"I was speaking to messieurs about my cousin, who will meddle in the affair' of his relative'. Well, that gentleman, he make a marriage for me with a good and accomplish' lady, very noble and very beautiful—and amiable." (The young count at his elbow started slightly at this, but immediately appeared to wrap himself in a mantle of solemn thought.) "Unfortunately, when my cousin arrange' so I was a dolt, a little blockhead. I swear to marry for myself and when I please or never if I like. That lady is all things charming and gentle, and, in truth, she is—very much attach' to me—why should I not say it? I am so proud of it. She is very faithful and forgiving and sweet. She would be the same, I think, if I—were even—a lackey. But I? I was a dolt, a little unsensible brute. I did not value such thing' then. I was too young, las' June. So I say to my cousin, 'No, I make my own choosing!' 'Little fool,' he answer, 'she is the one for you. Am I not wiser than you?' And he was very angry, and, as he has influence in France, word come' that he will get me put in Vincennes, so I mus' run away quick till his anger is gone. My good frien' Mirepoix is jus' leaving for London. He take' many risk' for my sake. His hairdresser die before he start', so I travel as that poor barber. But my cousin is a man to be afraid of when he is angry, even in England, and I mus' not get my Mirepoix in trouble. I mus' not be discover' till my cousin is ready to laugh about it all and make it a joke. And there may be spies. So I change my name again and come to Bath to amuse my retreat with a little gaming. I am al-ways fond of that. But three day' ago M. le Marquis send me a courier to say that my brother, who know where I had run away, is come from France to say that my cousin is appeas'. He need me for his little theater, the play cannot go on. I do not need to espouse mademoiselle. All shall be forgiven if I return, and my brother and M. de Mirepoix will meet me in Bath to felicitate.

"There is one more thing to say—that is all. I have said I learn' a secret, and use it to make a man introduce me if I will not tell. He has absolve' me of that promise. My frien', I had not the wish to ruin that man. I was not receive'. Meestaire Nash had rebuff me. I had no other way except' to use this fellow. So I say, 'Take me to Lady Malbourne's ball as "Chateaurien."' I throw off my wig and shave, and behol', I am M. le Duc de Castle Nowhere. Ha, ha! You see?"

The young man's manner suddenly changed. He became haughty, menacing. He stretched out his arm and pointed at Winterset. "Now I am no 'Beaucaire,' messieurs. I am a French gentleman. The man who introduce' me at the price of his honor and then betray' me to redeem it, is that coward, that card cheat there!"

Winterset made a horrible effort to laugh. The gentlemen who surrounded him fell away as from pestilence. "A French gentleman!" he sneered savagely and yet fearfully. "I don't know who you are. Hide behind as many toys and ribbons as you like. I'll know the name of the man who dares bring such a charge!"

"Sir!" cried de Mirepoix sharply, advancing a step toward him; but he checked himself at once. He made a low bow of state, first to

Lemont.

The schools of College township will open Monday, September 2nd.

There was rather a bad mad dog scare in town one evening last week, when a dog came running into a store. Several of the merchants perched themselves on the counter with a pall of water to dash on the poor brute, which was acting very strangely, but as good fortune would have it it was nothing very serious in the end.

Thursday evening of last week Oscar Rishel's youngest son took the horse from the stable and rode him down to the creek, which is only a short distance, and while there the horse frightened at something, threw the boy to the ground and tramped on him breaking several of his ribs and tearing his kidneys loose, besides many bruises, leaving him in a very serious condition, but by latest reports he is getting along nicely.

The Origin of Brown Bread.

Brown bread was invented by Major Nathaniel Thwing, of Boston, in July, 1746. It was then regarded as a famine food.

At that period there was a great scarcity of cereals. All sorts of provisions, but especially breadstuffs, were high. Wheat cost twenty shillings a bushel and white bread came at two cents an ounce, the sixteen ounce "household loaf," which was of a coarse kind, selling for twelve cents. Thwing was a baker by trade. When he asked permission of the selectmen of Boston to make and sell brown bread of a certain specified composition, containing a stated proportion of cornmeal, the suggestion was kindly received, and breadstuffs showing a tendency to mount considerably higher than the figures already mentioned, he manufactured on a considerable scale.

It was not until Parliament came to the rescue of the colonists that breadstuffs fell in price, and even brown bread, though a famine food, was at first more expensive than it is to-day; but finally it dropped to eight cents for a loaf weighing about three pounds, and thus became an article available for the every-day diet of people of the most moderate means, though Bostonians today regard brown bread as a sort of Sunday bread most particularly eating it every Sabbath with baked beans.

The poisonous, disease-breeding effects of sewer gas are well known. Constipation produces a condition in the body analogous to that of a clogged sewer. The mental dullness, the physical lethargy always consequent on constipation, evidence the working of poisons which are generated in the body. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation and the cure is permanent.
