

ENGLAND WINS HER MAIN POINTS.

Ruling Will Keep New England Fishermen Out of Canadian Bays—Colonies May Adopt Laws Affecting Treaty Rights.

The international court of arbitration at The Hague has rendered its decision in the Newfoundland fisheries case submitted by the United States and Great Britain, but which involved the local governments of Canada and Newfoundland.

Neither country wins a clear-cut award. The general issue was presented in the form of seven questions or points. On these the tribunal supports the United States in five and Great Britain in the other two.

The British consider the points decided in their favor, Nos. 1 and 5, as of the highest importance, and it is understood that the colonial office is satisfied with the outcome.

On No. 1, however, the United States has raised certain questions of equity, which will be submitted to a special commission.

It is also significant that the court was unanimous on all questions except the fifth, and from the decision of this Luis Drago, member from the Argentine Republic, gave a dissenting opinion largely supporting the American contentions.

On all others of the main questions the tribunal sustains the principal contentions of America. The court finds that the claims of Great Britain to a right to prohibit American vessels from employing foreigners, and to impose light harbor customs and other duties are unauthorized by the treaty of 1818.

The tribunal finds that the regulation of the manner, time and implements of fishing which Great Britain or Newfoundland enforces must be reasonable and appropriate, but Great Britain cannot be the sole judge of their reasonableness.

In case of disagreement the question must be determined by an impartial tribunal like The Hague, or a special commission.

On question six, which presented the claim of Great Britain to exclude fishermen from the bays and harbors on the treaty coasts of Newfoundland and the Magdalen islands, the tribunal declares, without qualification, in favor of America.

Dealing with question five, which was decided adversely to the United States, the court followed the strict letter of the British-American treaty, whereby America renounced the right to fish in any bays on non-treaty coasts.

The court holds that this renunciation applied to all bays, irrespective of their size, instead of to small bays only, as was contended by the Americans. The arbitrators were not unanimous on this question.

Regarding point one, on which the American counsel have raised questions of equity, the tribunal holds that the right of Great Britain to make fishing regulations without the consent of America is inherent in her sovereignty.

But in the exercise of the right to make limited regulations these must not violate the treaty of 1818 or be so framed as to give the local fishermen an advantage over the Americans.

The provisions of the award apply not only to future legislation by the imperial government and the colonies, but require that the existing statutes and regulations, to which the Americans have objected, be submitted to a commission which shall judge of their reasonableness, necessity and fairness in the light of the principles laid down by the tribunal.

In connection with its decision that the reasonableness of the fishing regulations must be determined through expert information the tribunal directs the appointment of a commission of specialists, calls upon America and Great Britain to designate their commissioners within a month, and appoints as a third commissioner Dr. Hoek, scientific adviser of fisheries of the Netherlands.

Killed in Saloon Hold-Up. The Silver Bow saloon, at Silver Bow, a railroad junction seven miles west of Butte, Mont., was held up by three masked bandits and robbed. A man believed to be U. V. Sims failed to respond to the command to throw up his hands and was shot dead. Three suspects were arrested later near Silver Bow.

Storm Wrecks Circus Tent. Twenty members of the Phillips Dramatic company narrowly escaped death as the main tent collapsed in a fierce wind storm at Federalsburg, Md. Actors and actresses made hair-raising escapes from flying poles. All were caught under the tent, but were rescued by townspeople.

Green Apples Caused Death. Julia Donahue, thirteen years old, died from eating green apples at Holyoke, Mass.

James R. Keene III. James R. Keene, the noted New York financier and horseman, was taken seriously ill with pneumonia at the Phoenix hotel, in Lexington, Ky. Physicians were summoned, and his brother-in-law, Major F. A. Daingerfield, hurried over to the scene in an automobile from his country estate at Castleton, near Lexington.

Mr. Keene arrived here from New York, accompanied only by his valet. After an examination the physicians announced Mr. Keene's condition to be serious. His relatives in the east have been telegraphed and are hurrying to his bedside.

Mother and Three Daughters Drowned. While returning from a picnic in a rowboat, Mrs. W. J. Deimal and her three young daughters, of Cincinnati, were drowned in the Licking river. Their rowboat ran into a submerged log and upset.

Car Kills Trapped Man. Siler Cole, a yard conductor for the Buffalo & Susquehanna railroad, was held prisoner in a frog until run down by a car at Galeton, Pa. His leg was crushed to the hip and he died.

