

FARM NOTES.

The best way to keep the cows clean is to use plenty of bedding. Usually the most restless cows in the herd will be found the least profitable. For dairy cows the product of one acre of clover hay is worth two in timothy. If a cow is to live up to her possibilities give her plenty of good feed and care. Butter is bitter because of impure foods or from holding the cream too long. A poor cow is relatively worse on winter feed than she would be on summer feed. It is a bad practice to allow water or butter milk to remain in the churn when not in use. Butter will come some times much quicker than others, due generally to differences in temperature. The yield of butterfat may be increased by feeding to increase the milk flow and by feeding to secure stock that carries an ability to yield richer milk, but it is impossible to increase the percentage of fat. Temperature of the cream is of as much importance in hot as in cold weather, the butter is sure to come on time in summer than in winter, but if the temperature is too high the butter will not be so good. A ration must be palatable; unless a cow likes a ration she will not eat it with relish. A cow must like her food in order to produce butterfat economically. A feed that pleases the taste stimulates a great flow of the digestive juices. Cows bred especially for dairy purposes are better for the dairy than any other kind of cows. Usually they have been trained in this direction through many generations and inherit traits that no system of feeding will bring out in any other except in rare cases. A cow may consume more food than she can properly assimilate and the point is to feed just as much as can be made into milk. It can be readily told when the profitable feed limit is reached for then an increase of feed will not show a correspondingly increase in milk. The milking organs must be developed the first time the heifer is in milk if she is to prove a good milker afterwards. This is one reason why the heifer ought to drop her first calf at a time when milk producing food is plentiful so that the flow of milk will be abundant and extend the veins and udder. Hogs are sometimes very useful in the orchard in devouring the wormy fruit and acting as general scavengers, but even this advantage is somewhat offset by the paths that they make under the trees, and by general kneading and compacting of the soil that they do in wet times, leaving it in bad shape to resist drought. There is a continual temptation to put calves or young stock to pasture in the orchard. To the average man it seems impossible that such small stock should do any harm among good-sized trees. But it is nevertheless certain that stock of all kinds are very injurious to all trees, even to groves and forests. It is not altogether due to their injuries to the bark and limbs, but largely to their compacting the soil by continual tramping on it. All trees enjoy a light loose condition of the surface soil, just as all field crops do best when the surface is kept well stirred. Almost without exception the birds seen in the garden are, in the long run, very useful in eating injurious insects. The Robin is omnivorous, the Cuckoo eats hairy caterpillars, the Meadow Lark consumes many insects which would prey upon grass land and the Chipping Sparrow, Scarlet Tanager, Rose-Breasted Grosbeak, House Wren, Cat Bird, Chickadee and other feathered creatures destroy thousands of injurious insect pests when raising their young birds. It, therefore, behooves every boy and every girl, every school teacher, and every citizen to do all they can by precept and example to conserve the birds, and give them all possible protection. The hog grows upon what he eats and drinks. He could not even maintain his condition unless he had water and feed, both of which are necessary. We all know the benefit of pure water to the human race. It must be equally as important to animals. Water is the cheapest ingredient that enters into the production of muscle, bone and growth. It is therefore the duty of every breeder and feeder to provide free access to pure water for growing animals. There are no animals that have greater need for water than hogs, and it should be supplied them in such a way that they would have access to it whenever they thirst for it. Pears should always be picked carefully before fully ripe, without bruising, with the stems on. They should be laid carefully in the picking baskets, which should hold half a bushel or so, and then be hauled to the packing-house or other convenient place, and at once sorted into grades, and either packed or shipped or placed in ripening-house for future shipment. It is usually better, in most cases, especially with summer fruit, to pick the trees over two or three times, although this is not absolutely necessary, and unless the trees are overloaded may not be worth while. When the fruit has not been properly thinned and the trees are overloaded many growers begin to pack the fruit long before it is full grown and send it to the market. By this means the trees are not only relieved somewhat, but the fruit that is left swells to the largest possible bulk; moreover, satisfactory returns are often secured from the early pickings. This method is particularly successful with Clapp's Favorite and Bartlett. Both of these varieties will ripen up tolerably well when they are not much more than half grown. The same principle is successfully used in handling Le Comte and Kiefer pears, but these should be nearer maturity to be good.

HOW TO PROTECT EYES.

