HIS VAST ESTATES AT STAKE

London, Nov. 9.—Hundreds of people vainly fought for admittance to the Marylebone police court when the hearing of the famous Druce case was resumed. Many titled persons were present.

Herbert Druce, son of the late Thomas Charles Druce, is charged with perjury by his nephew, George Hollamby Druce. The charge is incidental to the Druce claim to the estates of the Duke of Portland, and dates back to 1853.

This remarkable case centers about the old question whether Thomas Charles Druce, at one time the owner of the famous Baker street bazaar, who was said to have died 43 years ago, was or was not the eccentric fifth Duke of Portland, who died in 1879.

Robert Caldwell, of Richmond county, New York, testified that he knew the late Duke of Portland both as the duke and as T. C. Druce at Welbeck Abbey and at the Baker street bazaar. He said he treated the duke at both places for a disease of the nose.

There was a buzz of excitement when Mr. Caldwell swore that in conjunction with the duke he arranged the death and mock funeral of "Druce," so that his duel personality could finally be buried.

Caldwell declared that at the duke's request he employed a carpenter to make a coffin, purchased 200 pounds of lead and put it in the coffin himself. The funeral occurred the following day.

Witness further testified that he saw the duke on the morning of the funeral at the Baker street bazaar.

When shown two photographs of Mr. Caldwell declared that they were those of the Duke of Portland in the character of T. C. Druce.

Asked to account for the beard shown in one of them, he replied that he had seen the duke wear a false beard, and had ever seen him take it off.

A day or two later he asked the Duke of Portland if the so-called Druce had left a will. The duke returned thanks for being reminded of such an important point and said he must have one made.

One of the stranger features of the case is that about the middle of June, 1906, workmen who were tearing down Harcourt house, Cavendish square, London, one of the residences of the Duke of Portland, discovered an underground passage from the house to the Baker street structure, in which the famous bazaar had been conducted by Thomas Charles Druce.

The claimant declares that the duke, while living his double life, used the underground passage to get from Harcourt house to the place of business of "Druce."

The original action in the case was brought to eject Lord Howard de Walden from the London property, which his father inherited from the fifth Duke of Portland through the supposed failure of the direct line.

The contention has been that if this suit was successful the establishing of the claimant's title to the other estates held by the Duke of Portland would follow as a natural consequence.

The income from the Duke of Portland's estates is estimated at not less than $1,500,000.

WILL INSTRUCT DELEGATES

Washington, Nov. 12.—The political convention upon which Jonathan Bourne, United States senator from Oregon, is relying to further his prophecy of a "second elective term" for President Roosevelt is to be held in Tennessee not more than two months from now. The convention will elect delegates to the Republican national convention, and if the present program is carried out these delegates will be bound by iron-clad instructions to vote for Theodore Roosevelt and none other.

Then let a week of White House silence ensue, says Bourne, and it will be all over except the shouting; that is, Mr. Roosevelt will be nominated for a third term (second elective) in spite of himself, for other states will follow suit by electing instructed delegates.

The Tennessee political leaders are waiting only for the Republican national committee to name the place and time for the national convention. This is to be done next month. Just as soon after that as practicable the Tennesseans propose to hold their convention.

President Roosevelt has been aware of this plan for some time, and if he disapproves of it the Tennessee leaders do not know it. Anyhow, they are going ahead and are already predicting that Mr. Roosevelt will be renominated and re-elected unless he repeats his declaration of November, 1904, in stronger form.

Some time ago Representative Brownlow, for a long time the Republican boss in Tennessee, failed to deliver the goods in the matter of federal patronage.

Representative Hale and H. Clay Evans, the chief third-term boomers in Tennessee, are high in favor of the White House. Mr. Hale called on the president to present Robert Sharp, whose recent appointment as internal revenue collector in Tennessee put out two followers of Representative Brownlow.

After coming from the president's office Mr. Hale had this to say about the third-term movement:

"We will hold our convention as soon after the national committee meets in Washington next month as possible, and we will elect Roosevelt delegates. We want to be the first state in the country to do this."

NO FORAKER MEETING

He Must Speak For Himself, Says Senator Dick.

Washington, Nov. 12.—Senator Charles Dick, of Ohio, denied that he was to be a party to a conference, the object of which was to launch the candidacy of Senator Foraker for president.

"It's all a mistake," said he. "I know of no such conference and certainly am not a party to it. Senator Foraker must speak for himself relating to his plans."

Senator Dick has learned that his colleague is to arrive in Washington at the end of the week. He expressed doubt whether any announcement would come from Mr. Foraker regarding the presidential nomination. Senator Foraker is known to entertain some pronounced views as to the propriety of any man proclaiming himself a candidate for president.

