MANAGING A SERVANT.

Have Neither Too Much Nor Too Little Supervision.
Said a notable and successful housekeeper in a recital of her domestic experiences:
"I make it a rule to give a new servant orders for the first day and leave her to carry them out in her own way as the best test of her skill and ability. Upon this basis I begin the work of instructing and correcting. I do not hesitate to say that I have gained much valuable information in certain directions from girls who knew better ways than my own."
For guidance of the domestic machine a golden mean, neither too much nor too little supervision, promises most favorable results.
Communication and kindness may be trusted to strengthen and confirm good traits already in evidence, while expression of faith in ambition and ability will develop others to be cultivated in like manner. A servant's failure should be the mistress's regret, and if thus treated the sympathy proves a stronger incentive to well doing in her future than any amount of reproof and fault finding.
Servants are not exempt from trials and anxieties and often perform the labor of the day with heavy hearts from some trouble in their homes or among their kindred. To know that they have a friend in their employer in whom they can confide and trust for advice is a great comfort at such times. With abundant leisure for enjoyment it scarcely is possible sometimes for the mistress to comprehend how much an unexpected pleasure or privilege means to those engaged in a constant round of daily toil.—Washington Star.

CULINARY CONCEITS.

A pinch of grated nutmeg added to potato croquettes improves them.
The nutritive quality of fish and its flavor are best obtained by roasting or baking.
Remember that green vegetables should not be covered with the saucepan lid when they are being boiled.
Broiled meats are more nourishing than fried meats, and roasted meats yield more nourishment than broiled ones.
Baked potatoes are quite possible for breakfast if small ones are chosen. These will bake in twenty-five minutes, while the muffins are baking and the rest of the breakfast being prepared.
If cup custards are placed in a pan of water and cooked on top of the stove, there will be less liability of their overcooking, as they can be carefully watched. Just before they are done place in the oven to brown them on top.

Scratched Furniture.
Where there are fine pin-like scratches on new furniture they may be easily remedied by using pulverized rotten stone that can be bought ready for use. This put on a soft flannel rag and rubbed into the surface of the seat, back or arms of a chair or on to the top of a table will not only take off the defects, but bring a polish to the wood. To remove the rotten stone with a damp piece of chamolis carefully wipe the surface of the wood by rubbing it lightly with a soft piece of cheese-cloth moistened with alcohol. The latter must be used sparingly on furniture, for it burns the varnish and will ruin the appearance of the rocker or table if enough is put on to scorch the surface.

"THE COY LION."—Another of Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett's quaint "Queen Silver bell" fairy stories will begin in the February St. Nicholas. It will have the piquant title of "The Coy Lion;" and there will be a number of illustrations by the same artist who has made the pictures for the earlier stories of the series, Harrison Cady.

WHAT'S IN McCORMACK'S—In McCormack's for February, the Christian Science serial steadily increases in interest and power. Mrs. Eddy's relations with P. P. Quimby, the mental healer of Portland, are taken up in this installment, and a thoroughly convincing and able presentation of the man who was so potent an influence in her career is given. Mrs. Eddy's first visits to Quimby, her letters and verses in praise of him, and Mrs. Crosby's account of Mrs. Eddy's performances as the medium of her dead brother, Albert Baker, are presented, together with some striking face similes and portraits. William Allen White contributes in this number a brilliant analysis of Roosevelt and his career. The campaign of 1890 is described in the Carl Schurz Reminiscences, and dramatic episodes occurring at the time of Lincoln's nomination are related with much spirit and humor. John La Farge contributes a fine critical study of Sacred Conversations in painting. A. W. Rolker writes of "The Wild Animal Physician and His Patients," and recounts many thrilling illustrations of the courage and ingenuity that enter into this branch of medicine.

The fiction is unusually fresh, original, and strong. The photographs for Christian Science, the Schurz Reminiscences, and the Rolker article are of exceptional interest.
