THINGS ABOUT TOWN AND COUNTY

Mrs. Snyder was taken to the Bellefonte hospital on Tuesday for treatment. Eckenroth Bros. have been at work this week painting the exterior of the Bush Arcade building.

The home of Miss Anna V. Williams, editor of the Philipsburg Ledger, was badly damaged by fire on Wednesday.

The marriage of Mr. Swartz, of Tusseyville, and Miss Clara Robb, of this place, will be solemnized the latter part of this month.

Friday evening at 7:30 Rev. A. M. Schmidt will give another of his talks on Foreign Travels. He will tell about Paris and Versailles.

E. M. Huyett, of Potter township, has baled almost seventy tons of hay and straw so far this season, which he has readily sold at a good price.

Another room has been leased by the Adams Express company adjoining the one they now occupy and this will be used as a store room for express matter.

Mrs. J. H. Decker entertained at cards on Friday evening last in honor of her two guests, Mrs. Leonard George and Mrs. Charles Vernon, of Pittsburg.

William M. Schoffeld, of Altoona, a nephew of our townsman, Hon. James Schoffeld, is out for the congressional nomination on the Republican ticket in the Mountain city.

Bellefontons can take their pick tomorrow. They can either go to State College and see the State-Grove City College football game or stay at home and see the Bellefonte Academy-Williamport High school contest.

The Ramsdale house in Philipsburg has been sold by Thomas Barnes Jr., to E. M. Davis, of Ridgway. Mr. Barnes conducted the house for eleven years and it was not only successful but was one of the popular places in Philipsburg.

White Mrs. Harry L. Garber and her grand-mother, Mrs. Louise Bush, were coming down Linn street in Mr. Garber's Buick runabout, Monday afternoon, the steering gear caught with the result that the machine ran in to a hole that had been dug to repair the steam pipes and some of the machinery was damaged so that it had to be sent to the shop for repairs.

On Monday Ben. Gentzell was around among that car load of western horses he sold on Tuesday putting tags on them when one of the animals kicked him in the face. It was at first feared that his nose was broken but an examination showed that it was not and aside from a badly bruised face his injuries were not serious and he was around the next day as usual.

The new parish house of St. Johns Episcopal church has been completed and is about furnished ready for the dedication and opening which will be held in the near future. It is very likely Bishop W. H. Darlington will be present and take a prominent part in the exercises of the day.

One day last week while helping thresh on the farm of John Q. Miles, at Martha, Harris Harbridge was painfully injured by having a pitch fork run in his thigh. The men were hard at work with Mr. Harbridge in the mow when one of the men threw the pitchfork from the barn door into the mow. The implement struck Mr. Harbridge the sharp teeth almost passing through his leg. Though very painful the injury will not prove a serious one unless complications set in.

Mrs. Theresa Tate, mother of Benton D. Tate, was taken to the Bellefonte hospital on Tuesday afternoon suffering with a fractured hip bone. Her son, Kirk Tate, with his wife and children, have been visitors at home this week and Tuesday morning Mrs. Tate, in going from the dining room to the kitchen stumbled over her little grandson, whom she failed to see sitting on the floor, and fell. She was helped up and at the time complained that she had hurt her hip, but it was not thought the injury was serious.

On Wednesday afternoon George A. Beezer with Dave Kelley's horse and buggy started to take his wife and sister Ella to the fair. He drove down the back road and was driving at a good pace to keep out of the way of an automobile behind him, when turning a corner in the vicinity of the American Lime and Stone company's plant he almost ran into an automobile coming from the fair grounds. The horse frightened and turning quickly threw Mr. Beezer out. His foot caught in the wheel and he was thrown into a ditch at the side of the road, alighting on his face. The horse ran away and the two women were also thrown out. Mr. Beezer sustained quite a number of bad cuts and bruises on his face and head but fortunately for the women they were not hurt in the least.

THE BIG CENTRE COUNTY FAIR.—The big Centre county fair has now been running three days and for a wonder it has not rained and the weather has been delightful. And for the first time in six years the management has had the advantage of a good attendance.