"If any person expects me to announce myself a candidate for president," Senator Foraker has said, commenting upon reports about himself similar to those now in circulation, "he will wait in vain. Could anything be more improper than for any man to announce his own candidacy for president?"

"The office is too big for that. I can understand how the friends of a public man might take steps to present his name or even organize in his behalf, but for a man to announce himself as if he were running for sheriff, seems to me to be far from modest."

From this view, which Senator Foraker has so often repeated with emphasis, close friends of his like Senator Dick hardly expect any announcement from the senior senator.

Light Sentence For Bigamy.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., Nov. 12.—Albert Bates was sentenced to serve one year in the penitentiary for bigamy. Origin of His Name.

In correcting the exercises of her class a teacher recently observed a new name inscribed on one of the papers—Tom Brown.

She looked round the class, but could see no new boy. Not a little puzzled, she requested Tom Brown to stand.

Up jumped Tommy Smith, and the teacher got more puzzled still. "Your name's Smith," she said, "not Brown."

Tommy looked not a little abashed and shifted uneasily from one foot to the other.

"Please, ma'am," he said, "it's owing to family trouble. I didn't do it, please, ma'am."

"But," she said sternly, "I repeat, your name is Smith."

"Please, ma'am," said the boy, "it's changed now. Ma's married the lodger."—London Mail.

Things He Saw.

A gentleman in a Liverpool restaurant the other day thought he would have a joke with the waiter and asked him if he had ever seen a sausage roll.

"Yes," replied the waiter. "I have not only seen a sausage roll, but I have seen a biscuit box, a table spoon, a bicycle pump, a penny stamp, a chimney sweep, a chain link, a nose gay, a camera slide, a garden fence, a sword fish, a spoke shave, a wall flower."

But when he got to "a fire escape" the gentleman thought it was time he escaped too.

As he was going the waiter went on with "a tap turn, a cake walk, a mountain climb, a sky lark, a honey comb."

But by this time the customer was hurrying down the street in a dazed condition.—Liverpool Mercury.

Pennsylvania Railroad Announcement.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD BULLETIN.

THE NEW UNION STATION AT WASHINGTON.

All the passenger trains of the Pennsylvania Railroad will enter and depart from the new Union Station at Washington on November 17th, 1907, and on the same date the present station at Sixth and B streets will be closed to traffic.

The date is singularly fitting. In 1807 both wings of the Capitol were completed, and now a century later a building even larger is opened for a great public utility, which did not exist at that time.

The railroad terminal facilities at Washington have been inadequate for years, particularly at inauguration periods and on the assemblage of other large gatherings at the Capital. Their improvement was imperative and so it has come about that, by the combined effort of the railroads and the United States Government, one of the largest and unquestionably the handsomest railroad station in the world is now provided not only for the convenience of the citizens of the United States, but as a notable architectural addition to the great public buildings of the Capital City. It is a monumental edifice and a worthy type of the future structures, which will make Washington the municipal beauty spot of the world.

The station including the Concourse is longer than the Capitol and nearly as wide. The waiting room is larger than the hall of the House of Representatives. The concourse, which is the train lobby, is longer than the interior of the Capitol building, if it were one continuous hall, and half as wide. It is the largest building ever constructed for a like purpose.

Within this great structure there is every convenience the traveler can desire, so grouped about the central hall as to serve his purpose to the best advantage.

The lofty arched entrances face a plaza as large as an ordinary city park, which will be laid out as a plaza and adorned with shrubbery and fountains.

The trackage is sufficient for all demands upon it and as the entrance to and exit from the trains are separated, the confusion and jostling of hurrying crowds moving in opposite directions will be obviated.

The bigness of the station is impressive; its utilities obvious.

CLAIM OF $123.46 FOR SALE! DO YOU WANT IT? This office offers to the highest bidder an unpaid balance against the estate of the late Governor D. H. HASTINGS, amounting to ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-SIX DOLLARS and thirty-three cents, less $12.87, for which judgment has been obtained. The claim is an unpaid and undisputed account for advertising, job work and subscription to this paper. There are no allegations that any of the items are overcharged, nor is there any idea that the work was not ordered done, or not done. So that every charge in the entire account will be guaranteed correct.

It is due, however, to those who may be inclined to become bidders, that they should know that while the justice and correctness of this claim is admitted and the estate alleged to be worth any amount from a quarter to a half-million of dollars; yet the administrators—who are also its heirs and beneficiaries,—have refused payment, simply because they could plead the limitation and thus avoid the payment of an honest debt.

The above amount may not be worth much as a cash asset. It may be of some value, however, as a reminder that there are others than the ordinary "dead beat" and "debt jumpers," who seek the technicalities of the law to save the payment of just obligations.

No bond will be asked from bidders. Any "old thing" will be considered good when compared with a wealthy estate that won't pay a just debt.