Murderers Drop Loot to Escape.

The bandits who murdered young Denton Fowler, assistant treasurer of the Atlas Building Material company, at Hudson, N. Y., and his negro driver, George Ragsdale, fled through the woods in such haste that they dropped the treasurer's suitcase containing $5600 in gold, silver and bills.

Police Chief James J. Lane and Superintendent Jerry Leonard, of the Atlas brickyards, stumbled upon the cash bag while they were beating up the thickets with a party of armed men.

Lane and Leonard found not only the money but Dent Fowler had been hurrying with to the Atlas brickmakers, but within a few steps of where Mr. Fowler and the plucky negro had been shot to death they came upon the weapons the robbers had used in the killing, a Winchester repeating rifle, a shotgun and two revolvers.

Searching on their hands and knees through the wet brush, they found two caps, such as Italian laborers commonly wear in this part of the country; two red bandanna handkerchiefs which had been placed with eyeglasses and used for masks; the scattered fragments of an envelope and the letter the envelope had contained, and the scrap strewn spot, a tiny clearing surrounded by almost impenetrable thickets of thornbush where the robbers had made camp while they waited for young Fowler's buggy.

Fowler and his negro driver were shot dead and robbed by masked men while on their way to pay off the men.

Gunner Kills Man in Boat With Him. Norman Fleeson, twenty-three years old, of Philadelphia, was accidentally shot and killed by one of two companions while hunting reed birds in a boat on the Pennypack creek, near Holmesburg.

The fatal shot was fired by William Campbell. The third man in the boat was Charles Schaeffer. Campbell and Schaeffer were almost in a state of collapse when they gave themselves up to the police at the Tacony station.

They said that Fleeson was sitting, gun in hand, in the bow of the skiff. Campbell and Schaeffer were in the stern, the latter pulling. Fleeson spied a covey of reed birds close by and rose to his feet, putting his gun to his shoulder to shoot. Campbell saw the birds simultaneously and, taking quick aim, blazed away.

The charge entered the back of Fleeson's head and he dropped backward into the boat at the feet of his horrified friends. Death was instantaneous, the shot, fired at such close range, carrying away part of Fleeson's skull.

New Head of Mines Bureau. Dr. J. A. Holmes, chief of the technological branch of the geological survey, was appointed by President Taft director of the new bureau of mines. He succeeds George Otis Smith, who has been acting director since July 1.

The appointment of Dr. Holmes came as a complete surprise. He was known as one of the men in the interior department who was regarded by Secretary Ballinger as inimical to him. He was labeled by Mr. Ballinger as one of the "snakes" whom he intended to "kill."

Heaviest Baby Girl. A girl weighing fifteen pounds and fourteen ounces was born to Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. McGinty, of Franklin, Pa. The weight was made on accurate scales by Dr. H. P. Hammond, of Franklin, who says he believes this a record for girls. The medical records tell of a few boys weighing sixteen pounds, but no girls weighing within three or four pounds of that figure. This is the tenth child in the McGinty family, the others being boys. The father is a laborer.

Abruzzi Wins Rich Prize. The Duke of the Abruzzi has had a stroke of good luck, due directly to an act of generosity. Attracted by a little girl begging in the street in Rome, and desirous of helping her, the duke purchased from her a lottery ticket, which has drawn a prize of $18,000. The duke announced that he would give the money to the girl.

$60,000 Bulldog Dead. What was acknowledged by the dog show judges to be the finest bulldog in the world, and one for which its owner, Walter Jefferies, refused $60,000 a few weeks ago, has just died suddenly in London. It was named Dick Stone. He was a grandson of Rodney Stone, for which Richard Croker paid $50,000.

4,766,893 People in New York. Census returns show the population of Greater New York to be 4,766,893, an increase of 1,329,681, or 38.7 per cent, as compared with 3,437,202 in 1900.

New York thus holds its position as the second city of the world.

Woman Mob's Victim. Dangling from a trestle just outside Graceville, Fla., were found the bodies of Ed Christian, colored, charged with shooting Deputy Sheriff Allen Burns, and Hattie Bowman, also colored.

She had been arrested on the charge of being implicated in the crime.

Mother and Three Daughters Drowned. While returning from a picnic in a rowboat, Mrs. W. J. Deimal and her three young daughters, of Cincinnati, were drowned in the Licking river. Their rowboat ran into a submerged log and upset.

