COOLNESS IN BATTLE.

Bismarck's Test of Von Moltke at Koniggratz.

Then he came to speak of the battle of Koniggratz and especially of that "anxious moment" in it before the arrival of the crown prince in the rear of the Austrians, when some Prussian attacks had failed and there were signs of disorder among the repulsed troops. "It was an anxious moment." said

I confess I felt not a little the salon, but failed to find his paintnervous. I looked at Moltke, who sat ing. He was wandering disconsolately quietly on his horse and did not seem about, when he noticed a great crowd to be disturbed by what was going on before a picture. He drew near. It was around us. I thought I would test his "Dante and Virgii." But it was in whether he was really as calm as he a magnificent, richly gilded frame, as appeared. Moltke looked at them and even handled them with great attention in money to frame it, and"order to ascertain their relative value and then with slow deliberation chose the Havana. 'Very good.' he said composedly. This reassured me very much I thought if Moltke can bestow so much time and attention upon the choice between two cigars things cannot be very bad. Indeed, a few minutes later we heard the crown prince's guns, we observed unsteady and confused movements on the Austrian positions, and the battle was won."-Carl Schurz in McClure's.

WON THE VERDICT.

The Jury Did Its Best to Make Good Uncle Sam's Word.

General Tom Edgar, the first white child born on Galveston island (his birthday was in June, 1837), once narrated his experience as a juror in the case of a negro on trial for stealing a mule. It was in 1865, while United States soldiers were still in charge a Galveston. The negro pleaded not guilty, but the testimony was pretty clear against him. His lawyer, ignoring the testimony, based his defense upon the assertion that the negro could not possibly be guilty.

"Is it not a fact," he said, "that the federal government promised to every freed man two mules and sixty acres of land? No man can deny it, because it is a fact. My client has not received his promised sixty acres of land. He has not received his promised span of mules. He has indeed got but our mule, as these witnesses have testified. and the United States still owes him another mule and sixty acres of land. I leave it to you, gentlemen." he said.

The Chimney.

Where wood is much used as a fuel. according to Suburban Life, considerable soot collects in the chimneys, and it is a source of many fires. Whe chimney should be burned out once a year at least and the work done on a damp day, or it may be swept out. A chimney is burned out by placing a bundle of straw or similar material in the bottom of the flue and firing it. To sweep out a chimney a small metal ball about four inches in diameter is hung on a thin rope and pulled up and down in the chimney until it is clean. When not too high, the chimney can be cleaned by a brush on a jointed pole.

Birds That Play.

Some birds, like all children, like to play, and Australia and New Guinea produce the "bower bird," which builds regular playhouses. These houses are not a part of their nests, but are constructed usually in the shape of covered archways of little boughs two or three feet long, eighteen inches high and about as wide. They use these houses simply for their games, as if they were clubhouses. Generally these playhouses are decorated with bright colored shells and feathers, just as children decorate their playhouses.

Lucky Future Generations.

There is a saying of Carlyle that the greatest hope of our world lies in the certainty of heroes being born into it. That is indeed a glorious certainty, but the reference might be enlarged. Birth itself, we venture to say, not of heroes only, but of the generations in their succession, is the infinitely hopeful thing. It is the guarantee that the world will never grow old; that it will never stand still; that no halt is to be called in its eternal progress.-Christian World.
