Bellefonte, Pa., May 20, 1910.

FARM NOTES.

The cows should not be driven faster than a walk while on the way to the place of milking or feeding.

Give the calves a clean look of bright clover or mixed hay every day. You will be surprised how soon they begin to eat it.

The spring calves should be kept in roomy box stalls the first summer, so they can be protected from the scalding sun and boisterous flies.

Dock the lambs early that are to be kept in the flock.

The flock should be turned to pasture early, while there is a short bite, but leave them out only a short time at first.

The change from dry feed to pasture should be made gradually.

Sudden changes cause indigestion and scour.

A run on the rye fields will be good for the sheep and good for the rye.

Hogs are waste savers. A farm without hogs has many leaks.

The fall litter should come in early September, if possible; therefore the sows should be bred in May.

Do not put any other stock in the pig pasture.

Cattle do not relish eating after pigs, and colts are apt to injure hogs by chasing them.

Look out for creep hogs; the little pigs will find them.

Fortify your wire fence by placing boards around the bottom. The tighter these fit to the ground the better.

Swine learn bad habits easily, and are very cute.

The difference in the handling of two colts may make several hundreds of dollars difference when they are offered for sale.

Before turning the young horses and colts to pasture, have the teeth of each one examined by a competent veterinary surgeon.

Defective teeth may retard the growth and development of a colt, causing a loss.

Driving on one rein is usually caused by a sharp tooth or teeth.

Don't yank or whip the horse, but find the cause. It may be a sharp tooth or harness may be ill-fitting.

Some men whip their horses because they are in a bad frame of mind themselves.

Way back to the dark ages can be traced the superstition that the moon had great influence on vegetation. Even to this day there are believers in the moon theory.

Fifty or more years ago it was a very common notion among men that the moon, in its various changes, exerts a material and at times a great influence upon the weather, and upon vegetation through the weather. This opinion was not confined to the mere unlettered or unthinking portion of our race, for men of science held the same view.

One of the generalizations of this lunar wisdom is that anything which grows upward out of the ground should be planted or sown under a waxing moon, while for anything growing beneath the surface—potatoes, for instance—the practice should be reversed, and the seeding should be done when the moon is waning.

Thus Pliny, for example, a distinguished Roman philosopher, who flourished soon after the period of our Saviour's birth, told us that grain intended for immediate use should be collected at the full of the moon, or not until the moon is full, while grain intended to be kept or preserved should be collected in the new moon. He said grain intended for immediate use should be gathered at the full of the moon because grain increases so rapidly in magnitude during the increase of the moon.

The moon and weather philosophers of 1855 said that trees designed for timber should be cut down during the decline or waning of the moon, as timber cut at the time of full moon, or during the increase of the moon, will be full of sap and spongy, and so soon become wormy and rot and be worthless. But M. Duhamel Monceau, a French agriculturist, tested this theory by felling trees at different and opposite periods of the lunar month, trees of the same age and exposure and growing upon the same soil, and found them to remain the same in point of quality, and show no difference in regard to their durability—thus giving a death blow to that theory.

We were also told that the planting of garden seeds and trees, and grafting and pruning of trees, should be done during the increase of the moon (this being nothing more than Pliny's notion a little extended), as the increasing moon tends to increase the rapidity of the growth of these seeds and grafts, and also the healing of the wound made by the pruning knife.

But M. Arago, a highly distinguished French philosopher, who has taken great pains to collect and examine the various notions entertained by the populace concerning the moon's influences on the weather, vegetation, etc., is of the opinion that all or most of the changes that commonly occur in the weather, vegetation, etc., while the moon is in or is passing through a particular phase, are not caused by the moon at all, but by some other cause or causes not yet fully or distinctly known.

And Dr. Lardner, a distinguished English philosopher, who lectured with great eclat on scientific subjects years ago in Philadelphia, New York and elsewhere, and who derived much of his material in relation to lunar influences from M. Arago, concludes his review of them thus, viz.: "In conclusion, then, it appears that of all the various influences popularly supposed to be exerted on the surface of the earth (by the moon) few have any foundation in fact."

Another scientific writer in the Literary Record and Journal, published at Gettysburg, Pa., in 1845, took the same position, for he said: "None of the known laws of nature have as yet been able to explain why the moon should influence the movement of sap in plants, the durability of a roof shingled in a particular phase, the time of felling, and a thousand other things which are commonly received as facts. Popular opinion has invested one little satellite (the moon) with almost unlimited power, and the most extraordinary and opposite effects are attributed to its influence. It does not follow, however, that that which is generally believed must necessarily be true; and if the foundation on which these opinions rest be very slightly examined, it will be found that few of them are even apparently sustained by facts."

Alive Under an Avalanche.

