them. Saturday afternoon while at work at his trade as a plumber in Archibald Allison's shop, in the McClain block, he lost the sight of the other eye. At first he thought it might be only a temporary blindness but as the minutes passed and his vision did not return the horrible truth was forced upon him that what he had feared for some time, total blindness, had befallen him.

The stricken man was taken to his home on Bishop street where a thorough examination of his eye was made which disclosed the fact that the cause of his blindness was a hemorrhage, or rupture of the minute blood vessels of the eye. One, if not two of Mr. Koontz's brothers have gone blind in the very same way and he has long had a dread that he also would be stricken. As soon as arrangements can be made he will be taken to the Wills Eye hospital,

Philadelphia, to see if anything can be done to restore his sight.
