

MIXED METAPHOR.

Choice Bunch of "Bulls" From the House of Commons.

There is no place like the house of commons for a "nice derangement of metaphors." It will be a long time before we have a "mixture" equal to the outburst of an effusive orator who said, "The British lion, whether it is roaming the deserts of India or climbing the forests of Canada, will not draw in its horns or retire into its shell."

It recalls the famous "bull" made by Sir William Hart-Dyke, the Unionist ex-minister, who caused uproarious laughter in the house of commons one day by remarking: "The right honorable gentleman has caught big fish in his time. He has gone to the top of the tree to find them."

Alluding to an item of £2,000,000 in the army estimates one year, a certain member described it as "a flea bite in the ocean," while another, advocating an increase in the European troops employed in India, remarked, "You may depend upon it, sir, the pale face of the British soldier is the backbone of the Indian army."

An Irish member speaking of suicide said, "The only way to stop it is to make it a capital offense, punishable with death." It was the same member who assured "the house that "as long as Ireland was silent under her wrongs England was deaf to her cries," while it was during a debate on the scandal of packed juries during the Irish troubles that a member in support of the government exclaimed, "By trial by jury have I lived, and by the blessing of God, with trial by jury I will die."

There was a wild howl of delight, too, when some prosy member was careless enough to remark, "The time has come and it is rapidly arriving," which is equal to the cry of the member who wished a motion was "at the bottom of the bottomless pit."—London Tit-Bits.

WHAT WAR MEANS.

Wanton Destruction May Mark the Progress of an Army.

"All is fair in love and war," runs the old saying, and Mr. E. A. Vizetelly in his volume of reminiscences, "My Days of Adventure," proves the truth of it. Referring to the appearance of the railway station at Nantes during the Franco-German war, he says:

"Never since have I seen anything resembling it. A thousand panes of glass belonging to windows or roofing had been shivered to atoms. Every mirror in either waiting or refreshment rooms had been pounded to pieces, every gilt frame broken into little bits. The clock lay about in small fragments; account books and printed forms had been torn to scraps; partitions, chairs, tables, benches, boxes, nests of drawers, had been hacked, split, broken, reduced to mere strips of wood; the large stores were overturned and broken, and the marble refreshment counter, some thirty feet long and previously one of the features of the station, now strewn the floor in particles, suggesting gravel. It was indeed an amazing sight, the more amazing as no such work of destruction could have been accomplished without extreme labor."

"When we returned to the inn for dinner I asked some questions. "Who did it?" "The first German troops that came here," was the answer. "Why did they do it? Was it because your men had cut the telegraph wires and destroyed some of the permanent way?"

"Oh, no! They expected to find something to drink in the refreshment room, and when they discovered that everything had been taken away they set about breaking the fixtures."

Steam Power. The name of the first man to discover the power of steam will never be known. As early as 180 B. C., at Alexandria, Egypt, we hear of "Hero's engine," a sort of steam using engine. From the time of Hero to the seventeenth century the subject is unheard of. About 1601, Giovanni Battista della Porta wrote a treatise on the steam engine. The great name in the history of steam and its application is James Watt, 1763.

A Wonderful Gorge. Yosemite valley, in the southern part of the Yosemite National park, is a great gorge about seven miles long and three-fourths of a mile wide, with a level park like meadow in its center. The great cliffs which form the wall of the valley rise almost vertically to a height of about 3,000 feet, and in many places are beautiful waterfalls which have a vertical drop of from 600 to 900 feet.

Our Daughters. "I say, dad, I've just accepted Charles Brown. He's in the drawing room, and if you've a minute to spare you might pop in and see him and talk it over, but please be quick; we've got to rush out and see about the banns."—London Opinion.

Blow Little Softened. "We won't discharge you, Mr. Perkins," said the manager. "We shall allow you to tender your resignation." "Tendering it won't make it one bit the less tough," gloomily returned the man who was laid off.—Boston Transcript.

No Joking Matter. "How much does Impeccable owe you?" "A cool thousand." "Ah! Cool, but not collected, eh?"—Boston Transcript.

Doing nothing is a lesson in doing ill.—German Proverb.

MULTIPLE PERSONALITY.

One Englishwoman Who Showed Five Distinct Natures.