Of course Tuesday was devoted exclusively to the placing of exhibits and the line this year is, if anything, bigger than ever before. In addition to the main exhibition building being filled a large tent is also crammed with fruits and vegetables. Of course the Pennsylvania State College has its customary exhibit only this year it is very much larger and more complete than ever before. It occupies a large space to the right of the entrance to the main exhibition building. The stock exhibit is also most complete, nearly all stalls and pens being filled with blooded horses, cattle, sheep and hogs. One large tent is filled with the poultry exhibit and the display of fancy turkeys, chickens, ducks, etc., is a very good one.

Of course the first real day of the fair was on Wednesday when quite a crowd came to town. To be exact there were between twenty-three and twenty-four hundred paid admissions at the gates and with exhibitors tickets, school children and others the crowd easily numbered five thousand people. But yesterday was the big day and a very conservative estimate placed the crowd at ten thousand people. It took forty-one cars on the various incoming morning trains to haul the people here who came by rail, while all forenoon vehicles of every kind came to town by every road leading to the county seat.

The big majority of the people went to the fair grounds in the forenoon and spent the time in looking at the various exhibits and taking in the sights of the Midway. The latter is not as large and varied this year as it has been in some former years but then there is enough there to help entertain the crowd.

Quite naturally the races have been the main feature of attraction in the afternoons. The track is in good condition and very good time has been made. And just here we want to say that while Wednesday and yesterday's races were good those of today will be the best of the week and no one can afford to miss them. Therefore take another day off and come and see the finish of the big show.

Wednesday's races were both won in straight heats, Joe Sager's "Minnie Tilton" piling down first money in the 2:15 class and "Hot Stuff," owned by R. A. Stiver, of Bedford, coming in first in the 2:35 class. Irv Gray's Sallie Derby was third under the wire in the first race while in the second F. P. Bartley's "Elk Land" took fourth money. "Rabby," Henry Lowery's horse went two heats in the second race then cast a shoe and had to be withdrawn. The full summaries of the races follow:

Table with 2 columns: Race name and time, and Race name and time. Includes entries like '2:15 trot and pace—prize $250' and 'Hot Stuff, R. A. Stiver'.

Of course it won't do to close this article without speaking of the Repasz band, of Williamsport, as an attraction. Their playing on the grounds and their delightful concert the past two evenings were the delight of all who heard them. In brief the fair has been a great success this year and the management certainly deserved it, as they were untiring in their efforts to give the people the worth of their money.

BROOKERHOFF HOUSE IMPROVEMENTS.

The improvements at the Brookerhoff house are about completed and they have been extensive enough to take that hotel among the best in the State outside of the big cities. Two new bath rooms have been installed on the first floor, connecting with four rooms. These rooms have all been newly furnished throughout, the bedsteads being of brass with the other furniture to correspond. The old parlor has been fitted up as a bed room and the writing room made into a parlor. All the stairs have been covered with gum mats with brass corners and front strips.

On the ground floor the old sample room has been transformed into a writing room with a small private office for the landlord in the rear. When we say transformed we mean that it has been so handsomely fitted up as not to be recognizable and when fully furnished will be one of the most delightful writing rooms connected with any hotel. Then it is convenient to the office and does away with running up and down the stairs every time a traveling man wants to write a letter. As proof that landlord Ray's efforts to provide the best of accommodation for the traveling public is the fact that it is very rarely he has an empty room in the house.

He drove down the back road and was driving at a good pace to keep out of the way of an automobile behind him, when turning a corner in the vicinity of the American Lime and Stone company's plant he almost ran into an automobile coming from the fair grounds. FIRST ANNIVERSARY OF "OCCUPATION DAY."—Sunday, October 13th, the First Methodist Episcopal church, of Altoona, will hold the first anniversary of "Occupation Day." Bishop J. W. Hamilton, D. D., LL. D., of San Francisco, Cal., one of the finest platform figures and preachers in America, will preach both morning and evening. Four mural tablets of beautiful bronze and in elegant design will be unveiled. Extensive preparations are being made for a great occasion. The people are being asked by the pastor, Rev. Horace Lincoln Jacobs, to duplicate the "Occupation Day" offering of last year, cash $2,470, in payments on their subscription pledges to total next Sunday $2,500. This great church is called the "Cathedral of Methodism."

