Liability Law Upheld.

The constitutionality of the employer's liability law passed by congress in 1908 was upheld by the supreme court of the United States in all cases before it.

The court also decided that state courts might enforce that act when local laws were appropriate.

The opinion held that congress might make regulations between carriers and employes in interstate commerce and that congress did not exceed its powers in the enactment of the law and that the abrogation of the "fellow servants" rule did not impair the validity of the law.

The present law, unlike the previous one condemned, the court held, did not clash with state's rights over interstate commerce. The contention of the railroads that it created a class-railroad carriers, amenable to the law and others not amenable, was also rejected. The court admitted that the state had, to a small extent, passed laws to the same effect, but again declared that congress has passed legislation on the question, the state laws must give way to federal laws.

Vast Throngs Welcome Farley.

Tremendous Ovation to Prelate Honored by Pope on His Way to the Cathedral.

John M. Farley, archbishop of New York, came home a cardinal, to a welcome that will mark an epoch in his life.

After an absence of two months abroad he was the first of America's new princes of the church to reach home shores, and, as such, vast crowds thronged to meet him. Thousands formed two miles along the line of march from the Battery to St. Patrick's Cathedral at Fifth avenue and Fiftieth street, and thousands more, including a choir of 6000 parochial school children, assembled within the edifice to note with reverence his progress to the episcopal throne.

Clad in the brilliant robes of a prince of the church, Cardinal Farley gave an informal reception aboard the Berlin to half a hundred newspaper men. He talked freely for half an hour of his visit to Rome, of his trip home and of his audience with the pope.

"Am I glad to get home?" he echoed, in answer to a question asked simultaneously by half a dozen men. "Indeed, I am glad. I had a splendid trip across and had a long walk on the deck every day, although the passage was very rough."

"I found the pope in splendid health; in fact, I was amazed to see him looking so well. He greatly admires our hospitable land. He described it to me as a land where all nations and all creeds are welcome, and where all share a well-ordered liberty, for the well-being of whom there is universal provision."

The cardinal stepped ashore at the Battery. There was a vast throng waiting and the cheers as the cardinal, unassisted, walked down the gangplank, were loud and long. Cries of "Long live the cardinal," were heard. It was only with great difficulty that a path was cleared through the flower strewn street to the cardinal's waiting victoria, drawn by four white horses and driven by men costumed in the colors of the cardinalate livery.

By the time the procession started 200,000 persons lined the streets leading from the Battery to St. Patrick's Cathedral. Hundreds carried papal and United States flags, which they waved as the cardinal passed.

Broadway was decorated with the American and papal flags and all along the streets there were solid walls of humanity. Representatives of every Catholic order and laymen, as well as a large number of other sectarian organizations in columns acted as an escort. The line of march was up Broadway to Twenty-third street, and thence to Fifth avenue, and thence to St. Patrick's Cathedral.

The cathedral was given over to pupils of the parochial schools, the Sisters and many of the visiting priests, for whom a number of pews in the front of the edifice had been reserved. As the cardinal approached the cathedral the children began chanting the "Te Deum." The ceremonies of the reception were in accordance with those prescribed by the ritual.

As the cardinal passed Wall street the crowds, carried away by their enthusiasm, surged forward into the street, swept aside the police escort and assembled about the cardinal's carriage. Many kissed his ring and others shook hands with him.

To eliminate the possibility of fatigue, the program of services in the cathedral were made brief. The church was decorated with the evergreens and red wreaths, and near the cardinal's throne, behind a cluster of red and white, hung the tapestry given him by the Paulist Fathers.

Bill in Congress to Suspend Duty For Six Months. A suspension for six months of the tariff duty of 25 cents a bushel on potatoes was proposed in a bill introduced by Representative Ayres, of New York.

The United States government figures for the potato crop of this season show a shortage of 50,000,000 bushels under last year and 97,000,000 bushels under the previous year.

State Department Gives Notice That Intervention Will Follow Further Attempts to Nullify Law.

The United States threatened a third armed invasion in Cuba in a note presented to the government of that country by Arthur M. Beaupre, American minister at Havana.

Mr. Beaupre was acting on full telegraphic instructions sent him from the state department.

The last time the United States sent troops to Cuba was in October, 1906. It was recalled here that the belief was freely expressed at that time by both officials and members of congress that the next time American soldiers went to Cuba they would go there to stay. Since that date, however, confidence in the ability of the Cubans to manage their own affairs has greatly increased, and there is little expectation that actual intervention will be necessary.

The United States minister to Cuba, Mr. Beaupre, reported to the state department that, in defiance of a decree issued by President Gomez, forbidding officers of the army and the rural guard to participate in politics in Cuba, the soldiers had practically taken control of the Cuban elections. The situation, Minister Beaupre said, was regarded as most serious.

This situation is an outgrowth of the agitation begun last fall by the association of the veterans of the war for Cuban independence. The veterans began by demanding the dismissal from office of all men who had been identified with the old Spanish regime in 1895-96, and the appointment of members of their organization to office wherever possible.

The campaign has now so far progressed that officers of the army and the rurales guards are being drawn into it contrary to existing law. The veterans in return are demanding that the law prohibiting the participation of army officers and the rurales in politics be made a dead letter and are defying the Gomez administration on the issue.

The state department's note, directed sent by President Taft, to the Cuban government, follows:

"The situation in Cuba, as now reported, causes grave concern to the government of the United States.

"That the laws intended to safeguard free republican government shall be enforced and not defied is obviously essential to the maintenance of law, order and stability indispensable to the status of the Republic of Cuba, in the continued well-being of which the United States has always evinced and cannot escape a vital interest.

"The president of the United States therefore looks to the president and government of Cuba to prevent a threatened situation which would compel the government of the United States, much against its desires, to consider what measure it must take in pursuance of the obligation of its relations to Cuba."

Wire and Mail Service For U. S. Acquisition of the telegraph lines of the United States by the government, at an approximate cost of $250,000,000, and their operation as part of the postal service, will be recommended to congress in a short time by Postmaster General Hitchcock.

For a year or more Mr. Hitchcock has had this recommendation under consideration. After a thorough study of the operation of government-controlled government lines and postal-telegraph systems of foreign countries he has decided to urge the proposition upon congress.

It is not Mr. Hitchcock's purpose to recommend the acquisition of telephone lines, except, possibly, in instances where they are operated as telegraph lines and are an integral part of definite telegraph systems.

The latest census figures available indicate that about 100,000 people are connected with the telegraph companies of the United States. The appraised value of the systems proposed to be acquired would be purely conjectural, but it was said it would approximate $250,000,000. The experts who have figured on the proposition are of the opinion that existing telegraph rates could be reduced at least one-third to the public and yet make the investment in, and operation of, the lines profitable to the government.
