Ancient Prophecy Fulfilled But Puzzle Concerning the Earliest Celtic People Remains.

The quantity of pure gold ornaments found in Ireland and in the Celtic parts of Scotland is one of the puzzles of the civilization of the ancient Celtic. peoples, says the duke of Argyll. Where did they obtain enough gold to make the twisted wire, the bracelets with the open space between the spoonlike ends? Did they obtain the metal by barter with strangers, and, if so, what could they give in exchange for so much bullion?

In Sutherland, of late years, gold in tiny scales has been found in the sands. It is strange that the objects in gold are usually large. Few small ornaments in this most precious metal have been recovered. I knew of one hoard recovered, and, although the legend that it existed had currency among the people for some time, it had tained by accident. A great boulderstone lay on grass-grown ground at the bottom of a valley.

It had probably been dislodged by some volcanic upheaval from a cliff stood "on end," and there was a tale connected with it, but the story was treated as an old wife's "havers," and no man had dug to find out the truth.

Agriculture, however, began to be systematically pursued, and all land at low level was required. Superstition among the crofters made them avow that the concealed gold would never be found until the son of a stranger came. Powder was utilized to blast away the big boulder-stone. Plowing had already been undertaken around

The plowman waited at some distance with his team until the blast had taken effect. When the pieces of rock were removed the plow was drawn over the site. It was a recently-employed English boy who guided the plow. Three solid gold bracelets were found on the spot where the boulder had once been. Thus an English boy fulfilled the prophecy of the story of long ago.

THE YEARICK-HOY REUNION .- One of the largest crowds that has ever attended the annual reunion of the Yearick-Hoy families assembled at Hecla park last Thursday on the occasion of their eleventh annual gathering. The executive committee held a brief session in the morning and at twelve o'clock the well filled baskets were opened and all present enjoyed the bountiful dinner.

A general meeting was held at 1.30 o'clock. The invocation was pronounced by Dr. Ambrose M. Schmidt. A hymn was sung by the assemblage after which Rev. E. H. Zachman, of Howard, offered prayer and Rev. W. E. Harr, of Lock Haven, delivered an inspiring address. Remarks were also made by Rev. Hoover, of Hublersburg. Reports were read by secretary J. Henry Wetzel and treasurer Albert Spayd, and the meeting closed with prayer by Rev. Z. A. Yearick, of Shamokin.

The executive committee is composed of the following: Rev. Z. A. Yearick, D. D., president and historian; N. H. Yearick, vice president; Hon. J. John L. Holmes et al to Curtis H. Nei- Native Born Generally Lose It If Educated Abroad-Peculiarity of Negroes of Jamaica.

The Belfast brogue, it is pointed out by a correspondent, is the most pronounced in the whole of Ireland, for the vowels are shorter than in Cork, Mrs. Perry Woolford is among the sick this and the hard consonants harder than in Glasgow. In Dublin, where they think they speak the most perfect English in the world-they call it Dublid -there is little or no accent, only an inflection, which always betrays the speaker's origin. Dublin people are counted affected and Anglicised in Cork and Galway.

The Irish accent, as a matter of fact, is very elusive. Irishmen who have been at school in England generally lose it in their youth. Parnell lost his at Cambridge, and it never came back to him. On the other hand there are men who have never been in Ireland who might have come straight from the quays of Cork harbor.

In Jamaica there are a large number of negroes with the brogue-a fact that is supposed to be due to their ancestors' association with an Irish regiment quartered in the island.

Strange Funeral Customs.

Curious customs were observed at the funeral, at Ilford, England, of the Russian gypsy child, Mark Cedre. The boy was dressed in his best clothes, with a new red hat and shoes of the same color to match, the shoes being beautifully embroidered and ornamented with brightly-colored beads. Each mourner placed silver and copper coins in the coffin, and the father put some bread and meat with the money. The father ceremoniously poured claret over the coffin before it was lowered into the grave. Afterward more of the wine was sprinkled over the coffin. During the afternoon the ceremony of "trisn" was observed, the mourners sitting round a fire and making incantations for the spirit of the departed. The first of a series of funeral feasts was held six days after the ceremony.

Heaven and Hand-Organs.

Early in the last century an old Forfarshire (Scotland) lady installed in the bedroom corridor of her castle an automatic organ. It was her delight of a morning to wake her guests with its strains. But it was not the delight of one of them, Miss Sophia Johnstone of Hilton, to be so awakened, and she said so. "Ye dinna like the music? Ye shouldna say that, Sophy," said her hostess. "Ye'll no win to heaven an' ye dinna take pleasure in music; it's to be all music there, ye know."

"'Deed." said the incorrigible one. "an' heaven's a place wi' auld wives playin' on hand-organs at six o'clock in the mornin' it's no' the place I tak'