Human beings occasionally live through incredibly long imprisonments after their dwellings have been overwhelmed by avalanches. On March 19, 1755, avalanches buried the village of Bergemolletto, in the Italian Alps, and on April 25 three women were dug out alive from a stable in which they had been immured for thirty-seven days in the dark beneath the mass of snow which lay forty-two feet higher than the roof. With them had been buried a little boy, six goats, a donkey and some hens.

The child, the donkey and the fowls soon died, but the goats helped the women to survive, their milk supplementing the thirty or forty cakes and the pocketful of chestnuts upon which they depended for food. Hope of finding the women alive had been abandoned when far in April the brother of one had a dream in which she appealed to him for rescue.

The weather then at last made excavation possible, and the women were restored to the world and presently to health.—Chicago News.

Dew as Drinking Water.

The English administration at Gibraltar, where water is very scarce, collects dew by the following very simple method: A large pit is dug in the earth and covered with dry wood or straw, which in turn is covered either with earth or with sheet iron. The straw or wood serves as a heat insulator and effectually prevents the conduction of heat from the ground to the layer of earth or the sheet iron above. Consequently this earth or iron cools after sunset much more rapidly than the ground, so that its temperature soon falls below the dew point of the surrounding air; hence dew is formed upon the iron or the layer of earth in very large quantities. The water thus obtained is drained off into reservoirs and after clarification is used for drinking.—Scientific American.

Sheep as Land Cleaners.

In discussing the value of sheep on a country place their service as land cleaners should not be ignored. They like pasture grasses, but they seem to like weeds and bushes even better for browse. They will often clean up an old field in a year or two, so that what was a tangle of unsightly weeds and shrubs will appear a smooth shaven lawn. Angoras are simply wonders at this sort of thing, but the common, everyday sheep of the ordinary breed will do mighty good work if you confine her to her job and put in enough of her. Five years ago one small pasture of mine was a veritable chapparal of thorn bushes and solidago. I set the ewes in it, and today it's as pretty a bit of sward as there is on the ranch—bushless and weedless and thick turf.—Country Life in America.

Soon Tired of His Books.

The 7,000 volumes of chronicles and travels from which Gibbon distilled the "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" were purchased by Beckford after the writer's death. "I bought it," said the author of "Vathek," "to have something to read when I passed through Lanesane." There were few rarities in the collection, but most of the authors were in the best obtainable editions and in perfect condition. The fastidious Gibbon was incapable of behaving disrespectfully to a book. For six weeks Beckford reveled in his purchase and read himself nearly blind. He soon tired of his books, however, and presented the whole collection to a German physician named Schell. The recipient showed his appreciation of the treasure by promptly selling it.

Not Moved by Kindness.

A stout woman entered a crowded car and took hold of a strap directly in front of a man seated in the corner. As the car started she lunged against his newspaper and trod heavily on his toes. As soon as he could extricate himself he rose and offered her his seat.

"You are very kind, sir," she said, panting for breath.

"Not at all, madam," he replied. "It's not kindness. It's simply self-defense."

Headed Him Off.

"Sir, I have grown gray in your service," began the old bookkeeper preliminary to asking for a raise.

"I was intending to speak to you about that," responded the head of the firm. "Get a bottle of hair dye. Otherwise the junior partner will be wanting to replace you with a younger man."—Kansas City Journal.

Appropriate.

"I want to look at some canes," said a magnificent young man to the shopkeeper, "and I'm in a great hurry."

"Yes, sir; yes, sir," responded the shopkeeper, very much flurried. "Here, James," to shop assistant, "show this gentleman some hurricanes."—London Fun.

He Was in Charge.

"What did you do in the army?"

"Most of the time I was in charge of a squad of men."

"On special duty?"

"No; they were taking me to the guardhouse."—Cleveland Leader.

Doesn't Feel Put Out.

Tess—I broke my engagement with him because he wouldn't give up tobacco. Jess—Then he is an old flame of yours? Tess—Yes, and he's still smoking.—St. Louis Star.

More Important.

Policeman—Do you have to take care of the dog? Nursegirl—No. The missus says I'm too young and inexperienced. I only look after the children.—Life.

Our National Game.

"The raw American citizen," says Ellis Parker Butler in Success Magazine, "who takes his seat at a ball game for the first time feels as he would should he drop into the Metropolitan Opera House and find himself hearing Wagnerian opera from a seat in the midst of seasoned German opera goers. He hears a language that is new to him. The man at his right can tell more about the first baseman's peculiarities than he could tell about the manners of his own wife. The man at his left has trouble remembering the size collar he wears, but he can name every man in every club of both major leagues, tell the age of each, give the complete table of batting records offhand and recite, item by item, every feature of every game played on the home grounds during the last five years. That is why baseball is our national game. We love the game not because we are Chicagoans and the Chicago nine wins nor because we are Pittsburghers and the Pittsburgh nine is winning, but because we are educated in baseball and like to see a good game played by the best men in their field that can be found in the world."

