Pet Ferret Attacks Baby. A pet ferret, which had been allowed to play about the cradle of her baby, attacked the five-months-old son of Mrs. Carrie Cobb at Grafton, W. Va. Before the mother discovered what the beast was doing it had eaten one cheek, partly devoured one eyeball and had punctured the back of the child's himself, two policemen of higher rang head ,as well as a vein in the child's nostril. The baby will probably die.

Horse's Kick Kills Baby.

Kicked by one of the heavy horses attached to a local brewery wagon, the sixteen-months-old daughter of Felice Dilagrotti, of West Berwick, Pa., was instantly killed.

The child's neck was broken and her skull fractured at the base of the brain. No one saw the baby until she was under the horse's heels.

Rose, Webber and Vallon Declare Becker Ordered Rosenthal Killed and Promised Protection.

Lieutenant Charles Becker was arrested in New York city and held by Judge Mulqueen for murder in the to her mother, Mrs. Isabel Barree. first degree, after Jack Rose, Becker's collector for gambling money, had home of Charles Leitzel and left a boy baby. confessed that the police lieutenant had ordered to have Herman Rosenthal killed.

The arrest and arraignment of Becker followed swiftly after Rose's confession and the confessions of Bridgey Webber and Harry Vallon, who corroborated Rose in every important particular. District Attorney Whitman, questioning the three purisoners for four hours, pounded one against the other until they all broke down and said Rosenthal was shot down in front of the Metropole by a hired gang because Becker wanted it done. The grand jury acted speedily. With their confessions warm on their lips, Rose, Webber and Vallon went before the grand jury, put their hands on the of Wilson and a less cost in living. Bible and swore that they had told the whole truth.

senthal had to be put out of the way, and that the men who did the job had nothing to fear, because he (Becker) was a power in the police department.

So Rose went out and spread the word that the strong arm commander said that Rosenthal must be killed. He dropped hints here and there. He did more. He sent for big Jack Selig and held a conference with that notorious gang leader of the East Side. The four men who pistoled Rosenthal by this arrangement were Whitey Lewis, Lefty Lewis, Dago Frank and "Gypsy Blood." Rose admits that he rounded them up and saw that they were poised for the crime. It was over the phone, while Rose was making preparations for a hurried trip down to the Tenderloin:

"Oh, don't worry; I'll protect you There won't be much fuss over this." A few minutes later, in the shadow

"Don't you be worried over this matter. I'll see to it that none of the boys HARRY KELLER, Attorney. get into jail."

The bald gambler, who included in his confession a frank statement that for a long time he had been collecting money for gambling, not only for Lieu- ed, w tenant Becker, but for officers higher up in the police department, swears he did not know that murder was to be done the night his hired thugs met at Bridgey Webber's and sat there waiting for the signal that Rosenthal, the squealer, was about to leave the Hotel Metropole. Rose says he knew something was to be done to Rosenthal, but thing was to be done to Rosenthal, but that he would have flinched from the task if he had known that pistols were to be secured by bond and mortgage on the best of the secured by bond and mortgage on the secured by bond and mortgage of the secured by bond and by bond a to be used against the informer. Bridgey Webber, the host of the murder conspirators, backed up Rose, and told of what was said when he and Rose met Becker up town a few days before the murder. Becker was hot for the killing. As for Harry Vallon, his confession was the least important of the three. But, like Webber, he supported Rose in substantial particulars. Denying that he was present when the murder was committed, Vallon admits that he was at the Metropole a few minutes previously and that he was cognizant of the arrangements. Rose said also that Becker had told him that $2,400,000 was the yearly police graft from gambling, disorderly houses and other forms of blackmail.

Rose swore that Becker had confided to him that the loot was divided among four police officials, Becker and a minor official who does not wear

"Jack," said Becker, "the rake-off is so good that my own share was $600, 000, and the others got the same." Becker's collector, having handled a good deal of the money himself, does not think that Becker or any individual pocketed $600,000 in any one year, but that Becker and his connections were distributing agents and that the $600,- 000 each received was subdivided. There is pjust one chance for Becker to save himself. The district attorney may conclude to deal leniently with the lieutenant if he can and will tell profits of blackmail.

were poised for the crime. It was for this purpose that the gray car of Libby was used. Rose is not sure that they escaped in the gray car, but he points to Becker's promises of protection as a proof that the murderers did get clear of the police.

The general manager of the killing, Jack Rose, called Becker up by phone a few minutes after Rosenthal was dead on the sidewalk in front of the Metropole. He told Becker that it was a horrible thing. He said it was more than he expected. He was frightened clear to the heart, and he was afraid to stir without a word of confidence from his master. And Becker said over the phone, while Rose was mak-