Car Kills Trapped Man. Siler Cole, a yard conductor for the Buffalo & Susquehanna railroad, was held prisoner in a frog until run down by a car at Galeton, Pa. His leg was crushed to the hip and he died.

ROOSEVELT URGES FEDERAL CONTROL.

Mr. Roosevelt visited another state capital. He came into Minnesota with the cheers of the west still ringing in his ears. He was received by thousands of men and women, who were wild in their enthusiasm.

It was the grandest reception that the colonel has yet encountered on his tour, and no one realized it better than he.

The colonel talked conversation in St. Paul, and he took occasion to endorse part of President Taft's address, but he was careful his praise did not go far. His position in regard to the control of natural resources was made unmistakably clear, for he hammered away at that phase of the new nationalism that insists that federal control shall be stronger than state control.

When he did refer to Mr. Taft and the reference was a compliment, delegates and the thousands in the galleries cheered. The reference was an interpolation in the former president's set speech. It was:

"Much that I have to say on the subject of conservation will be but a repetition of what was so admirably said from this platform Monday."

Again he said: "All friends of conservation should be in hearty agreement with the policy which the president laid down in connection with the coal, oil and phosphate lands, and I am glad to be able to say that at its last session congress finally completed the work of separating the surface title to the land from the mineral beneath it."

Strong For National Control. The question of federal or state control of water power sites is the one before the congress that has given rise to the most animosity. The president avoided committing himself on this point, leaving it for congress to decide. The colonel declared himself vigorously for federal control. In this connection he said:

"There is apparent to the judicious observer a distinct tendency on the part of our opponents to cloud the issue by raising the question of state as against federal jurisdiction. We are ready to meet that issue if it is forced upon us. But there is no hope for the plain people in such conflicts of jurisdictions."

The essential question is not one of hair-splitting legal technicalities. It is simply this: Who can best regulate the special interests for the public good? Most of the predatory corporations are interstate of have interstate affiliations. Therefore they are largely out of reach in effective state control, and fall of necessity within the federal jurisdiction. The most effective weapon against these great corporations, most of which are financed and owned on the Atlantic coast, will be federal laws and the federal executive. That is why I so strongly oppose the demand to turn these matters over to the states."

In a number of other parts of his speech Colonel Roosevelt showed that his attitude was for strong national control. He made a strong plea for the development and regulation of all the waterways and urged specifically that these be guarded from the "interests" and that the railroads be prevented from controlling them in the future as they have in the past.

Here the president injected extemporaneously: "There are classes of bulk freight which can always go cheaper and better by water if there is an adequate waterway, and the existence of such type of waterway in itself helps to regulate railroad rates."

He declared that any railroad connection with water lines should be under the "strictest regulation of the interstate commerce commission." He also asserted that the necessity of federal control of the forests had been proved and urged the formation of a federal bureau of health, declaring the financial waste to the nation in sickness and preventable deaths to be appalling.

The former president took a little shot at Congressman James A. Tawney, of Minnesota. It was ostensibly to combat the renomination of Mr. Tawney that Gifford Pinchot absented himself Monday when President Taft was here.

When Colonel Roosevelt came to that part of his speech referring to the national conservation commission, he told of the introduction into the house of representatives by a congressman from Minnesota of an amendment to the civil service bill, which, he said, was designed to put an end to the work of the commission. His recital threw the crowd into an uproar. A man in the balcony shouted: "Now what do you think of Tawney?"

The colonel went on to say that the subject came up just at the close of his term in the White House. If he had remained president, he said, he would have paid no attention to this provision of law, because he believed it to be unconstitutional. This declaration was applauded loudly.

Nearly 100,000 Greet T. R. The conservation congress, while it was a big affair, didn't compare with the tremendous crowd that Mr. Roosevelt faced at the Minnesota state fair grounds. A gathering estimated at between 95,000 and 100,000 persons jammed themselves into the enclosure and most of them heard the colonel make a long speech. The management declared that Roosevelt drew the largest crowd of persons that ever this state had.

In the hotel lobbies and on the streets one hears arguments as to who drew the greater crowds, Roosevelt or Taft. The consensus of opinion very strongly favors Roosevelt. It was a respectable, cordial reception that Mr. Taft got. Roosevelt got the whoops and the shouts.
