

KILLED IN STONE QUARRY.—Fradandito Tazano, an Italian laborer, was crushed so badly by a large stone falling on him in No. 21 quarry of the American Lime and Stone company, last Saturday morning, that he died at noon the same day in the Bellefonte hospital. Tazano was one of a gang of men working on the slope side of the quarry, at the Humes farm, and while thus engaged an immense stone, weighing almost one ton, and which was probably loosened from its holdings by the recent heavy rains, slid down the slope. One of the workmen saw the rock coming and called to his comrades and they all got out of the way in time except Tazano. The rock first struck a car and smashed it to pieces then fell upon Tazano. His fellow workmen rushed to his aid but it was at once apparent that he was so badly injured that death was inevitable but he was hurriedly taken to the hospital to make his last hours as easy as possible. The accident happened at 10:15 o'clock and the man died at noon. This is the first accident of that particular kind ever happening in this company's quarries.

Tazano was born in Italy and was twenty-three years of age. He came to this country when quite a young man and worked several years when he returned to his native land and married, so that he leaves a wife and small child in Italy. On this trip he had been here only about seven months. The remains were buried from the Catholic church on Monday morning, interment being made in the Catholic cemetery.

VOTED AGAINST VOTING FOR PASTOR.—Dr. W. H. Schuyler, of Centre Hall, preached in the Presbyterian church on Sunday morning and following the service presided as moderator over a congregational meeting held for the purpose of taking action relative to the selection of a pastor. The first question left to the congregation was as to whether they should vote at that meeting upon the selection of a pastor and the question was defeated by a vote of 74 to 61. This means that the majority of the congregation want to hear more candidates before they make selection of a permanent pastor. There is now a list of some eight or ten ministers who have preached trial sermons for the vacant pulpit, and are avowed candidates for the congregation at the meeting on Sunday it would appear that they are not yet satisfied that they have heard the right man.

INTERESTING TENNIS CONTEST.—Members of the Lock Haven tennis association will play teams of the Bellefonte association on the courts on east Linn street this (Friday) afternoon at three o'clock. Lock Haven boasts of some of the best tennis players in Central Pennsylvania and the Bellefonte teams will have to play hard to hold them even. Since the opening of the new courts on Linn street they have been in use every nice day and evening by the members of the association, and are proving quite an attraction for a crowd of spectators. The game is good, healthy exercise for both men and women, and the latter are in many instances more expert than the men.

Britain's Ruler Crowned.

George V. Formally Ascends Throne. London's Great Day.