Rare cases of true multiple personality are known to have occurred and are of extraordinary interest. The most famous is that of "Miss Beauchamp"—the real name has always most properly been withheld—which was carefully studied by Dr. Morton Prince. By intricate steps he arrived at the conviction that in her case no fewer than five distinct personalities could be traced. The most vivid of all was the one who called herself "Sally."

The normal Miss Beauchamp was a somewhat neurotic woman, the constant prey of slight ailments and without much zest in life. After a nervous shock Sally suddenly became able to take possession of her from time to time, at first with apparent difficulty and then, as it seemed, whenever she pleased. When Sally was dominant Miss Beauchamp's whole nature was changed. She became lively, irresponsible, fond of all the violent exercises which the normal woman disliked, exuberantly healthy and different from Miss Beauchamp in every respect. She could not explain herself, but protested that she had "always been here," but could not get control, and one of the most wonderful and best attested facts in this mysterious case is that she confidently asserted her memory of events which occurred when the real Miss Beauchamp was in her cradle.

For Miss Beauchamp, the co-tenant with her of the same body, Sally had the most intense dislike, never speaking of her except with contempt and doing all she could to cause her harm and annoyance. Miss Beauchamp had a special horror of insects and reptiles, and Sally was accustomed to gratify her spite by collecting frogs, toads and spiders and dispatching them to what the inadequacy of language compels us to call herself.

Miss Beauchamp detested walking, so Sally, when she was dominant, would go for a long tramp after carefully leaving all her money behind, and then, when she was ten miles or more from home, would suddenly disappear and, allowing the original Miss Beauchamp to assume control, leave the unfortunate woman to make her way back as best she could.—London Globe.

Delicately Put.

"The Mexicans may be a lawless and bloodthirsty lot, but when it comes to putting disagreeable thoughts in a delicate way they've got us of the north faded to a dull monochrome," said an American just up from Sanfillo. "I was recently going through the penitentiary there—on a visit, if you please—and overtook a party of Mexican visitors. A young girl among them was questioning a convict through the bars of his cell."

"And how long, may I ask, before you anticipate returning home, sir? I heard her ask in the tone she might have used to a chance acquaintance at the seashore. Fancy an American talking to a convict that way."—Washington Star.

WARS.

Written for the WATCHMAN by WILLIAM T. FITZGERALD.

Now Pruss and Frank in fierce array For conquest or for glory, Renew the scenes of yesterday, Grown old in song and story.

While each in turn have had their day And Generals Nap and Blucher, Who showed a great capacity Their followers to butcher.

Brave Belgium's fields are red again, Her gallant sons lie bleeding, Where Teuton hordes on hill and plain, Their warrior ranks are speeding.

The Ulian meets the Franco charge With bloody spear and sabre, While deathly missiles small and large Mows down both friend and neighbor.

In battle fierce the foemen reel, The world looks on with wonder, Where Briton stands with ready steel, And Krupp's belch forth their thunder.

And whistled Russ the silence breaks, With Kurd and Cossack yelling; The troubled throne of Hapsburg shakes, With fire and sword compelling.

Each Nation raise the bloody hand, And ask from God his blessing, To crown a work already damned, And Nations laws transgressing.

God grant that we who still are free, May live a peaceful Nation; And have no Kings or Kaisers to Suppress our civilization.

Big Ballot for November.

The official ballot for the November election will be a voluminous affair. It will contain eight columns and measure twenty by twenty-six inches. A specimen of the ballot has been received at the County Commissioners' office from Secretary of the Commonwealth, Robert McAfee.

The ballot is 20 by 26 inches in size and contains the names of the persons nominated at the primaries on May 29, and to be voted for on Nov. 3. The ballot contains eight columns, including a general party column for Democrat, Republican, Washington, Socialist, Bull Moose, Roosevelt Progressive, Prohibition and Keystone party candidates.

The letter of Secretary McAfee explains that the ballot contains only the list of the primary nominations and that other nominations may be made hereafter by nomination papers, also that withdrawals may be filed up to fifteen days before election and that vacancies may be filled after that date.

The printing of the ballots will be deferred until all corrections are made and a specimen ballot will be forwarded fourteen days before election.

Summer is Fading.

The summer is fading. As the moments they go by, Oh, summer, lovely summer, I wish you would always stay.

The birds they sing so sweetly, And flowers bloom so gay, Oh summer, lovely summer, I wish you would always stay.

My heart does linger with you, As summer days go by, Oh summer, lovely summer, I wish you would always stay.
