The Fleet at Yokohama.

Stort-battered, but magnificent, the American battleship fleet now lies in the harbor, the entire assemblage making a display that is unprecedented in the history of Yokohama, Japan. Shortly after the ships came to anchor, the mist, which had shut out their coming, cleared and a light breeze carried away the smoke from the saluting guns, revealing from the shore front the lines of white American ships of war, backed by the grey of the Japanese. Scores of small craft chartered by individuals and associations darted in and out among the battleships, the American Asiatic association being among those to give the heartiest welcome. Two thousand school children sang the American national anthem, the sound of the singing reaching far over the waters.
