The Smashing Offensive of Kaiser's Troops Make Headway on Line In Belgium.

Driving forward with increasing fury, and battling more violently than at any time since they made their stand along the Aisne river and then swept forward through Belgium, the Germans hammered the defense of the allied forces along the line from Lille to the coast and at the end of the day's fighting had advanced their battle tront at many places. The fighting was fiercely waged on both sides. The artillery of the invaders kept up a continual fire on the positions of the French and British rorces and the latter were compelled to evacuate many of their positions. The most important gains were made on Belgian soil, where the Gercuring and lighting the tree. If any so mans recaptured Dixmude, held by desire they may send their donations to the Belgian and British forces for the past several days. Here the kaiser's troops, by a series of desperate attacks, forced the allied forces to retire from the town for the first time in more than a week. They hold a commanding position along the Yser river.

Dixmude is in the northwestern end of the Flanders battle line, which tribute at least one cluster, and some runs southeasterly to Ypres, in Belgium, and then southerly to Arras, in France. The French claim that north of Soissons, on the center of the battle line, their offensive continues to gain ground and that their advance in that region is progressing favorably. To the west of Vailly, on the west bank of the Aisne, successes crowned the efforts of the French troops to gain, but according to the official state

"We still hold our positions on the approaches to this town, along the canal from Nieuport to Ypres, which has been firmly occupied. The fighting was very hot at these places.

"The British troops, attacked also at several points, succeeded everywhere in stopping the enemy.

"On the rest of the front the general situation shows no change, with the exception of slight progress by our forces to the north of Soissons and in the region to the west of Vailly, on the right bank of the Aisne. Outside of these two points the state of the weather permitted only minor engagements, which resulted successfully for us. Particularly at Coincourt, north of the forest of Parroy, on the Franco-German frontier, eighteen miles east of Nancy, we routed a detachment of the enemy."

German Cruiser Destroyed.

The German cruiser Emden, which has been preying upon British commerce in the Orient ever since the beginning of the war in Europe, has been destroyed by the Australian warship Sydney, in the bay of Bengal.

This announcement was given out officially by the British admiralty in London.

The Emden was driven ashore upon one of the Cocos islands, or Keeling islands, in the Indian ocean. The loss of life on the Emden is reported to have been heavy. The casualties on the Sydney were three men killed and fifteen wounded.

All possible assistance is now being given to the survivors of the Emden by the various ships which have been dispatched to the scene of the fight.

700 Horses Die In Fire.

Seven hundred horses on the British steamer Rembrandt, which caught fire off the port of Norfolk, Va., have been burned to death and their bodies were thrown overboard.

The captain of the ship says that he believes the vessel was purposely set on fire, declaring that Germans had boasted that the steamer would be blown up before it reached France. The horses were intended for the use of the allies.

The loss to the vessel itself by the fire will be slight.