Her Father's Job.

The young daughter of a popular Chicago clergyman some time ago manifested a quick wit. Her father had gone on a brief holiday with a business partner and associate, and the talk of the children turned on the problem of which father needed the rare rest most sorely.

"Well, I think my father works the hardest," said little Miss Business, "and his work keeps him stirred up and anxious most of the time."

"Your father may work the hardest in one way," was little Miss Clergyman's answer, at once thoughtful and diplomatic, "but I think he gets more rest as he goes along. You see, he can let down a little evenings and Sundays, and if he gets cross and nervous nobody says anything. But my daddy has to be better than ever Sundays and evenings, because then everybody's talking notice, and the whole lot of us children are around."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Shortened His Wait.

"Experience," said Mark Twain once, "makes us wise, but it also makes us hard. Consider the old, experienced man in the busy restaurant. He took a seat, looked round him and, pointing to a well dressed gentleman who had not yet been served, said to the waiter:

"Waiter, how long has that gentleman been here?"

"About twelve minutes, sir," the waiter answered.

"What's his order?"

"Porterhouse and French fried, sir, with mince pie and coffee to come."

"The old man, hardened by experience, slipped a quarter in the waiter's hand.

"Waiter," he said, "I'm in a hurry. Put on another porterhouse and bring me his."

Fresh Discovery of an Old Truth.

Helen's enjoyment of the party given in honor of her ninth birthday was nearly spoiled by the ill tempered outbreaks of a very pretty and well dressed little girl who was among her guests. A peace-maker appeared, however, in a plain and rather shabby child, who proved herself a veritable little angel of tact and good will.

After her playmates were gone Helen talked it all over very seriously with her mother. She summed it up in this piece of philosophical wisdom: "Well, I've found out one thing.

Medical.

Do the right thing at the right time. Act quickly in times of danger. Backache is kidney danger. Doan's Kidney Pills act quickly. Cure all distressing, dangerous kidney ills. Plenty of evidence to prove this.

Mrs. J. F. Thal, 23 W. Thomas street, Bellefonte, Pa., says: "I am very grateful to Doan's Kidney Pills for what they have done for me. My back ached for a long time and I had severe pains in my kidneys, accompanied by headaches and attacks of 'ziness. The kidney secretions were too frequent in passage and caused me no end of annoyance. When my attention was called to Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a supply at Green's Pharmacy Co., and it did not take them long to give me relief. I cheerfully recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to anyone afflicted with kidney complaint." (Statement given October 21st, 1907.)

THEY NEVER FAIL.

When Mrs. Thal was interviewed on November 22nd, 1909, she said: "I still have unlimited confidence in Doan's Kidney Pills for whenever I have used them in the past two years, they have benefited me. You may continue to publish my former endorsement of this remedy."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Salt and Health.

Few persons understand the therapeutic value of salt. A little salt in one's drinking water is "good medicine." Salt applications to the skin are wonderfully soothing and wholesome. There is nothing better as a wash for the throat and the nasal passages to prevent or to cure catarrhal troubles than a solution of common salt in plain water—the cheapest remedy one can find. Many persons give their eyes a daily bath of cold salt water with satisfactory results.

The Married Voice.

A dramatic critic has been saying that our most accomplished players cannot reproduce on the stage the "married voice," even when they are married. There is a peculiar domestic note—used at home—which cannot get over the footlights and was never meant for publicity.—London Chronicle.

Soporific.

"I heard one man," said the playwright, "who attended the premiere of my new play last night complain that it was so late when he got out."

"Yes," queried the critic.

"Yes, and yet the final curtain fell before 10:45."

"Ah, perhaps he overslept himself!"—Catholic Standard and Times.

In Half Mourning.

"I don't understand you, Linda. One day you're bright and jolly and the next depressed and sad."

"Well, I'm in half mourning; that's why."—Fliegende Blätter.

No Fear of the Tail.

Nearly all comets' tails have cyanogen in them, and this is not the first time we have encountered a comet's tail, but no one noticed anything except a splendid display of northern lights.

No; we need have no fear of the tail. If the head of a comet struck us, that would be a different story. But we are not going to come anywhere near the head. When we pass through the tail, the head will be 14,000,000 miles away. The comet and the earth will be traveling in opposite directions. The earth is moving at a speed of nineteen miles a second and the comet at twenty-two, so we won't tarry long in the tail, not more than a few hours at most.—From A. Russell Bond's "Halley's Comet," in June St. Nicholas.

This is the month when cows go to pasture through a large part of the country. Give them a good start. Keep them in good heart till they have really made the change from hay to grass. It will pay.

When the calf is about a month old separator milk can be given with flaxseed jelly added. Begin with about two table-spoonfuls and increase to a cupful.
