11.