GREAT ATTRACTION COMING.—Like all successful plays, "Leah Kleesha," Mrs. Fiske's great drama of the girl burglar, which Harrison Grey Fiske's special company will present at Garman's on Tuesday evening, October 15th, has a basis of fact in its story and most of its characters are drawn from life. That is one reason why the play is so true to human nature and seems so vividly real. C. M. S. McLellan, the author of "Leah Kleesha," built the play from an incident that he overheard in a Paris park. A girl, evidently one of a band of thieves, was protesting to a man against the life she was leading and pleading with him to let her go free. From this came the tremendously dramatic story of Leah Kleesha's regeneration through the influence of an awkward moral sense and through love. When writing the play, Mr. McLellan visited the haunts of Paris thieves and took his types from people he met there. The story of the play is as interesting as any ever penned and holds the audience in its spell from the rise to the final fall of the curtain.

STRUCK BY TRAIN.—George Stanley and son Charles, of Roland, were struck by mail west on the Bald Eagle Valley railroad, just east of Howard, Friday afternoon and injured so that both were brought to the Bellefonte hospital for treatment. The Stanleys had gone down to the Jenkins iron works to see about work and were walking up to the station alongside the railroad. When within less than one hundred yards of the station the locomotive heard the whistle of the locomotive and supposing the train to be on the track next the depot stepped over on the other track and right in front of the oncoming train, which was then too close to the men to be stopped. The son, seeing his father's predicament, jumped on the track to save him but before they could make a step toward safety they were struck by the locomotive and knocked into the air about ten feet, the father alighting on one side of the track and the son on the other.

Persons who saw the accident believed the men both killed, but upon examination it was found that neither one was dead. They were put on the train and, in care of Drs. Kurtz and McEntire were brought to the Bellefonte hospital. There an examination showed that the worst injury sustained by the elder Stanley was a fracture of his right leg between the knee and ankle. Both men were badly bruised on the body and out about the face and head. Their injuries, however, are not fatal, and after being in the hospital five days the young man was discharged, but his father will naturally be confined until the fractured bone in his leg knits. It was indeed a fortunate thing that the train was already slowing down for the stop at the station, for had it been running full speed both men would doubtless have been killed outright.

THREE BARN BURNED.—Three barns and one house were destroyed by fire in Walker township, within one hour on Monday afternoon and neither one was within a half mile of the other.

The first barn to burn was that of Benjamin Kauffman. John Yearick's threshing outfit was at the barn at the time, threshing the season's crops, and it is believed that a spark from the engine was blown into the mow. Nobody can tell exactly where or how the fire started as it seemed as if the entire interior burst out in a mass of flames and the whole building was on fire in so short a time that there was no opportunity to save anything but the stock, and at that one calf, a calf and some chickens were burned.

Almost simultaneously with the burning of the Ben. Kauffman barn flames were seen to shoot out from the barn of Horace Kauffman, which was located a full field length away, and to add to the consternation the barn on the farm of Henry Garbrick, and which is farmed by Roy Garbrick, also took fire about the same time. No reasonable explanation has yet been arrived at for the three fires. While the first might have been caused by a spark from the engine, the second was almost a half mile away and it is hardly reasonable to suppose that a spark was carried that distance. As to the third barn, however, the wind was not blowing that way and the only possible cause of that fire is that a spark must have lodged somewhere about the barn in the morning, when the men were threshing there, and smoldering for several hours, happened to burst into flames just at the time when the other buildings were burning.

In addition to the three barns a house belonging to John Yearick and his threshing outfit were also destroyed. The loss to the four men is considerable, as it consisted not only of the buildings but all of this year's crops as well as many farm implements. All the barns were partially insured in the Grange insurance company, and they will be rebuilt at once.

CLASH BETWEEN RAILROADS.—When Bellefontons in general and one or two in particular woke up on Wednesday morning it was to find a small army of from three to four hundred men at work in the Nittany Iron company's yards, putting down a new road.

The work was the result of legal difficulties which dates back some seven or eight years, the beginning of which was an action in court to determine whether the railroad in question, which extended from a short distance above the Phoenix mill to beyond the furnace at the junction of the Nittany Valley railroad belonged to the Nittany Valley railroad company or the Nittany Iron company.

