Orders Troops to Remain at Goldfield if Legislature is Convened.

SOVERNOR ISSUES THE CALL

Washington, Dec. 30.-In response to an almost pathetic appeal from the governor of Nevada, President Roosevelt countermanded the order for the removal of the troops that are on duty at Goldfield to prevent a strike riot, and directed that, in the event that the governor within five days calls a special session of the legislature, the troops shall remain there for three weeks. If the governor of Nevada declines to call the legislature the troops will leave Goldfield, and Nevada will have to work out its own salvation.

The case is one of the most peculiar in American history, and has a very serious side, for it directly affects the powers of the state and national executives in the use of federal troops to preserve order where there is no interstate or federal interest in dan-

Governor John Sparks, of Nevada, in his appeal to the president not to remove the troops from Goldfield, declares that he is not only powerless to control the situation, but that he has good reason to believe that the legislature, if called into extra session, will refuse to do anything in the interest of law and order. He bases lature at its last session refused to allow the creation of a state constabulary, and that the lower house adopted a resolution expressing sympathy with Haywood, Moyer and Pettibone. He declares that the maintenance of order at Goldfield, where there are two armed and hostile camps of strength far beyond the powers of the civil officers to control, can only be assured by the indefinite retention there of troops of the United States.

The president in his reply is sharp and short. He says that it is the business of a state to keep order, and when it finds that it cannot keep order, the legislature of a state may ask for the aid of the federal government: but only when the legislature of the state makes this request can it be complied with. He berates the governor for not doing his duty in calling the legislature, no matter what his fears as to its action, and says that he will allow the federal troops to remain at Goldfield for the next three weeks only upon condition that the governor call the legislature.

Extra Session Called.

Reno, Nev., Dec. 30 .- A special session of the Nevada legislature has been called by Governor John Sparks. The governor said the date of convening the legislature will be Jan. 14. The call was made at the request of President Roosevelt, who has notified Nevada's governor that such action must be taken or the troops now stationed at Goldfie. will be removed. Notification of the decision to assemble the legislature has been transmitted to Washington. County Commissioner Rosenthal, of Goldfield, whose resignation has been requested by Governor Sparks, has refused to vacate his office.

President Returns to Washington. Washington, Dec. 31 .- Looking the picture of health and with every anpearance of having enjoyed his outing of five days at Pine Knot, Va., where Mrs. Roosevelt has a cottage, President Roosevelt arrived here over the Southern railway. After assisting Mrs. Roosevelt to the platform, the president conversed a few moments with those who had gathered around his car. One member of the party laughingly inquired of the president if he had bagged any big game. "Oh. I didn't go after any." was the quick response. "I just took the children to the country for an outing. We all enjoyed ourselves immensely."

Drowned Trying to Save Brother. Mifflintown, Pa., Dec. 27.-John and Milton Tabb, aged seventeen and fifteen years respectively, were drowned, and their brother James narrowly escaped a like fate while skating on a dam here. Milton broke through the ice, and his brother John in his efforts to rescue him also broke through the ice. James, the third and older brother, went to the rescue, and he also crashed through the ice. Others who came to the rescue succeeded in getting James out of the water, but the other two sank. The bodies were re-

Tyler's Granddaughter Assaulted. Washington, Dec. 30. - While returning from a visit to Louise home, where she went to make a call upon a dying aunt, Miss Letitia Tyler, a granddaughter of President Tyler, was assaulted and robbed of her purse by an unknown man. Miss Tyler's aunt, who was Mrs. Letitia Sample, a niece of President Tyler, died Sunday afternoon. Miss Tyler is sixty-five years old and a clerk in the navy department. Her assailant was not apprehended. Mrs. Semple, during President Tyler's incumbency, acted as the mistress of the White House.

Man With Spasms Drowned. Wilmington, Del., Dec. 31. - While working on the banks of the Brandywine at the Rockland Paper mills, Adolf Delama, aged thirty-four years, was seized with convulsions and fell into the water. Before help could reach him he drowned. The victim had dong been subject to the spasms that eventually led him to death.

Duchess Dudley, dying in 1655, left $500 per annum for the redemption of poor English Christian slaves from the hands of "the barbarous Turk," and in the year 1725 Thomas Belton of Hoxton proved his enmity toward his own kith and kin by cutting off his three sons and his brother Timothy with a shilling apiece, while he showed his sympathy for his distressed countrymen by leaving the bulk of his property, about $125,000, in trust to the Ironmongers' company. One Way to Judge.
"Do you know," said the head waiter at a fashionable restaurant, "that an experienced waiter can usually tell whether a diner is wealthy or not by the way he handles his meal check? If a man carelessly pitches out his money for the waiter to pay the bill without looking over his check we know the chances are that he isn't wealthy. He is indulging in a luxury and fears he might be ridiculed if he examined the check. On the other hand, the man who has plenty of money examines his check closely, as a rule. If he finds an item which he thinks is wrong he tells the waiter about it. It was probably just such care as that that made him rich. Is he laughed at?

A Peer Who Starts Women's Fashions.

Entomologist, sportsman, agriculturist and politician, Lord Walsingham, who re-cently celebrated his sixty-fourth birthday, is "several single gentlemen rolled into one," and has a variety of interests denied to the average man. His collection of moths and butterflies is the largest and most important in the world, and, by his generosity, is the property of the nation, to whom it was conveyed by deed of gift in 1901. A large part of it is in the Natural History Museum at South Kensingtou, and it is a curious and little known fact that women's fashions are directly indebted to Lord Walsingham and his collection. Dressmakers and designers of Court gowns go to the drawers and cases of butterflies and moths to study new combinations and contrasts of color, subtle shades of nature and harmonies of tone, which are to be beheld and studied there, and there
