Friday last for Millheim with a load of fresh fish. Before his return he disposed of over three hun-dred pounds, and seven gallons of oysters—a good days business that.

Miss Loda Rishel was quite unfortunate la week, having met with two upsets while sleigh riding and injuring her back and head, and later received additional injury by slipping on the ice, compelling her to be housed up for several days. Mrs. George N. Wolf contemplates making alterations and improvements in her bus parlors, and is disposing of the few hats left over greatly reduced figures to make room for an en tire new and full line of spring styles. Her dis-play of hats and hat trimmings on Easter, will be superior to anything ever brought to Spring Mills. Mrs. Wolf's taste in selections is we known to be exquisite, and being the only liner in town she does a large business

CENERAL STRIKE CERTAIN.

Philadelphia, March 3.-The directors of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit J. Murphy, president of the Central company will throw their company into the hands of receivers to smash the carmen's union. Arbitration has been thrown aside and the company stands ready to fight the whole city.

On the other hand, the 124 unions have pledged themselves to strike in sympathy with the carmen next Saturday and are massing their forces for a battle which will make or break labor unionism in this city. Union men that have been on the most friendly terms with their employers notified the employers that, although they were sorry, they would have to quit work when the strike gong sounds. This is the situation after days of effort on the part of influential merchants' and citizens' associations to bring about peace. Their failure is due to the remarkable implacability of one man, George H. Earle, president of the Real Estate Trust company and one of the city's three representatives on the board of directors of the Rapid Transit company. Several times, when the majority of the directors swung toward arbitration. Mr. Earle stiffened their backbones. At present the directors are unanimous Mr. Earle's influence has been nowhere more manifest than upon the Hon. John E. Reyburn, mayor of the city. The mayor vacillated in the cock until Earle took him firmly in hand. Since that day when Earle stood out single-handed against peace and overawed a whole board of directors Reyburn has been of all the lot the most virulently opposed to arbitration. There has been a good deal of curiosity as to why Mr. Earle set himself so stubbornly against all propositions to bring the company and the men to-Twp.; $500.

M. Alexander, Aug. 14, 1909, tract of Williams L. Foster et al to Frances of his atitude is set forth briefly. He does not believe that the results of arbitration could possibly be permanent. He believes that the company would have to make the same fight all over again with a set of men who have no respect for agreements.

Hope of Intervention Remote.

The hope of intervention seems so remote that employers of labor are preparing to make the best of things when troubie comes to town on Saturday. Many plants expect to shut up absolutely. Others expect they will be able to run on half time. It looks as if the theaters will be dark. Managers were notified by representatives of the 'Theater Mechanics' association that a walkout was coming. Of course there are countless factories that are not at the mercy of unions, but even these expect desertions. The walking delegates of the unions have been busy proselyting all week. The union officials insist that their missionary work has been successful and that they have put thousands of former non-union men on their lists. Just how many men will quit work on Saturday is all guess work. John Labor union, boasts that he can crack the whip over 150,000 workmer. Few save Mr. Murphy believe that so many men will strike. A conservative estimate puts the number at 75,000. Merchants whose business has suffered are asking themselves: "If 5000 idle carmen can bring about a series of riots that cost half a deran lives, injured 200 people and made Philadelphia shameful before the country, what condition of things is to be expected if 75,000 men are thrown idly upon the streets, all animated by resentment against the Rapid Transit company?"

The very success of the company in reinstating service-which it has actually done to a large degree—is expected to be an irritant when the general strike comes.

The business men have come to the conclusion that it is useless to appeal to the Rapid Transit directors. Their main hope is that councils may influence the company or that McNichol, Vare and Penrose will be able to peace delegations that Earle, as a representative of the public, would feel bound to recognize the widespread threatens to enforce the anti-hog ordidemand for arbitration from the pubwinds of public opinion like a shuttle lic, but from the announcements made by Earle himself, as well as the company, arguments for peace had no effect. After Samuel D. Lit and Gabriel Blum, as representatives of the merchants' association, had a long conference with Earle and Vice President Clarence Wolf, the following an nouncement was made:

"The merchants used their best e forts with both sides to have the strike settled, but inasmuch as neities side would relent from its position. I flames.

their efforts were of no avail."

"We have urged upon the company the disastrous effects which have accompanied the strike of the carmen

thus far," said one of the merchants. "We have tried to impress the directors of the company with the loss of life and damage to property that has resulted. We have also tried to point out to them the possible consequences of a general strike upon the entire city in the event that this strike becomes an actuality. But all our talk, all our arguments, have not shaken the directors. We have found it impossible to move them, and consequently have had to give up. I fear the outcome of their action.' The union labor people made their last plan for the strike. After a meeting of the delegates of the Central Labor union it was announced that the strike would begin the instant the clock quit striking twelve next Friday guns. night, so that the men wouldn't have to show up for work at all on Satur-

There was not the slightest sign of disorder Wednesday, and the company managed to put about 1000 cars in service during the busy hours.