The Nittany Valley railroad company during the litigation not only charged the Nittany Iron company ten cents a ton for every ton of material moved over the line but got out an injunction restraining the Pennsylvania railroad company from using the road in any way whatever inside the Nittany Iron company's yards. The case was tried in the Centre county court and a decree was given in favor of the Nittany Valley railroad company, which was later confirmed by the Supreme court. The decree, of course, carried with it a bill of thousands of dollars for freight handling.

Naturally the Nittany Iron company declined to pay the same and Mitchell I. Gardner, superintendent of the Nittany Valley railroad company, was instructed to look their switches and confiscate the engines used by the Nittany Iron company. These instructions were carried out on Tuesday, the engines being locked in the round house on the hill.

In the meantime this action had been contemplated by both parties and for some time past the Nittany Iron company has had engineers at work making a survey for a new road. In order to block their work the Nittany Valley railroad company built sections of new road at several places, one of which was on the ground of Col. W. F. Reynolds, just south of the old mill. This ground, by the way, was purchased from Col. Reynolds by the Nittany Iron company two weeks ago and afterward deeded to the Pennsylvania railroad company.

This was the way matters stood when the climax was reached on Tuesday and at three o'clock Wednesday morning two work trains arrived in Bellefonte and the men at once went to work and throwing the old track to one side put down a new one. The work was well under way when superintendent Gardner heard of it and he at once went out to remonstrate but no attention was paid to him. He then finally got his attorney, ex-Judge John G. Love out of bed and had an injunction issued but before the sheriff went out to serve it he could find no man in charge to serve it on. And if he had, he could not find where the men were trespassing on the Nittany Valley's property.

Of course there were a few hot words, but the men went ahead just the same, built the railroad, put in two new bridges and left town in the evening. Of course it is quite likely that legal action of some kind will follow.

GAME UNUSUALLY SCARCE.—Bellefontons hunters who have been out in the woods since the opening of the hunting season are a unit in declaring that they have never seen game as scarce as it is this year. There are very few squirrels, but as they are constantly migrating they may become more plentiful. Pheasants, however, are unusually scarce. One hunter told the writer that where in former seasons it would be nothing to scare up from a half dozen to as high as fifteen birds in one day that this season so far he has only uncovered four pheasants, and he has been out three times.

And every bird that has been brought in so far has been an old bird. Some hunters claim there is a disease among the pheasants this year which killed them off, while others give it as their opinion that the protracted cold weather in the spring, which lasted over nesting time, resulted in either the destruction of the eggs in the nest or else was the cause of the young birds all dying. As to wild turkeys, very few of them have been seen and it is believed they also will be scarcer than in years. Of course there are no quail in this section while the woodcock have all gone south so that about all the hunter will have to fall back on will be rabbits.

Miss Florence Hayes, of Philadelphia, is the guest of Mrs. Garber. Mrs. John Kelley, of Punxsutawney, is visiting her many friends in Bellefonte. D. R. Foreman and L. A. Sunday, were two Bellefontons who helped to replenish our till this week.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Keeler, of Sanbury, came to Bellefonte Wednesday and are guests of Miss McQuiston. Harris Sourbeck, who now holds a good position in New York city, was an arrival in Bellefonte on Saturday on a visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Sourbeck.

Mrs. John Dotan, with her son, was up from Lamar attending the fair yesterday and carried home with her a very pleasant impression of the great show. Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Harris, of Newark, N. J., and George W. Young and daughter Margaret, of Jersey Shore, are guests this week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Young, on south Allegheny street.

Miss Ella Beezer, who has been out in Missouri the past ten years, returned to Bellefonte recently and expects to spend the winter among her friends here; though at present she contemplates returning to Missouri next spring.

Joe Fautle is another Bellefontoner who could not resist the attractions of the Centre county fair, and leaving that big clothing store of his in Monongahela city in charge of his clerks he has been at his parents home this week and mingling with the big crowd on the fair grounds. Miss Merriman and Miss Mary Blanchard will leave for Chicago October 18th, taking with them one of the largest exhibits made from the Bellefonte Basket Shop. The exhibit will consist of four hundred baskets and will be held at the Auditorium during the last week of October.
