creased the loss of life. The vicinity of the mine seethed with excitement. It was difficult to obtain a coherent statement from any one. About the head of the shaft were gathered thousands of people, including the relatives and friends of the men entombed. Ropes had to be stretched to keep back the crowd and to prevent a stampede when the bodies were brought out. The company officials acted with the greatest promptness when they learned the extent of the disaster, but once started the fire spread with remarkable rapidity. It caught on the timbering of the shaft and spread along the gangway. It seized upon everything that it could devour and everything that it could devour and with a wall of flame separated from safety the men who were in distant

Joseph Evans, head of the United States mine rescue car, died. A defective rescue helmet caused him to suffocate while working in the burning mine. The only man brought out alive from the zone of the fire was Joseph Vickers, a fire boss. Vickers finding the fire was becoming dangerous, accompanied by a companion, ran down the gangway to give the alarm. Before they had gone far their lights went out. Vickers realized his danger and started back. He missed his companion. He managed to get by the worst place on his return, but had gone only a little way beyond it when he was overcome by smoke. Hours later he was found by the fire fighters.

Miner Crushed to Death. A sudden fall of many tons of earth and rock in an ore mine belonging to the Juniata Furnace and Foundry company, near Beavertown, Carroll township, Pa., killed John Heiges, forty-five years old. High Pressure Days.

Men and women alike have to work incessantly with brain and hand to hold their own rowadays. Never were the demands of business, the wants of the family, the requirements of society, more numerous. The first effect of the praiseworthy effort to keep up with all these things is commonly seen in a weakened or debilitated condition of the nervous Matthews system, which results in dyspepsia, de-...Andrews fective nutrition of both body and brain, and in extreme cases in complete nervous prostration. It is clearly seen that what is needed is what will sustain the system, give vigor and tone to the nerves, and Tours keep the digestive and assimilative func-.Cruickshank tions healthy and active. From personal Gound knowledge, we can recommend Hood's Old Chant Sarsaparilla for this purpose. It acts on Sullivan all the vital organs, builds up the whole system, and fits men and women for these high-pressure days.
