Dedicate Shaft at Gettysburg

Old Soldiers from All Parts of Pennsylvania Attend.

Standing in a blistering summer sun during the early part of the ceremonies and in a drenching rain toward the end, 20,000 Pennsylvanians, one-fourth of them Civil War veterans, attended the impressive dedication of the memorial erected by Pennsylvania to her sons who fought at Gettysburg forty-seven years ago.

The unpleasant weather did not in any degree lessen the enthusiasm of the veterans. Only one or two were prostrated by the heat. When the rain started to fall General Gregg was speaking.

Saying that he did not wish to keep his comrades in the wet he was about to stop, when from all sides came cries of "Go on; go on!" Until he had finished the old soldiers stood in the pouring rain, entirely oblivious to their discomfort.

Pennsylvania was represented by many of her most prominent sons in present day life and by practically all of her men of Civil War fame who are now living.

The throng which viewed the ceremonies completely covered the broad expanse of ground immediately surrounding the monument and extended in the direction of the famous Bloody Angle.

No display or ostentation marked the exercises. There was no parade, no salute. The veterans went to the scene of the dedication singly or in groups, while the orators and others who took part in the activities of the day were conveyed to the monument without escort.

The only touch of the spectacular was given when the students from Gettysburg college marched to the memorial carrying aloft their college colors and each wearing a band of orange and blue. One hundred of their number were on the program to sing "Angel of Peace," and as the students marched from East Cemetery Hill to the Pennsylvania monument over the ground occupied by the Union army when Pickett's mighty charge was repulsed, they sang to stirring march time "Hail, Columbia."

The band from the Soldiers' Orphan Industrial school at Scotland, Pa., opened the program with music and the prayer was made by Chaplain M. B. Riddle. General H. S. Huldekooper, president of the commission which had in charge the erection of the monument and all arrangements for the dedication, made the address turning over the memorial to Governor Stuart, representing the state of Pennsylvania.

The monument itself, which was erected at a cost of $150,000, is the most magnificent of the more than 500 memorials which dot the battlefield. The monument rises in the center of Pennsylvania park and towers sixty-nine feet into the air, and is forty feet square. It is of granite, surmounting a parapet eighty-four feet square, enclosed in a stone coping, in niches in which are numerous bronze tablets bearing inscriptions. It is built in the form of a hollow square, a high arch opening from each of the four sides, each topped by huge reliefs, and the whole structure is topped by a dome on which is perched a figure symbolizing victory and made of iron cannon used in the Civil War.

The memorial contains the records of the Pennsylvania commands which took part in the battle. There were sixty-nine regiments of infantry, nine of cavalry and seven batteries of artillery. Total present, 34,530; killed and mortally wounded, 1182; wounded, 3177; missing, 860; total loss, 5219.

The names of thirty-four generals appear. Among them are: Meade, Reynolds, Hancock, Gregg, Birney, Geary, Humphreys, Hayes, Crawford, Rowley, Pleasanton, Gibbons, Winster, Hues, Vincent, Muhlenberg, J. L. Greeg, Cobham, Lyle, Fisher, Coulter, Schimpffening, Biddle, McCandless, Stone, Tipton, Kane, Brooke, McIntyre, Dana, Switzer, Fraser, Neill and McKean.

The reliefs above the arches represent the engagement at McPherson's barn, near where Reynolds was killed; an artillery company going into action, a cavalry charge and Warren's signal corps on Round Top.