King George was crowned in London amid scenes that surpassed any that have marked previous coronations. The program adhered strictly to the arrangements.
In anticipation of the day's event large crowds were early in the streets, along the Strand and around Westminster abbey. Many remained up all night in the hope of getting a good vantage point from which to see the regal procession. Festoons, flags and streamers were everywhere, and the coronation route was lavishly decorated with masses of color. Stand spectators did a thriving business.
The abbey began to fill several hours before the time set for the coronation service. As the distinguished personages were conducted to their allotted seats the opera glasses in the gallery critically examined the gowns and jewels. Such a display of jewels never before was seen at a court ceremony.
The procession of their majesties in their coach from Buckingham palace, the home of Britain's king and queen, to Westminster abbey, where the coronation service took place, was without special incident.
The service in the abbey began with the reconsecration of the regalia. As the king and queen came in sight the archbishop of Canterbury took his seat in front of the coronation chair. The queen passed to the left of the throne and to her chair. Then the king appeared, bowed to the queen as he passed and he knelt in prayer before his chair in front of the throne.
The king stood while the archbishop read the recognition, or election, beginning, "Sirs, I here present unto you King George, the undoubted king of this realm," etc. The king and queen knelt while the archbishop said the communion service, and the singing of the Creed followed.
Next came the administration of the oath. The archbishop, standing before the king's chair, asked, "Sir, is your majesty willing to take the oath?" The king answered, "I am willing," and signed the oath.
After the archbishop's anointing prayer the sword, armillae and all were delivered to the king, according to the program. The choir started "God Save the King," and this was the signal which started bell ringing, gun firing and shouting throughout the city's streets.
The Bible having been presented, the king knelt to receive the benediction. He then walked to the great throne, where the archbishop, Prince of Wales and nobles knelt and paid homage.
The queen's crowning was brief and simple. She left her chair and proceeded to the altar steps, where she was quickly crowned by the archbishop of York. She was then led to the throne beside that in which the king sat. She bowed to him, and both walked to the altar and received the communion.
The service was completed with the singing of the "Te Deum."
Salutes and massed bands playing "God Save the King" marked the departure of their majesties from the abbey. The procession returned to the palace by a more circuitous route than that taken in going to the abbey in order to afford a view to additional hundreds of thousands.
As the king and queen rode through the streets jubilation was unrestrained, and the crowds kept parading the streets for hours afterward.
Both the king and queen bore the fatiguing ceremony well. While the coronation was being solemnized messages of congratulation poured in from all over the world.
The state carriage in which King George proceeded to the coronation has carried five of his predecessors to the abbey on a similar occasion. It was built 150 years ago, in 1761, for King George III, and its body, which weighs over four tons, is of fine oak, with allegorical paintings by Cipriani on the panels. Its initial cost was $35,000. George IV, William IV, Victoria and Edward VII. also rode in it to their coronations. It was drawn by eight of the celebrated cream horses from the royal stables, and a groom in state livery walked at each horse's head. The harness, which is covered with red morocco leather, with gold plated metal facings, was the same as was used at Queen Victoria's diamond jubilee and at Edward VII's coronation in 1902.
The king wore his crimson robes during the impressive ceremony of the recognition. For the ceremony of the anointing the crimson robes and cap of state were removed, and as he sat in the historic coronation chair he wore an underjacket of cloth of gold embroidered with palm branches and the national emblems of England, Ireland and Scotland. When he had been anointed on the crown of the head, on the breast and on the palms of both hands, he was robed in amice, stole and royal dalmatic—ecclesiastical vestments transformed into magnificent robes of cloth of gold, described in the coronation ritual as "the colobium sindonis and the superunica, or close pall of cloth of gold, together with a girdle of the same." When the spurs had been presented and the king had been girt with a sword he was invested with the imperial mantle of cloth of gold and the armillae, or bracelets of gold, edged with pearls and ornamented with harps, roses and fleurs-de-lis. In these handsome vestments he was crowned and enthroned.
The queen looked exquisite in her coronation dress of deep ivory duchess satin cut in princess style. The embroidery was of gold thread of varying tints, giving a delicate light and shade. A rose, shamrock and thistle in the form of a tree tapered toward the waist and widened at the corrag. Around the bottom of the gown were lotus lilies on a surface of water, emblematic of India and the seas of empire. In front of the gown was the star of India enveloped by the rose, shamrock and thistle design. The queen's train was six yards long and one and a half yards wide, fastened at the shoulders with gold cord. The train was of royal purple velvet lined with ermine, with deep edges over-turned forming the hem. On the inner side of the train was embroidered a chain of oak leaves and acorns with medallions of rose, shamrock and thistle at frequent intervals.

Commission Government For Trenton.
At a special election held in the city of Trenton, N. J., the voters adopted the provisions of the Walsh act of last winter, providing for a commission form of government, with most of the radical features that are being tried out in a number of the cities of the west and south.
The majority in favor of the proposition was 1902, the vote being 6792 for and 4890 against.
Under the Walsh act the entire present system of government will be wiped out in the city, whose affairs will be placed in complete control of an elective commission of five members, exercising both legislative and administrative functions. The commissioners will elect one of their members, who will be the putative mayor of the city. They will hold office for four years, unless the recall feature of the act should be placed in operation in the meantime. The initiative and referendum are among the other features of the act accounted upon to add to the novelty of the new scheme of government.

A Sustaining Diet.
These are the enervating days, when, as somebody has said, men drop by the sunstroke as if the Day of Fire had dawned. They are fraught with danger to people whose systems are poorly sustained; and this leads us to say, in the interest of the less robust of our readers, that the full effect of Hood's Sarsaparilla is such as to suggest the propriety of calling this medicine something besides a blood purifier and tonic,—say, a sustaining diet. It makes it much easier to bear the heat, assures refreshing sleep, and will without any doubt avert much sickness at this time of year.