Women Should Wear Hats That Shade the Face in Summer.

Strong sunlight causes wrinkles, a fact many women have learned too late to their sorrow. Once thoroughly established, these telltale furrows, the unmistakable imprint of the finger of time, are very difficult to eradicate, requiring constant effort, even great physical discomfort, to entirely erase. A certain amount of sunlight is good for the skin and for the eyes. No one of nature's elements, if used with discretion, will act as a destructive power to the body. The trouble with the sunlight cure is that it is too often taken in overdoses. Notice on a particularly bright day, a day when the sun's rays are almost metallic in their strength, how the eyes of the people you meet are squinted in an effort to alleviate the pressure on the nerves of sight. This squinting process causes innumerable little wrinkles to appear about the eyes and across the bridge of the nose. Holding the face in this strained position easily becomes a habit, and once it is a habit the damage is done. One of the best ways to prevent injury to the eyes as well as a premature mask of age is the wearing of a hat that will shade the eyes. Persons whose work compels them to be much out of doors during the summer months should select a hat with a broad or drooping brim. Despite the fact that much fun has been poked at the bushel basket hat of fashionable moment, it is much more sensible for summer wear than the peach basket variety that snugly up close to the hair and leaves the blazing sun to burn its way across the face and eyes. Women have the added protection of a parasol, a bit of feminine frippery that has its mission of service as well as of beauty. Lacking this recourse, men should select soft hats that turn down over the eyes, wide brimmed sailors or panamas, for a prematurely furrowed face no more becomes a man than it does a woman. In extreme cases use glasses with slightly darkened lenses and observe what a rest they will confer upon the tired sun-strained eyes. In the summer time the eyes should be treated to a daily bath of boracic acid, for dust and particles of dirt are blown into them, and danger to the eyeball ensues. A bath of warm water in which has been dissolved a little boracic acid will work wonders in keeping the eyes in good condition during the summer season.

How to Stop Smoking.

Do not light the first cigar less than half an hour after breakfast. The more difficult this delay may be the more need there is for a cure. The remainder of the day smoke as usual. It is only the first cigar with which we are dealing. Keep this up for a week, then lengthen the interval to an hour for another week, then make it one and a half hours, two, two and a half, and so on. If you have an "all gone" sensation, a longing for something and don't know what sort of feeling, eat an orange or apple or almost any kind of fruit, but don't smoke until the time is up. The nerves, being deprived of their morning stimulant, are crying for nourishment, which nature is hastening to supply through increased appetite to supply digestion. By the time the first cigar is entirely eliminated the cure is effected with no serious disarrangement of the heart or digestive apparatus. It now requires only a moderate will power to make the cure permanent.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

How to Clean White Silk Gloves.

To clean white, delicate silk gloves with fuller's earth, draw them on the hands smoothly and wash your hands and arms literally in the powder, rubbing the hands again precisely as you would with soapsuds; shake off this dirty powder and draw off the gloves. You will find that the hands and arms are sprinkled with dust and grime which have sifted through the gloves. Clean the hands and arms, shake the gloves wrong side out and repeat the operation; twice or three times will be sufficient to clean the gloves. White silk gloves that are washed with soap and water become yellow unless the water is kept at an equable and low temperature. Besides, the water causes them to shrink.

How to Take Raw Eggs.

An invalid who has been compelled to subsist largely on a diet of raw eggs has found several ways of making them more appetizing. When a little lemon juice is squeezed over a raw egg, she says, the flavor reminds her of oysters. For a change she uses orange juice and has the whole beaten to a stiff froth. Raw egg whites she manages to consume without pain by mixing them with the juice of an orange and some chopped or crushed ice. So treated, she says, the taste of the egg is not perceptible.

How to Take Out Grease.

Magnesia will take grease spots out of carpets and rugs. Get a block of it from the drug store for 5 cents, scrape it with a knife into fine powder and lay this on the grease spot, covering it entirely. Rub it in a little, and let it stand overnight. Remove it the next day with a clean whisk broom, and the spot will be gone.

How to Restore Chairs.

To clean and restore the elasticity of cane bottom chairs, turn the chair and with hot water and a sponge saturate the cane work thoroughly. If the chair is dirty use soap. Afterward set the chair to dry out of doors and the seat will be taut as when new.
