As American Soldiers Withdrew the Constitutionalists Took Possession

Vera Cruz, Mex., Nov. 24. - The American forces of occupation evacuated Vera Cruz, after having been in possession of the city for a period of seven months.

The withdrawal of the Americans, under General Frederick Funston, progressed without disorder. As the Americans withdrew Mexican Consti-

There was little enthusiasm, tle excitement and no trouble of au, kind. The streets of the city were filled with a mob of boys and men carrying Mexican flags. The cheering was limited.

Fast on the heels of the retiring Americans Constitutionalist troops marched to the center of the city, the marching music of their bugles filling the air. The bells of one church rang out.

The abandonment of the American positions began at 9 o'clock in the morning, when the detached post of marines at El Tejar, where they have been guarding the water works since last April, boarded a train for the run of one hour into the city. The Mexican lines at that time had made no attempt to advance. This was for the reason that between El Tejar and Vera Cruz there is a railway junction, and General Funston had asked the Constitutionalist commander not to move forward any of his trains, for the reason that to do so would block the line. The Mexicans waited until all the Americans from El Tejar had

The circling line of American outposts, from Vergara, on the north beach, to a point on the south beach, began moving forward as soon as the detachment from El Tejar arrived at Los Cocos, a suburb. Thus the line became shortened, and there then began a sweeping movement directly across the city until the line of Americans came to a stop along the Francisco canal and Cinco de Miyo street. running at right angles to the canal.

Only two blocks behind was the advance line of the Constitutionalists, the great white plague. closing in as the Americans withdrew, but always holding a distance of about two blocks. Turkey Explains Firing on U. S. Ship, of rare vitality and genuine human interest. The Turkish government has vol untarily explained to the government of the United States, through Ambassador Mongenthau, that the shots fired toward the launch of the American cruiser Tennessee were intended merely as the customary warning that the port of Smyrna was mined 58-47-6t and closed to navigation.

Eight-Year-Old Boy Slain. Albert Kraft, eight years old, was found strangled to death in a culvert under the Reading railroad tracks at Fifty-sixth street and Gibson avenue, Philadelphia. The spot is a lonely one, and is only a hundred feet north of Bartram's Gardens. This branch of the Reading is known as the old Chester division and few trains pass over it.

The body was discovered by Anderson Groom, a Reading brakeman, who was on the way to his home. Deep finger prints were found in the boy's neck and his tongue was protruding. Albert's blue bloomers were found several feet from the body.

Under the stone floor of the culvert runs a sewer. The murderer evidently had tried to thrust the law into this. Stones had been dislodged, making an opening into the sewer. It was obvious that the boy had fought desperately to avoid being wedged through the opening. When he was found only his feet were in the sewer. Tumbled stones bore witness to hi sefforts to drag himself out.

The above appraisement has been approved by the Court and if no exceptions be filed thereto within thirty days the real estate therein described will be awarded to Maude M. Rishel, widow, upon payment of value fixed in excess of $300.00.
